QUAKERS WERE OPPOSED TO SLAVERY

All the anti-slavery movements of early date were launched by religious sects. The first was of going by the Quakers, but it was out of common decency, was the work and never assumed a violent form. Nor did the Southern regard the Quakers as enemies.
The Quakers spent much money, not in helping slaves escape illicitly from their masters, but to transport free negroes and in bringing suits, where necessary, to guarantee freedom to slaves already manumitted. They preached emancipation, lived, hundreds of them, in Virginia and North Carolina in the and friendliness with their slave-holding neighbors.
But the South did not long on the efforts of other sects being sincere. When it was attacked, not slavery was attacked, but southern customs, family life, morals, there was instant resentment, which ripened into hate after the slave rebellions.—Naught's Monthly.

VOICE SPED OVER SEAS

Radiotelephone Successful

Business Heads of Two Lands Quietly Lift Receivers and New Era Opens

Banks in $6,000,000 Deals; Pacific Coast on Line in Short Time

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—The English accent and the voice of New York pealed each other in midair and ether today, in more than forty different conversations, marking the successful inauguration of the first trans-Atlantic radiotelephone service on a commercial scale.

In less than an hour, flying on waves with the speed of light, business to the extent of more than $6,000,000 had been transacted by persons, a news agency had received its first commercial radiotelephone dispatch sent from London, and business men and others were waiting in the wires.

Thereafter, from before noon until 2 o'clock in the evening in New York and 1 o'clock in the night at London, the line was busy, with business, comment on the times and the weather, and occasional staccato bursts of static.

The line was officially opened at 8:44 a.m. when President Walter S. Gifford of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company took down the receiver and asked to be connected, with Sir G. Evelyn V. Murray of the British General Postoffice.

But a minute later, the two were talking, seated some 3500 miles apart, with high seas, Western England, New England and 6000 miles of "circuit mile" between them.

STATIC BAD AT FIRST

It was the least suspicious conversation of the day. For despite its commercial significance, static, the intermittent crackling of radiated speech, roared and spit, and the waves of talk from London came through the air over the Atlantic near Houlton, Me., to American receiving station.

During the five minutes, frequent word repetitions were necessary. A New York apparently suffering from a bad case of a short-wave sandwich, such as helped carry the New York voices eastward.

After half an hour, sending was much clearer, conversers reported, as engineers explained that virtually all of the inconvenience could be laid to line characteristic pressure on the coast of Houlton.

Newspapers and the Associated Press were the first to avail themselves of the new means of communication. Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, was called to by Geoffrey Dawson, editor of the London Times at 8:36 a.m., seven minutes after the inauguration had been ended and President Gifford, among reporters, photogra

HOUSE BARS 'BIG NAVY'

Coolidge Backed on Cruisers

Authorize Work on Dirigible by Voting of $200,000 as Construction Fund

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) President Coolidge was triumphant today in the battle with the "big-navy" forces in Congress seeking to overturn his navy policy.

On the question of abandoning construction of the remaining three of eight light cruisers already authorized, in accord with his recommendation, the President was sustained by the House in passing the navy appropriation bill.

One hundred and sixty-one members voted in favor of a $450,000 appropriation to begin construction of the three cruisers at once, and 185 members rallied to the support of the President and defeated the proposal.

The only respect in which the House overruled the President was in relation to the construction of the two authorized dirigible airships, which Mr. Coolidge desired postponed. By a vote of 185 to 105 the House adopted an amendment appropriating $200,000 to begin construction of one of the airships.

AMITY VIEW WINS

The President was indebted for his victory to the appeal of the pacific note he sounded in explaining his refusal to include in the budget an estimate for construction of the three cruisers. He urged that construction of the cruisers "would not be in keeping with our attitude toward" the disarmament negotiations instituted by the League of Nations, in which we are now participating.

Party lines went to smash in the struggle, which also presented the spectacle of nearly all the Republican leaders, including Speaker Longworth, Ohio, and Majority Leader Tilson, Connecticut, arrayed against the President. Mr. Longworth, who was on the floor at the time, interjected himself into the debate with a fling at the Coolidge navy policy that was hailed in some quarters as the keynote of the Speaker's expected candidacy for the Republican nomination for President.

"While under the treaty," said Mr. Longworth, "we owe an obligation to our colleagues in the treaty not to exceed the 5-5-3 ratio provided, we owe an equally great obligation to the American people to see that we do not go below the ratio."

The Democratic leadership rallied to the support of the revolt against the White House with great glee. Minority Leader Garrett, Tennessee, Dewit sardonically on the break between the President and the Republican leaders and it was the satisfac

Plans to Grow Mexico Rubber Discontinued

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7.—Harvey F. Firestone has abandoned his effort to grow rubber in the State of Chiapas, it was learned today. The American Chamber of Commerce has a message from the manufacturer which says that while soil and climate were found favorable to rubber production, "other conditions" were not favorable.

Firestone bought the property, which was jungle land, two years ago when several American companies investigated the Chiapas situation. He was the only purchaser.

AGREEMENT REACHED ON RADIO BILL

Compromise Measure Will be Submitted Tuesday by Conferees of Both Houses

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Complete agreement between Senate and House conferees on radio legislation became assured today.

The conferees after tentatively settling most of the controversial points, instructed Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, and Representative White, Republican, Maine, to draft the compromise bill with a view to submitting it for final approval next Tuesday.

The tentative agreement provides that a commission appointed by the President shall have complete authority over allocation of wave lengths and licensing of broadcast stations for a period of one year.

The Department of Commerce will retain administrative control of radio from the start and at the end of a year will take over original jurisdiction over wave-length allocations and broadcasting staticns. Thereafter provision would be made for appeals from rulings of the Department of Commerce

The compromise is fairly satisfactory both to the Senate conferees who have held out for commission control independent of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, and to the House conferees who favored the continuation of Department of Commerce control.

Bill to Control Diamond Output Being Planned

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP) — Barnato Brothers, the diamond magnates, announced that they have received information that the South African government intends to introduce a bill at the coming session of the Legislature to control the alluvial output with the object of stabilizing the diamond trade.

Recently it was disclosed that the alluvial diggers in South Africa were producing large quantities of diamonds, and it was feared that soon diamonds would be so plentiful and the prices so low as to seriously interfere with the market.

The alluvial land from which diamonds are being taken consists of an area of about 100 square miles in Kimberley, Cape Colony.

WALES JILTS HORSE AGAIN

Pair Part Company Just Wrong Side of Hurdle and Prince Sprains Wrist and Watch

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Although the Prince of Wales was supposed to have decided to abandon steeplechasing, he indulged in the sport again today—and was thrown from his horse. His left wrist was badly sprained, but he continued the hunt.

The Westminster Gazette, describing the mishap, says it occurred when he was taking a difficult hedge near Great Dalby, Leicestershire. The horse stumbled and fell on the wet ground. Wales sprang clear and the horse galloped away to be captured later. The Prince's wrist watch was smashed. While seemingly in pain, he continued with the riders.

Several others who participated in the hunt also were thrown. The Duchess of Westminster, one of the best horsewomen in England, somersaulted when her horse fell, but she suffered no injuries. Capt. Gilbert Greenall's horse stumbled and broke its neck, but the captain escaped without injury. Capt. Hornby, however, broke his arm and collarbone when he was thrown.

Less than a month ago, while hunting with the Quorn hounds, also near Great Dalby, the Prince of Wales was unhorsed. when his favorite hunter fell at a formidable hedge. The Prince was thrown over the horse's head, but fell clear of the animal and kept hold of the reins. In a moment he had remounted and, covered with mud, continued to follow the chase.

Eight Drown in Shipwreck on Northern Coast

VICTORIA (B. C.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Eight lives were lost in the wreck of the Jessie Island No. 4, on the west side of Pachena Point on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The vessel left Chemainus on December 28, 1926, for Barkley Sound. The trip ordinarily takes thirty-six hours. When apprehension was felt for the vessel's safety, the lifeboat put out from Bamfield. The lifeboat crew discovered the ship piled up on the rocks of Pachena Point, which is the center of that portion of the coast known as "the graveyard of the Pacific."

The vessel is owned by R. Tabata Company of Cancouver. A diligent search for the ship's crew was carried out by the live-saving crew, but no sign of them was found.

GUADALUPE IN RIOT TO SEE VIRGIN

Thousands in Mexico Fight to Reach Spot Where Boy Says Saint Appeared

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 7. (AP)—The "Virgin of Guadalupe has come back to earth again. I've just seen her," exclaimed a little boy yesterday rushing indoors to his mother in the town of Guadalupe where the shrine of Mexico's patron saint is situated.

The news spread rapidly. Within a few hours more than 10,000 persons thronged the section of the town where the boy lived, eager for a glimpse of the virgin. The crowd blockaded the streets and trolley car passage was suspended. Numerous slight injuries occurred in the crush and the entire town was set in an uproar.

The authorities became apprehensive as more excited thousands tried to clave, lunge and shove their way to the spot where the boy declared the virgin had appeared and that, as proof, her image remained outlined on a near-by tree. Resorting to the customary Mexican method of dispersing mobs, the officials called on the fire department. The firemen diligently played their hose on the crowd, which broke up after being thoroughly soaked.

Investigators failed to find any image of the virgin on a tree, but the little boy firmly maintains that he saw her.

WAR BRINGS TENSE DAY

Borah Demand for Warship Removal Stirs Kellogg to Stinging Reply

BY KYLE D. PALMER
"Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Wars and rumors of wars, growing out of the Nicaraguan situation, occupied the attention of the White House, the State Department and the Senate today. The day's developments may be summarized as follows:

(1.) President Coolidge at the White House reiterated that the sending of a formidable naval force into Nicaraguan waters is to protect American lives and interests and quoted in that connection the letter of instruction which William M. Evarts, Secretary of State, sent to Foster, the American Minister to Mexico, in 1878, declaring that the paramount duty of a government is the protection of its citizens and their property, whether that duty be performed by treaty or by military force.

(2.) Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations for the second time since the present controversy began, broke away from the administration. After an interview with President Coolidge he declared that "we have no business in Nicaragua" and that this government had no right to recognize the Diaz government of Nicaragua.

ISSUE DODGED

(3.) Secretary Kellogg, replying to this statement, declared that "Senator Borah is absolutely wrong," contending that the duty of this country clearly was to recognize what it regards as the constitutional and what is the de facto government of Nicaragua.

(4.) Questions propounded at the White House and the State Department as to the responsibility of Mexico for aiding and equipping the Sacasa rebellion produced diplomatic rebuffs. Secretary Kellogg, however, when asked if it was not known that Mexico has been supplying Sacasa with arms replied, "Everybody knows where the ships came from and where they landed in Nicaragua with arms."

(5.) President Coolidge was deluged with telegrams of inquiry from private individuals and from various American publications, many of them extremely critical in tone, asking him to justify the sending of naval forces and marines to Nicaragua.

(6.) The European press generally, a considerable section of the Latin-American press and a number of antiadministration American newspapers continued to denounce President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg as pursuing an "imperialistic" policy, "intervening" in the Nicaraguan civil war, and assuming a protectorate over that country, and engaging in "blundering diplomacy." None of these critics mentioned the fact that the Bryan-Chamorro treaty of 1916 ceded to this country for the construction of the prospective Nicaragua canal, a considerable area of land including islands in the Caribbean and a site for a naval base on the Pacific, all under the treaty, to be "subject exclusively to the laws and sovereign authority of the United States" when it takes possession.

MEXICO BOGEY RISES

There were minor developments also and a sketchy historical review at the White House of the facts leading up to the present situation. Incidentally, a story was printed widely that the real purpose of the naval concentration in the Caribbean is to threaten Mexico in the hope of scaring that country out of attempting to confiscate American property. This latter story is regarded as fantastic because if the United States desires to inflict punishment on the Mexican government for confiscating private property of aliens, it has only to withdraw its recognition from the Calles government and lift the embargo on the shipment of arms to Mexican revolutionists. It is true, however, that the presence of so large an American naval force in the Caribbean will help to sustain in Latin America this country's prestige which the Mexican government has been seeking to destroy.

The dispute between Secretary Kellogg and Senator Borah as to the rectitude of this government's course in recognizing the government of President Diaz actually is the one on which is founded the more serious differences in American opinion. This difference finds its basis in varying interpretations to be placed on the treaty of 1923 which Secretary Hughes induced the five Central American republics to join, the United States inferentially giving its indorsement to the compact and its assurances of help in making it effective. This treaty, in brief, provided that no one of the five countries would recognize a government set up by revolution and force of arms in another one.

There is no dispute over the fact that the Chamorro faction in Nicaragua overthrew the duly elected government of which Solarzano was President and Sacasa Vice-President.

The United States and the four Central American countries refused to recognize the revolutionary government directed by Chamorro. As explained at the White House today those four countries and the United States consulted together as a result of which they laid an embargo on the shipment of arms to Nicaragua.

The United States suggested to Mexico that that country join in levying the embargo, but Mexico refused. This is the only official communication the United States has had with the Mexican government on the subject of Nicaragua.

The Chamorro faction, after it had

Bulk of $12,000,000 Estate of Oklahoma Oil Man Goes to Philanthropies He Established

TULSA (Okla.) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Charles Page, Tulsa multimillionaire philanthropist, took care of his orphan "children" and then provided for his family, his wife and daughter. The hobby of the Oklahoma "tither" to care for poverty-stricken orphans and widows apparently was more than a lifetime thing. It went with him to his grave, for he left the bulk of the $12,000,000 estate for his dependents, providing in a less substantial way for his wife and daughter and the other members of his family.

Will Rogers Remarks:

ANN ARBOR (Mich.) Jan. 7.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Am lecturing before University of Michigan tonight on better government by poorer officilas. The great biologist, Prof. Little, is president of the school. He took the position so he could combine the study of students with that of guinea pigs.

Yours Mayorally,
MR. ROGERS.

P.S.—You will remember this school more readily when I tell you it's one that Benny Friedman and Benny Oosterbaan are building the new stadium for. Michigan's scholastic standing is a field goal better than any university in the Middle West.

ROGERS.

The will of Page, probated yesterday, was not a surprise in Tulsa and Sand Springs, a suburb built by Page, where he maintained an orphanage for 100 or more adopted children and a widows' colony for dependent mothers, as well as a hospital for the poor.

To his widow Mr. Page left an annuity of $2000 a month for her lifetime and the beautiful home at Sand Springs. He provided for the upkeep of the home. The widow's share is to be reduced on the majority of his daughter, Mary Charlie Page, now 15 years of age. When Mary becomes 21 the widow's monthly allowance is to be $1500 a month. The daughter is to receive $500 a month until her mother's death, when her monthly allowance from the earnings of the estate is to be increased to $1000 a month.

Page gave a home to his brother, Edwin Page, and provided $5000 for each of Edwin's three children for their education, and $500 a month to be divided among them in their lives. He remembered other relatives in less substantial ways.

This county, which Page helped to build, accepted his will as a typical move of the philanthropist. Just how his family accepted it is a matter of speculation. Not a few expect a suit to break the will or an effort to obtain more for relatives.

Years ago, after he had gone broke as a prospector, Page became a tither. He said God was his partner. At least 10 per cent of his earnings was to go to God's work. He regarded his orphans and his dependent widows his religion, and he cared for them bountifully. The children were legally adopted and reared in his great orphanage at Sand Springs. He built an amusement park for them and the other children of Tulsa, and the dependent widows lived in cottages built and maintained by him. He also maintained a big hospital at Sand Spring for those unable to pay for medical attention.

AMERICANS FLEE HANKOW AS MOB PERIL PERSISTS

Exodus to Shanghai Continues; Nationalist Officials Control Foreign Concessions

SHANGHAI, Jan. 8. (Saturday) (AP)—Dispatches from Hankow, mob ridden since Monday, state that sixty American women and children embarked on a British merchant ship for Shanghai Thursday night, following the example of the British women and children, who departed Wednesday. Women and children of other foreign nationalities were advised to leave, leading foreign men saying they had no confidence in the promises of the Cantonese government officials that they would preserve order.

The dispatches, filed as late as 1 a.m. Saturday, reported that the situation was still most tense, as a result of the antiforeign speeches and propaganda which caused the attack upon the British concession district Monday and Tuesday by thousands of angry Chinese.

Control of the foreign concessions was in the hands of officials of the Nationalist, or Cantonese, government, whose troops replaced foreign sailors and marines from warships in the Yangtze River. Business ceased, despite Chinese government assurances that law and order would be kept. Further developments were awaited anxiously.

CORRESPONDENT HELD

The correspondent of Reuter's News Agency was confined in the Asiatic Petroleum Company's premises by Chinese pickets, but was expected to be liberated soon.

The flag was not flying from the British Consulate-general yesterday, the premises being watched by Chinese troops, said Japanese dispatches. Consul-General Goffe remained within. Those other British residents who still remained in Hankow took refuge in the Hongkong Bank and Asiatic Petroleum Company's buildings, about which were Chinese troops and pickets.

Five members of the local Kuomintang, the political organization supporting the Cantonese government, took over the administration of the British concession.

Eugene Chen, Foreign Minister of the Nationalist government, said another dispatch, met leading Americans Friday afternoon to discuss their position. He assured them that there was no reason for panic, asserting that the Chinese government could control the situation. Later the majority of the American community decided to leave Hankow.

A meeting with the British with a similar object was a fiasco. Only British Consul-General Goffe and one other Britisher attended.

British and Americans were unanimous in lack of confidence in the professions of the Chinese that order will be restored and life and property made safe.

There were several American and British warships in the Yangtze opposite Hankow, but sailors and marines were kept aboard. Chinese officials said that their presence might inflame the mobs. Chinese troops continued to patrol the streets, and the populace continued hostile to foreigners.

LONDON HAMPERED BY PAUCITY OF REPORTS

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Consternation over the happenings in the British-concession city of Hankow is reported in the British communities of Peking and Shanghai, but alarm is not shown in official quarters here.

One of the difficulties of the situation, from the London standpoint, arises from the comparative paucity of news direct from Hankow and the extreme slowness of its transmission, which may be due to interference by the Chinese authorities. This factor adds to the anxiety over what may be happening there.

The latest direct news, in a dispatch dated Friday morning, shows that Eugene Chen, the Cantonese Foreign Minister, had conferences with foreign residents, or rather the American residents, for there was only one British resident left in Hankow in addition to the British Consul.

Chen assured them of his intention and power to maintain order, but apparently the Americans either did not trust his sincerity or his power and decided to evacuate the city. According to Shanghai advices, sixty American women and children have already left Hankow.

Japanese circles in Shanghai report that the British concession in Hankow now is being governed by a committee of five chosen from the members of the local Kuomintang (National People's party) organization. Evidently, earlier reports that the city had been returned to British control were unfounded.

Chinese troops are said to be standing guard at the British Consulate, where Herbert Goffe, Consul-General, still remains. Peking messages state that the evacuation of British men, as well as women, from Chengtu and elsewhere in the Province of Szechuan and parts of Southern and Western China, has already been started.

ADMIRAL WILLIAMS ORDERED TO SHANGHAI

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Admiral Williams, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, has been ordered to Shanghai to "observe and report conditions." Admiral Williams will proceed on his flagship, the U.S.S. Pittsburgh, now at Manila.

Secretary Wilbur said the number of ships Admiral Williams took with him would be governed by the Admiral's own opinion of the situation.

HO PLANS MOVE TO CHEKIANG PROVINCE

AMOY, Jan. 7. (AP)—Gen. Ho Ying Ching, Cantonese military commander, is planning to move northward into Chekiang Province within a few days. Many of his troops have moved into the Province. The military forces have demanded $900,000 from the Chamber of Commerce at Foochow, where Gen. Ho is located, to defray military expenses.

MISSIONARIES IN DESPERATE PLIGHT

AMOY, Jan. 7. (AP)—A desperate situation among the missionaries of Shaowu and Kienning, in the northern part of Fukien Province, was reported in messages received today. Soldiers were reported to have commandeered schools, churches, hospitals and missionary homes.

BRITISH CONCESSION AT KIUKIANG PLUNDERED

SHANGHAI, Jan. 8. (AP)—Rioting by Chinese against the British concession at Kiukiang, 450 miles west of Shanghai, has been followed by a rampage of plundering, mostly by Chinese soldiers, a dispatch sent from that city to Shanghai on Saturday said. The position of foreigners was described in the message as "absolutely intolerable" and local authorities were utterly unable to control the situation. The British concession has been evacuated. On Thursday 255 British women and children and a few men were placed aboard gunboats and sailed for Shanghai.

Two Methodist Preachers Pass 100-Year Mark

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Two Methodist ministers are more than 100 years of age and twenty-eight have passed the 90-year mark, it was revealed here today by the World Service Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The announcement was accompanied by a statement that the longevity of Methodist pastors has been shown to be increasing constantly.

The two oldest ministers are Edward S. Best of Malden, Mass., who is 102, and James B. Lathrop, Greensburg, Ind., 101.

compelled the President of Nicaragua to resign and after it had chased Sacasa, the Vice-President, out of the country, assembled what has been characterized as a "rump" Congress, which proceeded to elect Sebastian Urina as President, under that part of the national constitution which provides that in the absence of the popularly elected President and Vice-President, Congress shall elect. This was so barefaced a subterfuge that the four republics of Central America and the United States still refused to accord recognition.

Thereafter an arrangement was made by the contending factions, under which the Liberal members of Congress who had fled or had been forced out of the country when the Chamorro faction had seized power, came back under guarantees of safety and the real Congress assembled. This Congress thereupon elected Diaz as President. Six of the Liberal members refused to vote and walked out of the hall, but some eighty remained and participated in the election.

Since then, all of the Central American countries, parties to the five-nation treaty mentioned above, except Costa Rica, have recognized the Diaz government, and so has the United States. Mexico, on the contrary, has recognized the revolutionary government of Sacasa, which has been set up at Puerto Cabezas, where Admiral Latimer has declared a neutral zone.

It was stated at the White House, in further explanation that a nation cannot always inquire into the causes behind a change of government in the country, but that if the constitutional forms have been complied with, if the government established is a de facto government and if it appears to have sufficient force and power to maintain itself against internal attacks obviously it is one which should receive recognition.

BORAH'S STAND

It further was stated at the White House that there is no doubt that arms have been supplied to Sacasa forces from Mexico, but the President was represented as having no knowledge as to whether they had been supplied by the Mexican government.

Senator Borah took the position today, after his White House conference, that no proof has been offered that American interests in Nicaragua have been endangered, and that the government's action constitutes intervention without justification.

"If there is anyone in Nicaragua who is constitutionally entitled to be President of Nicaragua, it is Sacasa," Senator Borah said. "We have recognized those who started the revolution against the legally and constitutionally elected President and Vice-President.

"Diaz has not any more right under the constitution to be President than any other person in Nicaragua whom we might choose.

"Diaz is President in violation of every provision of the constitution and in violation of the five-power treaty in Central America and is held there by sheer force of foreign arms."

LIBERALS OCCUPY TOWN CLOSE TO MANAGUA

MANAGUA (Nicaragua) Jan. 7. (AP) Two hundred well-armed Liberals occupied Nandaime today, the small garrison of Conservative troops withdrawing to Granada, about twenty miles southeast of Managua. The Conservative government is expecting an attack on Granada, but announces it is well prepared for it.

The Liberals are said to be preparing for an attack on Rama, situated on the Escondido River, about thirty miles west of Bluefields, on the east coast of Nicaragua. The Conservative government under President Diaz has requested the United States Legation to declare Rama a neutral zone as American interests are largely represented there.

Liberal adherents in Managua are requesting President Sacasa, head of the Liberal government, to name a representative to treat with the Conservative government. Admiral Latimer, in command of the American naval forces in Nicaraguan waters, is reported to have announced his willingness to use his good offices to bring about such an arrangement.

WARSHIP RUSHES TO HEAD OFF GUN-RUNNER

NAVY RETICENT ON GALVESTON'S PURPOSE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Secretary Kellogg today refused to comment on news reports from Managua that the American naval commander had been authorized to stop arms shipments to "unauthorized persons," and the Navy declared itself without information why the American cruiser Galveston suddenly left her station at Corinto at daybreak.

The report current in Nicaragua was that she was headed for the Bay of Fonseca, where a Mexican gunrunner supposedly was seeking to make contact with the shore. The Navy said its advices indicated that the cruiser was steering in another direction, on an undisclosed mission.

Neither was any official word obtainable about the six additional warships and the 400 marines ordered south yesterday to augment the American naval squadron under Rear-Admiral Latimer. The ships are to report to the admiral for such disposition as he may find necessary. If any sudden development in the situation led to their dispatch, it remains clothed in official silence.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (AP)—D. C. Warren, airplane pilot, returned here today after carrying Gordon S. Arnette, Seattle business man, to Red Bluff on the first stage of a race to reach the bedside of his wife, reported dying in Seattle.

Warren said Arnette arrived in Red Bluff in time to take a motor stage for Medford, Or., whence he expected to take another plane for Seattle. The stage trip was preferred to a night flight over the Siskiyou Mountains.

DISARMING AID ASKED

Coolidge Seeks Parley Fund

Congress Urged to Provide $75,000 More for Work at Geneva Session

President Declares Hopeful Trend Now Apparent in Initial Activities

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP) — With the declaration that the United States should give full co-operation to moves toward armament limitation, President Coolidge today asked Congress to appropriate $75,000 for expenses of American participation in the forthcoming activities of the preparatory commission for disarmament at Geneva.

The President said the appropriation of $50,000 already made for the work had been exhausted, but that "we should continue to give our full co-operation to the work of the preparatory commission with a view to bringing about as quickly as possible a final conference at which further steps may be taken to reduce and limit armament."

"The policy of this government to favor measures which hold out practical hope for the limitation of armament is firmly established," Mr. Coolidge continued. "By continuing our hearty co-operation in the preparatory work we shall be able to do our share in formulating an agenda for the final conference which will give promise of actual agreement for arms limitation."

Explaining that the preparatory commission which met at Geneva on May 18, 1926, delegated to several subcommittees the study of many of the problems presented and that the work of these subcommittees virtually has been completed, President Coolidge said that a plenary meeting of the commission will be held probably in March to consider the report of the subcommittees.

"I believe that the preliminary work has been useful and that there is good reason to hope for concrete results from further meetings," he said. "Our representatives consistently have endeavored to play a helpful part and to direct the attention of the commission to the possibility of practical accomplishment."

The message said "it is the avowed purpose of the preparatory commission at the forthcoming meetings to evolve a definite agenda for a conference for reduction and limitation of armament which is, of course, the end to which the deliberations of the preparatory commission are directed."

TOLERANCE FOR MEXICO ADVOCATED

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Dr. Charles M. Thomas, formerly in charge of the colonization and industrial department of the Southern Pacific of Mexico, in an address today, appealed for calmness and poise in Uncle Sam's attitude toward Mexico.

"It is well to remember," he declared, "that Mexico for many years has had staggering problems to solve, but never as many as at present. The most remarkable thing in Mexico today is the hungering for education among the masses. There is vital need for educational institutions.

"No State in the Union will reap greater benefits from the development of Mexico than California, which should be most deeply interested in maintaining friendly relations with that country."

The Mexican Consul in Los Angeles has received the following telegram from the Mexican Embassy at Washington, D. C.:

"During the last two or three days alarming news has seemingly been intentionally circulated in certain sections of the American press in regard to the imminence of new international disturbances in Mexico. The American Embassy has official advices to the effect that no movement of such character exists down there and that this seems to be a new instance on which propaganda against Mexico has been put out with the obvious purpose to press upon the government to modify the Mexican land and oil regulatory laws which are in force at present. As Mexican public opinion is foreign to the interests backing this movement, it seems that they are looking for support abroad. The situation in Mexico is perfectly normal, the government has it under its complete control and is ready to meet any possible emergency."

ALIEN QUOTA CUT SHOWN BY COOLIDGE

Report Gives Impetus to Movement for Repeal of National Origin Clause

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Impetus was given today to the movement in Congress for repeal of the national origin provision of the immigration restriction law by the receipt from President Coolidge of a report showing that there would be a marked reduction after next July 1 in the quotas allowed Germany, the Irish Free State, Italy and the Scandinavian countries.

The report was prepared by the State, Commerce and Labor departments to guide the President in issuing by April 1 a proclamation fixing the quotas for each of the European countries on the basis of the national origin of immigrants admitted during the century ending in 1920 instead of on the present basis of the foreign-born population from the various countries in the United States in 1890.

The Irish Free State's annual quota would be reduced from 28,576 to 13,862; Germany's from 51,277 to 23,428; Italy's from 6091 to 3845; Poland's from 5982 to 4978; Sweden's from 9561 to 3258; Norway's from 6435 to 2267 and Denmark's from 2789 to 1044.

Review of Day in Congress

After rejecting a three-cruiser construction proposal, the House passed the naval supply bill.

A shifting of immigration quotas was forecast in a report sent to the Senate by President Coolidge.

Opposition to Cyrus E. Woods as an interstate commerce commissioner was expressed at a Senate committee hearing.

HOUSE DEFEATS 'BIG NAVY' PLAN

tion with which the Democrats viewed the onslaught on a Coolidge policy that drove many wavering Republicans back onto the administration reservation.

BURTON GETS PRAISE

In some quarters, Representative Burton, Republican, Ohio, was credited with turning the tide that for days had been running against the President.

"There are many peace moves going on in the world today," said Mr. Burton. "In the place of antagonisms existing between France and Germany since 1871 there is a friendly spirit between these nations. The French army has recently been reduced by 100,000. The treaties of Locarno look to a new era. These treaties provide for arbitration of international disputes and make any nation an outlaw which does not comply."

"How much good did the eighteen Bryan treaties for arbitration do toward stopping the great war?" Representative Britten inquired. "What we're looking for here is American security. What good is there for us in a treaty between Hungary and Turkey."

"Don't let that nightmare keep you awake," Mr. Burton replied, amid applause. "It is not fair to compare our condition with that of foreign countries. In the case of Great Britain, for instance, we can concede that she needs a larger navy than the United States. In any case, a war between the United States and Great Britain is out of the question for one very good reason which I have pointed out before—Canada, just to the north of us, is a hostage for Great Britain's good behavior. In a month, if war should break out, we could march across her border, and take her away.

NEED FOR PEACE

"The crying need of the world is an era of peace. I appeal to you men who have the navy yards in your locality to take a national view of this question. I fear there is a militaristic reaction in this country, which I don't think exists in Europe. But our country has a duty to perform. Europe is so exhausted that it is not likely, for that reason, that they will fly at each other's throats.

"I do not want to enter into this controversy as to whether there is a quarrel between the President and the House. I do not want to enter upon criticism or defense of the President. To my mind this problem bulks larger. We are taking the responsibility today, a grave responsibility whether we, as the House of Representatives of the United States, will with our voices, which shall be heard around the globe, exert our efforts in the great cause of peace and of humanity."

Mr. Britten quoted an utterance of President Coolidge in 1925 that the principal peril is from accidental, not deliberate war. The Representative said that is true today, but that we lack a Navy capable of inspiring respect. The opposition of Mr. Coolidge to adequate preparedness he likened to the attitude of Mr. Wilson even when the latter admitted that "sparks are flying about us."

"You did not follow the President in 1917," Representative Wingo, Democrat, Arkansas, interjected.

"I am proud," Britten retorted, "that I was one of fifty or fifty-one who voted against war for the very reason that we are talking about here today, that the country was not prepared, and the result has proved it."

"Made a pretty good job," said Representative La Guardia, Republican, New York.

"But," came back Britten, "at the sacrifice of thousands of lives and thousands of millions of dollars. Who cleared the seas? The Allied nations cleared the seas of our enemies."

PLANS FOR SHIFTING AIR BASE ABANDONED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) Tentative plans of the Navy Department to shift the air base at Pensacola, Fla., to San Diego, because of fear of a recurrence of the disastrous storm that wrecked the Florida base last fall, were abandoned today when an appropriation of $500,000 was authorized for reconstruction of the station.

The appropriation, which is $700,000 less than was requested, will appear as a deficiency item in the next budget.

ACTION STARTS ON VETERANS' LOANS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Difficulties of war veterans in borrowing money from banks on their soldier bonus certificates led today to a number of moves in Congress designed to straighten out the situation.

Senator Walsh, Massachusetts, introduced a bill to permit regional offices of the Veterans' Bureau to make loans on the certificates, while Representative Romjue, Democrat, Missouri, asked that loans be made directly by the Treasury.

The Senate, on motion of Senator Copeland, Democrat, New York, asked Secretary Mellon what the Federal Reserve Board has done to facilitate the loans.

SENATORS READY FOR FARM PROBLEM

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—With hearings on farm relief already under way on the House side of the Capitol, the Senate Agriculture Committee decided today to get down to consideration of the problem next week.

Announcement of this program was made by Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, chairman of the committee and co-author of the controversial McNary-Haugen bill, which the House committee will take up Tuesday.

GRAFT TRAIL REVEALED

Gould Hits Back at Accusers

Senator Tells Investigators He Had No Share in Bribing Canadians

Premiers Asserted Guilty of Demanding Sums from Railroad Builders

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Striking back at his accusers, Senator Gould, Republican, Maine, today told the Senate elections subcommittee investigating charges of bribery against him that he had taken no part in the payment of $100,000 to officials of New Brunswick, Can., but had been driven out of business in the Province because he refused to pay $50,000 to a Premier.

The new Senator recited a story of asserted political corruption in New Brunswick, in 1912, when, as president of a company building a railroad in that Province. He said two premiers openly solicited funds from him, threatening to stop his railroad operations if he refused.

Without his consent, Gould said, his New York associates paid $100,000 to the campaign fund of the Conservative party of the Canadian Province, but that he later learned that "Premier Flemming got most of it."

OFFICIALS ACCUSED

Senator Gould told the committee he had been held up all along the way in building the road until it ran into hundreds of thousands of dollars, by violations of agreements and promises on the part of Canadian officials.

The Canadian partners "got enough" and withdrew from the operations, he said, and eventually he was driven out when he refused to pay $50,000 to Premier Clark, who succeeded Flemming.

The arrangement for the $100,000 contribution, the Maine Senator said, was made in Ottawa, unknown to him. He declared he first knew about it when he saw P. J. Lisman of New York, one of his partners, shaking hands with Premier Flemming in a bank.

Lisman later told him that that handshake had meant the payment of $100,000, Gould said, asserting that he had protested that he would not stand for "any graft."

He said that Lisman explained that they "had been held up" as Flemming had refused to sign the final contract unless he got the money. This demand was made, Gould added, after the company had sold $4,500,000 worth of bonds in London and spent other money.

The Senator presented a letter to the committee from H. E. MacDonald of Victoria, Can., stating that he had actually paid over the $100,000 to a Canadian official, but refused to disclose the official's identity.

TELLS OF PHONE CALL

The committee also was told by Senator Gould that before Flemming became Premier, he telephoned him one night at his home and asked him to meet him in Centerville. He met him that night, he asserted, adding that Flemming said: "I am going to be Premier and I am a poor man. You people doing big business over here ought to contribute $40,000 to my campaign and should put me on a salary of $5000 while you are building the railroad here."

Mr. Gould said he refused to pay anything and broke off all relations with him, but later, upon the plea of Flemming, he renewed negotiations for the railroad contract and obtained one to build the road for $31,000 a mile.

At the very start, the Senator declared, he was forced to pay $32,000 for a survey which had been promised would be only $10,000 and "that sort of thing continued until it ran into the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

NEW GLASS TESTED FOR POLICE CARS

Windshield Resists Shots Fired at Close Range in San Francisco Tryout

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Thirty armored police cars will be equipped at once with a new type so-called bullet-proof windshield as the result of tests conducted here today. When four revolvers and rifles failed to break the glass in a volley of shots at distances of from ten to twenty feet, the shield was pronounced a success by Chief of Police O'Brien and civic officials. With each shot, a crack appeared in the glass but none penetrated it.

The special glass is seven-eighths of an inch thick, or a quarter of an inch thicker than that now in use.

San Francisco to Install New Traffic Signals

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive) — Recommendations of Miller McClintock, Los Angeles traffic expert, for the installation of automatic traffic-control signals at twenty-four important downtown intersections and a few outlying points, were accepted as essential by the Board of Supervisors today and will be installed as rapidly as funds are available.

WET REFERENDUM SOUGHT

Bay City Assemblyman to Present Measure for State Vote on Volstead Act

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—A referendum to sound out sentiment on the Volstead Act will be placed on the ballot at the next general election if a measure under preparation by Assemblyman Hornblower of San Francisco passes the Legislature and is signed by the Governor.

Hornblower said today that he will introduce a measure in the Assembly Monday which will resemble referendum acts adopted by New York and Nevada at the last general election. The result of such a referendum, he asserts, is an accurate check on whether the people favor the present Federal prohibition law.

"Should the Congress of the United States modify the Federal act to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, so that the same shall not prohibit the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation or exportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with laws of the respective States?"

The bill provides that the result of the vote be certified to the House of Representatives and the Senate, and Hornblower declares that Congress would have an opinion as to dry law directly from the people.

Another measure which Hornblower will introduce would write into the State law sections of the national prohibition law, which make it misdemeanor for an officer to enter a dwelling or other building for liquor without a warrant, issued only on affidavit based on probable cause.

"The citizens of California are entitled to protection against such un-American practices," Hornblower declared, "and I believe the Legislature will grant the protection sought by the proposed measure."

ATTEMPT TO BALK CRIME CODE REVISIONS BEATEN

State Senate Adopts Resolution for Standing Committee to Make Study of Reforms

BY C. A. JONES
"Times" Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7.—Efforts to obstruct the State's program of reform of the Criminal Code were defeated here today when the Senate voted, 29 to 6, to sustain a proposal to create a standing committee to consider bills relating to revision of the criminal laws.

The plan to bring the criminal statutes up to date is very close to the heart of Lieut.-Gov. Fitts. The fight was against the proposal of a new standing committee, but the prestige of Fitts was drawn into the matter intimately.

President Pro-tem Breed submitted the standing rules of the Senate for approval which combined two lesser committees and created the committee on revision of criminal law and procedure to consider more than 100 bills to be submitted by the committee on the reform of criminal procedure, of which Maj. Walter K. Tuller of Los Angeles is chairman. A substitute resolution eliminating this proposed committee was offered by Senator Swing, Riverside, and the plots centered on this motion.

TWO LAY MEMBERS

Prior to the debate, Mr. Fitts announced that he planned to place at least two lay members on the committee of seven. This eliminated the objections made yesterday that the committee might be composed entirely of members of the bar in the Senate.

Senator Swing said he preferred that the work of the commission be relieved by the Judiciary Committee, stating that he objected to the precedent established and the creation of a standing committee to handle the work of a "special inter-

It was answered by numerous Senators among them Senator Breed, who delved into the history of the House to show that no precedent was being created. Objection to the term "special interest" was interposed with the statement that the protection of the lives of the citizens of California was of universal interest. It was pointed out that the Judiciary Committee is sadly burdened with work, and that another commission to relieve the load was urgently needed.

OPPOSES "DICTATION"

Senator Fellom, San Francisco, who seconded the substitute resolution, said he questioned the "morality of outside bodies dictating" the accomplishments of the new committee.

"That statement is a direct reflection upon our President," declared Senator Inman, "and I want you to understand what you are saying."

The Senator from San Francisco replied he meant for no such interpretation to be placed on his words.

Aye—Christian, Fellom, Hurley, Ray Jones, Swing and West.—6.

No—J. M. Allen, N. M. Allen, Baker, Boggs, Breed, Canepa, Chamberlin, Cobb, Evans, Garrison, Gray, Hanby, Hollister, Ingram, Inman, Johnson, Kline, Maloney, McKinley, Murphy, Nelson, Rush, Sharkey, Slater, Taylor, Tubbs, Wagy, Weller and Young.—29.

Upon the approval of the committees, only two Senators, Christian and West, voted no.

SCHARRENBERG CONSIDERED

It was reported today in well-informed circles that the appointment of Paul Scharrenberg, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, to the State Board of Harbor Commissioners at San Francisco, is under consideration. The position pays $300 a month, and exercises an important influence around the Bay District.

Opposition to his appointment has arisen from shipping interests in Los Angeles and San Francisco, where he is termed a union labor agitator.

A resolution circumscribing the activities of lobbyists was introduced and adopted without dissent in the Senate today.

Senator Swing, in presenting the resolution, proposed that lobbyists file their names, and the interests they represent, with the sergeant-at-arms, who then will issue cards. On motion of Senator Inman the resolution was amended to permit committee chairmen to require, at their discretion, the showing of the card. The resolution was so drawn that committee chairmen may call on persons to present their views to the committee without the necessity of obtaining a card.

BOND ISSUE UP

A highway construction bond issue of $50,000,000 to be voted upon at the 1928 election, was introduced in the Senate today in the form of a constitutional amendment by Senator Hurley, Alameda.

Senator Hurley said that he believed the issue could be retired within twelve years by allocation of a part of the revenue of the Motor Vehicle Department and the gasoline tax. He proposed that 15 per cent of fees and tax should go to a sinking fund to retire the bonds, and an additional 10 per cent of fees and tax go to a fund to pay the interest charges.

A highway bond issue was frowned upon in his inaugural message by Gov. Young.

Adjournment of both houses until Monday morning was taken. Speaker Levey has some trouble in gathering a quorum, as many Assemblymen had taken advantage of the dearth of business and had gone home.

Several Senators also were absent.

Inventor Would Make Use of Hit-and-Run Detector Disk Mandatory

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—A hit-and-run detector, built to drop a tell-tale identification disk whenever a pedestrian is hit by an automobile, will be fastened to the front bumper of every automobile in California if legislators listen to the plea of George Vinvent Sinclair, Grass Valley inventor, who is looking for a Senator or Assemblyman who will introduce a bill making installation of his device compulsory.

Each disk contained in the detector would carry the license number of the car and its owner's name and address.

Straton Enters Evolution War of New Order

MACON (Ga.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church of New York City, appeared here today as a Knight of the Supreme Kingdom. The Kingdom was founded by E. Y. Clarke, one of the organizers of the Ku Klux Klan.

Tonight Dr. Straton delivered the first of sixty addresses in support of the Supreme Kingdom's announced intention to bar from public schools every teacher of the theory of evolution. The kingdom's official organ, Dynamite, announced that Dr. Straton would be director of religious activities.

The Macon Telegraph says that Dr. Straton will receive $30,000 for the series of sixty addresses. His appearance has been scheduled in several cities.

At ten and one-half minutes past 9 o'clock the editors of the London Express and the New York Evening World were chatting together over the fact that the sun was shining in London as well as in this city. The call came through from London.

The Associated Press at 10:02 a.m., called its London bureau from New York and received here the first news dispatch to be transmitted to a news agency over the new commercial service. Ten months before, to the day, the Associated Press received another dispatch, when the two-way conversations were first found practicable.

The dispatch today told of an expected visit to Canada and the United States of the Prince of Wales.

Through Speyer & Co., and J. & W. Seligman & Co., the Central News, Ltd., at 10:37 a.m., was given the first financial news dispatch, which concerned the activities of the new owners of the Victor Talking Machine Company and their intended policy abroad.

Business transactions came early in the day. The foreign exchange department of the International Acceptance Bank placed one of the first calls, completing a $5,000,000 foreign exchange transaction with the Midland Bank, Ltd., overseas branch, London.

When the deal was consummated the Midland bank called the International Acceptance Bank and arranged a foreign-exchange transaction involving $1,000,000, the two deals necessitating the eventual use of five currencies.

Sir Arthur Worley, C.B.E., London, called C. F. Shallcross, United States manager of the North British Mercantile and Insurance Company. Sir Arthur is head of the firm in London. He announced that the new service will be resorted to frequently in the future in adjusting claims, and six minutes later, this information had been telegraphed throughout the United States to branch offices of the firm.

At 3:32 p.m. London and Newark were in communication, on a ten-minute call placed by Sir Woodman Burbidge of Harrods, Ltd., the department store. Sir Woodman talked with Louis Bamberger, president of L. Bamberger & Co.

Both, it developed, desired to be perfectly international in their greetings.

Mr. Burbidge, accordingly said in the American fashion:

"Hello."

Mr. Bamberger of Newark, said:

"Are you there?"

So numerous were individuals who had applied to talk, at $25 a minute, that the service, originally scheduled to close at 1:30 o'clock was continued an additional four and a half hours.

Another full slate has been booked for tomorrow, it is known, and while most calls for the two days range under five minutes' which is two over the minimum required, officials say the calls will get longer as business more generally supplants wonder in the use of the service.

Despite today's static, which had almost entirely disappeared toward late afternoon, the service was tonight declared to have proved to be a technical success. The static, at first declared to be due to atmospheric conditions off Houlton, Me., was later believed to have been caused by English Channel conditions.

"Today's conversations, however," said one official of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, "was technically satisfactory, considering the worst static present in a month. Its extension to other sections of the country, eventually probably to the 17,000,000 telephones here, is up to the public."

COAST MUST WAIT FEW DAYS FOR SERVICE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—It will be three or four days before Pacific Coast cities will be hooked into the trans-Atlantic commercial radio telegraph service, Thomas F. De Lury of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, announced today. Connections are now being prepared but are not complete, he said.

HERE'S WHAT THEY SAID AS NEW SERVICE STARTED ACROSS SEA

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—The full text of the conversation between President W. S. Gifford of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company of New York, and Sir G. Evelyn P. Murray, secretary of the British General Postoffice in London, follows:

Mr. Gifford picked up the receiver when the bell at his elbow sounded and the operator announced: "Sir Evelyn Murray of London now on the line."

The voice of the British official first was drowned by static.

"Beg pardon, sir," Mr. Gifford said. "Do you hear clearly, sir?"

"Yes, I hear you," came from across the sea.

Mr. Gifford then delivered the following message to Sir Evelyn:

"Today, as a result of very many years of research and experimentation, we open a telephonic channel of speech between New York and London. Thus the people of these two great cities will be brought within speaking distance. Across 2000 miles of ocean, individuals in the two cities may, by telephone, exchange views and transact business instantly as though they were face to face. I know that it is your aim, as it is ours, to extend this service so that in the near future anyone in either of our countries may talk to any one in the other.

"No one can foresee the ultimate significance of this latest achievement of science and organization. It will certainly facilitate business; it will be a social convenience and comfort; and, through the closer bond which it establishes, it will promote better understanding and strengthen the ties of friendship. Through the spoken word, aided by the personality of the voice, the people of New York and the people of London will become neighbors in a real sense, although separated by thousands of miles.

"We are glad to have co-operated with you in this notable enterprise and shall actively continue to work with you in extending and improving the service. I congratulate you upon your successful solution of your problems and wish to extend to you and to your associates the greetings and good wishes of the officers and staff of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and of their associates in the Bell telephone system."

Sir Evelyn's answer followed immediately and was clearly audible. The static had died to a faint murmur, which did not interfere with reception. He said:

"The opening of the telephone service across the Atlantic between London and New York is a conspicuous milestone in the road of telephone progress and marks the beginning of a new epoch in the development of communication between our two countries. Personal conversation between Great Britain and the United States has emerged from the stage of experiment into a practical reality, and we are confident that the service which we are inaugurating today will be a boon to both nations, whether as an aid to commerce or as a medium of social and domestic intercourse, and it will tend to strengthen the bonds which unite the two communities.

"I am charged by the Postmaster-General to take this occasion to acknowledge the notable contributions which your company has been able to make through its engineering and research organization toward the solution of many baffling problems which have been encountered. We recognize, as we believe you recognize, that there are difficulties still to be overcome before the trans-Atlantic service can attain the standard of regularity and reliability at which we aim, but we are convinced that there is no better means of solving these difficulties than by putting the service to the crucial test of daily use, and we hope that before long trans-Atlantic conversation will be available not only to the citizens of London and New York, but to every telephone subscriber in both countries.

"We of the British postoffice look back with pleasure upon the cordial co-operation of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company which has led to the success so far achieved and on behalf of the Postmaster-General and the officers of the Federal postoffice I warmly reciprocate your greeting and good wishes. I now declare the service opened to the public."

MIRACLE OF FIFTY YEARS

Wonderful Feat of Transmitting Voice Over Ocean Develops From Original Bell Invention

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Inauguration of telephone service between New York and London today represents the extension in fifty years of the transmission of the human voice from a tiny wire fifty-five feet long to a winged service capable of covering 6000 miles or more of mountains, sea and plain. Less than a dozen years since New York talked over the telephone to San Francisco, a receiver taken down today in New York could click in the ear of an auditor in London, 3500 miles away.

And with no further effort than ringing up a suburb, a bobbed-haired, short-skirted metropolitan girl operator could plug in San Francisco, telephone officials said.

Today more than $5,000,000 worth of equipment was in use for the opening of trans-Atlantic commercial telephone service.

HISTORY OF PHONE

In 1876 when the struggling Boston professor, Alexander Graham Bell, talked to his friend Thomas Watson over a 50-foot wire, strung across a Boston street, the equipment could have been purchased for the traditional song—up to the time Bell projected his voice successfully.

"Come here, Mr. Watson," he said, "I want you."

Then Mr. Bell had one wire. Today in the United States there are 17,000,000 telephones, and connecting New York and London are not only one 5000-meter circuit, but an emergency short-wave circuit using a 22-meter frequency.

The utilization of the short-wave so much discussed as a long distance possibility is a triumph for American engineers.

Researches for more than ten years have been conducted by the laboratories of the American Telegraph and Telephone Company. In the laboratories 3000 engineers are devising and revising methods and materials.

VAST IMPROVEMENT

The transmission of the voice across the water represents a magnification of methods rather than a discovery, for Bell, the inventor of the telephone, was, in 1880, the first person to use and patent a device for the projection of the voice over a ray of light.

The radio waves, exchanging the New York and London accents, differ from the light waves in that the radio waves are longer.

It was not until the continent was spanned with wires, that the American Telephone and Telegraph turned to piercing the ether where wires could not be strung. Its first experiment of moment was when the company's engineers talked from Montauk Point, L. I. to Wilmington, Lal. Next came a talk from Montauk Point to St. Stimsons' Island off the southern coast of the United States.

These experiments bolstered the confidence of the engineers, and although the World War interfered with building towers, the Navy granted permission to use the towers at Arlington, and from this point experiments were made with France, San Diego, San Francisco, the Isthmus of Panama and Hawaii.

TRIALS CONTINUED

Starting on the Fourth of July, 1915, when there were no results, the experiments were continued to September, when an official of the company in New York talked to another in San Francisco over the radio, and received an answer back over the wire.

The first attempt to talk across the Atlantic failed. But in October, when the static—called "atmospherics" in England—disappeared, the company succeeded for the first time in transmitting the human voice across the Atlantic.

Interrupted by the World War, the experiments were resumed afterward, and in January, 1923, using the tower of the Radio Corporation of America, four officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company talked one night to a group in London at a predetermined hour.

The British had no apparatus with which to talk back, but responded by cablegrams, announcing success for the one-way communication.

Exactly fifty years after the date of current March 7, 1926, between the telephone office in New York and the telephone office in London, exactly fifty years after the date on the Bell telephone.

LONG WAY TO GO

Speaking at a meeting four days later in Boston, J. J. Carty, vice-president of the telephone company, told the Boston Chamber of Commerce that the day was coming "when the descendants of these Boston merchants can talk to all parts of the world, where in the old days their sailing ships went."

"We have a long way to go, however," he added, "before telephony on a practical commercial scale to England and the rest of the world will be accomplished."

At that time static was the great hindrance, and the improvement of transmitters, generators and receiving apparatus has, for years, been the occupation of hundreds of technical experts, one of whose latest devices has been the perfection of means for shooting the radio waves through static with as little interference as possible.

It is predicted that outlying points throughout the United States will be in communication with London long before equivalent progress has been noted outside of London.

NEW INVENTIONS

In Chicago alone there are more phones than in the whole British Isles and each one here is a potential link with the islands any time the New York office connects the transcontinental caller with the trans-Atlantic commercial service.

Trans-Atlantic radio telephony is based on the same fundamentals as ordinary broadcasting. But only certain refinements and improvements make it possible to project the voice across the Atlantic.

The two chief developments, experts say, are development of a crystal capable of holding the transmitter to its exact wave length and the elimination of the carrier wave and one of the side bands used in ordinary broadcasting.

The Piezo crystal, as it is called, is a bit of quartz ground to a specified thinness and shape. It holds the wave length to 5000 meters in the present case, preventing oscillations that would make it difficult, if not impossible, to keep the receiving apparatus tuned to it.

WAVES DIVORCED

As for the carrier wave and the two sidebands, these in ordinary broadcasting consume nearly 60 per cent of the energy used. The side bands carry the actual voice vibrations. The engineers working on the trans-Atlantic radiophone have, it is said, worked out a system whereby these two parts of the original wave are whittled off the parent wave at the sending station, and the single side band is sent on its way carrying the voice.

Without the carrier wave and its twin side wave the voice is dumb and useless, but at the receiving end the carrier wave and the other sideband are restored, modulation becomes possible, and the single wide wave delivers its message without loss.

The voice on its journey from New York travels by land wire to the Rocky Point radio transmitting station on Long Island, where it is thrust across the 3550 air miles to Wroughton, Eng., where it again goes by land wires to London. The westward route carries the voice from London to the Rugby transmitting station then over the 2290 air miles to Houlton, Me.

After the "Flu" is over —you need a Tonic

Help Is Needed to Restore Your Wasted Strength and Energy.

"Flu" leaves the body weakened and rundown. In such cases, a tonic is clearly indicated. Restore the appetite and rid yourself of that let-down feeling.

"Flu" is a very enervating disease. It leaves its victims so weak and debilitated that there is as much danger from the after-effect as from the disease itself. In other words, after an attack of the "flu," you need a selective tonic to rebuild the system so that you may have your old-time strength and energy restored.

You owe it to yourself and family to give S.S.S. a trial. It helps Nature build up red blood corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the body is nourished. It is time-tried and reliable. S.S.S. is made from the roots of fresh herbs and plants, and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory.

HUNT LOSES AS SESSION FAILS

Legislature Adjourns Today Without Result

Added Hostility Developed for Administration

Governor's River Conferees Also Given Blow

PHOENIX, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—The special session of Arizona's eighth State Legislature will adjourn at noon tomorrow, with nothing done on the two subjects of the Governor's call except to develop a healthy opposition to the executive policies. A sad blow also has been dealt the Governor's committee on the Colorado River for word has come from both the Senate and House Agriculture Committees that Arizona's tri-State river conferees will be given no legislative recognition and that communications affecting its work will be received only from the executive offices. It was indicated the committees want to get the Governor on record.

Yet consideration was given the Arizona conferees in a joint session of the committees, one specially notable for the fact that F. A. Reid, a conference member, frankly declared his belief that Boulder or Black Canyon is the most logical point at which to erect a storage and power dam, though he joined his conferees in the stand against the Swing-Johnson bill. Until this bill is defeated, he said, "Arizona has little chance to make a trade with California."

BACKS BOULDER CANYON

"There are only two dam sites on the river worth discussing for practical purposes at this time," declared but for all other States of the lower Commissioner Reid. "One of them is Glenn Canyon and the other Boulder, or Black Canyon, its down-stream continuation. Glenn Canyon is an ideal site, but if a dam were built there, all the water stored above the twenty-eight-foot level, would be in U

"Boulder Canyon, in my opinion, is the only place to build a dam at this time, not only for Arizona's benefit, but for all other States of the lower basin. If Arizona had been given the choice of putting the dam wherever we wished, I would declare personally for placing it in either Boulder or Black canyons. A dam there will give us water for all the acreage we ever can hope reasonably to irrigate and will furnish us with a ready made power market, close at hand."

Reid's fellow-members of the conference, H. S. McCluskey and Thomas Maddock, expressed preference for the Glenn Canyon dam site, but it was agreed that much had been done in leading the California representatives to an appreciation of the stated rights of Arizona to revenue from power and to an allotment of water.

No part of the proceedings appeared to meet with the approval of Senator Colter, who is president of the Arizona High Line Association. Addressing the joint committee and the galleries, he made shouted declaration, "I have given my life for this cause and now they are trying to steal the river. The committee is trying to steal it under cover, but they will do it only over my dead body."

The Senator said much more, but Chairman Jones adjourned the meeting in the midst of the speech. Colter extended his remarks on the Senate floor where, when called to order by President Winsor, he received further rebuke when he declared that his ideas were too lofty for the president's comprehension.

Administration bills seeking to place full control of the Colorado River situation in the hands of the Governor are to be reported out tomorrow morning, adversely, with particular criticism of the plan to give the executive an unlimited draft on the State Treasury to pay the expense of conferences, surveys, special representation in Washington, fees of experts and attorneys and costs, in the event the subject shall be referred to the courts.

HUNT STANDS PAT

No move toward compromise has been manifest on the part of the Governor, who is standing pat on his assumption of full authority to represent the State. That the bills will be reintroduced next week in the regular session is not doubted. The same result, in slightly different phrasing, would have been obtained by a bill offered by Mrs. Gladys Walker, a new House member from Santa Cruz county, giving large authority and an entirely unlimited appropriation to the State Board of Public Institutions, which is a creation of the Governor. This bill went to the status of third reading before its text was understood. Then it was set back by unanimous vote and thrust into committee.

The Senate has adopted a memorial to Congress asking defeat of the Swing-Johnson bill as an injustice to this State. A message from Representative Hayden, through the Governor, indicated that the measure soon will be before the House of Representatives and asked such assistance as the Arizona Legislature may wish to give in the fight he will make against its passage.

The Governor declares he will welcome the committee on investigation of the Highway Department and states that the department's deficit is not one of recent origin but has even been reduced $400,000 in the past two years.

The House passed resolutions of respect to the memories of Robert E. Morrison of Prescott and A. A. Worsley of Tucson, who have passed away within the last few days.

MOVE TO ATTACK RIVER BILL

PHOENIX, Jan. 7. (AP)—Senator Joyner of Pima county today introduced in the Upper House of the State Legislature a resolution petitioning Congress to defeat the Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon dam bill in the interests of the State of Arizona.

Joyner explained in introducing the resolution that it is not the intent of the measure to seek to have discarded the Swing-Johnson bill in its entirety but only to pave the way for a new bill which will include those features which this State considers necessary to its interest in the river.

The resolution pointed out that the Boulder Canyon dam site is below the level of the lands in Arizona which are subject to irrigation, and that a dam at a higher level would make available to this State the waters of the river for the reclamation of thousands of acres of desert.

THAT RACKET MAY BE YOUR FACE

Televisor Inventor Says Each Physiognomy Emits Distinctive Noise, Proceeding to Broadcast Sounds from Pictures, a Hat and a Gargling Cabbage

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—"It is possible to distinguish your face from other people's faces by the noise it makes," said J. L. Baird, televisor inventor in a lecture here last night. He then proceeded to demonstrate.

He explained that he had discovered that transmissions of pictures by the television system were received as sounds by telephone or radiophone, each object or scene having its corresponding vibration.

In his demonstration he used pictures of various persons, and then of a matchbox, a pair of scissors, a hat and a cabbage. One face made a sound like a saw, another like a pneumatic riveter, while the hat purred softly. The cabbage image emitted a noise like a man gargling.

These sounds, Baird said, formed permanent records from which the original images could be reproduced.

SLATER COOL ON TRIP TO GIBBET

Convict Pays Penalty for Killing Officer

Doomed Man Eats Heartily of Last Supper

SAN QUENTIN, Jan. 7. (AP)—William J. Slater was hanged at the State prison here today for the murder of James M. West, town marshal of Needles, on July 2, 1925. The trap was dropped at 10:01 a.m. and Slater was pronounced dead sixteen and one-half minutes later.

Slater went to his death cooly and calmly. As the strap binding his arm was about to be placed about his waist in the death cell he asked for a moment's respite so that he might shake hands with Warden Smith and the guards on the death watch. He gripped their hands firmly and cordially and the strap then was fastened.

He ascended the thirteen gallows steps quickly and firmly, but turned an ashen white when he saw the noose. A remarkable thing about the hanging was the time that it took Slater to die.

An hour before the execution a telegram was received from Mrs. Catherine Clinton of San Bernardino saying that she would provide for Slater's burial if the prison authorities would ship the body to her at their expense. Warden Smith said that there was no provision for such a procedure, but that he will hold the body within the prison to see if some plan cannot be worked out for complying with Mrs. Clinton's wish.

Slater ate heavily last night and retired at 3 a.m. today. He was attended throughout the night and at the hanging by Rev. Father James McLaughlin of St. Raphael's Catholic Church. After receiving the last rites of the church today, he ate a sparse breakfast, visibly cheered by the administrations of the clergyman.

The San Bernardino murderer was the first man to die by an official noose in California in 1927. With James Brown, an accomplice, he drove into Needles in an automobile after they had robbed a filling station in Arizona. Marshal West, one of the most prominent peace officers in the Mojave Desert region, who had been tipped off to keep a lookout, attempted to stop them. Slater whipped out his gun, and shot the officer dead.

Both Slater and Brown were captured and quickly tried. Brown was sentenced to San Quentin for life and the noose was the judgment for Slater. Due to the prominence of West, who was a member of an old pioneer family, and a widely known and well-liked official, there was considerable feeling against the murderers. West had served as the Needles police head for about ten years and had a conspicuous record for bravery and efficiency.

STATE MAY SUPERVISE REPAIRMEN

Bay City Assemblyman to Introduce Bill Licensing Automobile Mechanics

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—A bill to register, license and regulate automobile mechanics will be introduced to the 1927 Legislature early next week by Assemblyman Fred B. Hawes of San Francisco, he announced today.

The bill would create State examining boards to test and classify all persons desiring to work as automobile mechanics in California. They would be rated as first, second, third-class mechanics and apprentices, according to the showing made when passing the examining board. Instances of inefficiency or irregularity would be referred to the examining board and if the mechanic was found guilty, he would be suspended or his license to work in California revoked.

The expenses of the examining board would more than be defrayed by mechanics' fees, the framer of the bill asserts.

"The object of the bill," Hawes said, "is to protect automobile owners from inefficient and dishonest mechanics."

"There are so many owners of machines these days who are at the mercy of mechanics when their automobiles are out of order that some steps should be taken to assure them of fair and efficient treatment.

"I believe the bill I shall introduce will protect automobile owners, who rely on mechanics to repair their cars and no appropriation will be needed to carry out the program."

WALES'S CRITICS HIT

Paper Condemns Bigots Assailing Prince's Drinking in "Pub"

LONDON, Jan. 7. (AP)—"Better is the poor that walketh in his integrity than he that is perverse in his lips and is a fool," was the biblical quotation commended by the Daily Express to the "meditation of the intolerant bigots," who have constituted themselves critics of the Prince of Wales because he drank beer in an East End "pub" with dock hands and others of the workingmen's district.

Complimenting the Prince on his efforts to strengthen the ties of the empire and referring to his recent slumming expeditions, the Express added:

"But we doubt if he has done anything finer or more productive of good than he has accomplished this Christmas-tide by making himself one of the people, by his comradely visit to their public houses, their homes and their meeting places."

TWO-YEAR SENTENCE FOR SAN DIEGO SLAYER

BOONVILLE (Mo.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Cecil Cockerill of San Diego, convicted of manslaughter yesterday by a jury in Cooper County Circuit Court, today was sentenced by Judge Westhues to two years in the State penitentiary for the killing of E. B. Turner, real-estate dealer, here October 13, last. Motion for a new trial was filed and bond was fixed at $5000.

GEORGIA'S LOVED POET DIES

Frank L. Stanton, Author of "Just a Wearyin' for You," Named Laureate of His State

ATLANTA (Ga.) Jan. 7. (AP)—Frank L. Stanton, 70 years of age, poet-laureate of Georgia and a member of the staff of the Atlanta Constitution for forty years, died at his home here today. Among Mr. Stanton's best-known poems are "Mighty Lak' a Rose," "Li'l Feller" and "Just a Wearyin' For You."

Frank Lebby Stanton was a newspaper man with the soul of a poet. The poet-laureate of Georgia became a master of the art at an early age by reading the world's best verse. As a result, he became one of the South's sweetest singers and best-loved writers of heart songs of any age.

FRANK L. STANTON

Asking nothing of life but to give expression to the kindly love and true poetry of his soul, Mr. Stanton received mere pittances for some of his most popular works, and kept sublimely aloof from the jazz of the times. He sang "Sweet Little Woman" through an age that reveled in "Red Hot Mamma."

MANY COLLECTIONS

Mr. Stanton continued in the vocation of a newspaper writer throughout his life, his last connection being with the Atlanta Constitution.

A number of collections of his poems have been published in book form, the first appearing in 1892 under the title: "Songs of the Soil." In 1900 another collection, "Comes One With a Song" appeared and in 1900 he published "Songs From Dixie." "Up From Georgia" appeared in 1902 and his last published volume "Little Folks Down South" came from the press in 1904.

At least two of his poems, "Mighty Lak' a Rose" and "Just a-Wearyin' for You" were set to music and have attracted world-wide attention. His total remuneration for the two was only $300.

Mr. Stanton was born in Charleston, S. C., February 23, 1857. His parents were Valentine and Rebecca Stanton.

Young Stanton lived in Charleston until he was 12, when he went to Savannah, Ga., and entered newspaper work as a copy boy on the Savannah Morning News.

FRIEND OF UNCLE REMUS

The Civil War and the subsequent period of reconstruction prevented him from obtaining the school and college training he desired, so an apprenticeship over a type-case in a printing office provided his education.

His first poem, "To Lizzie," was written to his sweetheart when he was 11.

Soon after joining the Savannah Mornings News staff he began contributing verse to the paper, and it was of such quality that it attracted the attention of Joel Chandler Harris, famous author of "Uncle Remus" stories, who then was an editorial writer on the News.

In 1867 Mr. Stanton began publication of the Smithville News, Smithville, Ga., where he attracted attention with his verse. It was here that he married Miss Leone Josey.

After a year at Smithville, Mr. Stanton accepted an offer from John Temple Graves, publisher of the Rome (Ga.) Tribune, to succeed Henry W. Grady on the staff of the Tribune.

OUTPUT TREMENDOUS

In the meantime Mr. Harris had joined the staff of the Atlanta Constitution and prevailed upon Mr. Stanton to join him on that paper in 1889. He began his connection with the Constitution by news and feature writing and contributing occasional verse. The latter shortly became a regular fertune, "Just From Georgia," which continued for the balance of his life.

The genius of Mr. Stanton perhaps was best expressed in a comment by a close friend, who, remarking on the prolific output of the poet, said:

"It is one of the marvels of literature how Frank L. Stanton can go on writing one or more poems every day and touching the heights of real poetry as often as he does."

SONGS OF THE HEART

The character of his works and the tremendous volume of simple songs made it difficult for critics to select any one as his best, but among them was "This World," a single stanza of four lines:

"This world that we're a livin' in
Is mighty hard to beat;
You git a thorn in every rose—
But ain't the roses sweet?"

Others of his famous poems are: "Li'l Feller," "Sweet Little Woman of Mine," "Let Miss Lindy Pass," "Keep on Hoppin'" and "Marcelle." It was in the latter his friends believe he reached his greatest height of heart appeal. Mr. Stanton's daughter, Marcelle, was dangerously ill and believed to be dying. The poet, overwhelmed with grief, sang out the agony of his soul in a poem.

INSPIRED SIMPLICITY

"Mighty Lak' a Rose" inspired Ethelbert Nevin, one of America's foremost composers, to compose a musical setting for it. Carrie Jacobs Bind, another of America's immortals, wrote the music to "Just a-Wearyin' for You." Edward Kneisel wrote the music for "Li'l Feller."

The first Mr. Stanton knew of "Mighty Lak' a Rose," which he had copyrighted, being set to music was when he heard a friend humming it to himself. After investigation he sold the words for $150.

"The long and the short of it was that right at that moment I happened to be a little short of cash, so I took the $150." He received a like amount for "Just a-Wearyin' for You."

By reason of a style and diction, the chief charm and power of which lie in its simple directness, Mr. Stanton was able to give to literature the quaint philosophy of the old-time southern negro and also the sentiment of the old-time South. Hundreds of his poems were written in the dialect of the appealing old negro of "befo' de war days."

BIRTH CONTROL BY RADIO STIRS WRATH

PARIS, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—A complaint has been lodged against Eiffel Tower radio station for outraging public decency. The complainant is Andre Boutrieux, chairman of the Association for Larger Families of Valenciennes. The trouble started owing to a recent broadcasting lecture on maternity. Boutrieux, who has the support of the chairman of the Radio Amateur Association of Northern France, in a document presented to the public prosecutor, asks the latter immediately to exercise powers to put a stop to scandalous propagation of antisocial theories.

TWO DIE, NINE HURT IN FALL OF DERRICK

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Two iron workers were killed, four others received injuries which surgeons fear will prove fatal and five more were shockingly hurt when they fell with a steel derrick which collapsed at 2 o'clock this afternoon and dropped sixty feet into the excavation on the site of the old Mills Building at the northeast corner of Broad street and Exchange Place, where a new building is under construction by the Thompson-Starrett Company for the Equitable Trust Company.

"IVAN THE TERRIBLE" CONDEMNED TO DEATH

KHARKOV (Ukrainia) Jan. 7. (AP)—Ivan Zaybev, known as "Ivan the Terrible" and leader of a band of desperadoes charged with wholesale murders, today was condemned to death by the Supreme Court. The Public Prosecutor said that victims of the band numbered more than a hundred.

RUSSIANS ORDERED TO AID POLICE IN ARRESTS

MOSCOW, Jan. 7. (AP) — Strong-armed citizens in soviet Russia in the future will be required to assist police arresting drunkards, disorderly persons and criminals in the street. A government decree, issued today, says that if such assistance is refused, the citizens themselves will be subject to arrest and punishment.

Chimney sweeps of London have formed a club named the "Dirty Dozen" to meet weekly and discuss their "profession."

Six Executed in Electric Chair During One Day

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Six men were sent to death in the electric chair in one day by Robert Elliott, executioner for New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. For this he will receive $900.

Early yesterday morning Elliott officiated at the execution of Edward J. Heinlein, John J. Devereaux and John J. McLaughlin, known as the "car-barn bandits," at the Massachusetts State prison in Boston, and then he made a 250-mile trip to Ossining, N. Y., to officiate last night at the execution in Sing Sing of Charles Goldson, Edgar Humes and George Williams, negroes.

Both the Massachusetts and New York trios had killed watchmen in attempted robberies.

The $900 is the largest sum paid an executioner in this section for a single day since 1911, when L. F. Davis executed seven men one morning in Sing Sing prison. He received $1750.

GIRL WAVERING BETWEEN LOVES

Young Divorcee Fighting for Custody of Son

Sensation for ex-Pastor Figures in Case

Elder Warned by Court to Forget Preacher

HENDERSON (Mich.) Jan. 7. (Ex-clusive)—Will a mother's love for her son win over a woman's infatuation for her former pastor?

This is the question friends of Mrs. Alice Kiesgen, 34 years of age, former soloist of the Forest-avenue Church of Christ, are asking tonight, follow-ing the filing of Circuit Judge John Conway that the young woman would give up her son, Max, 8 years of age, to Rupert Rev. George N. Harness, and a divorce.

The journal even by her mother and other members of her family, Mrs. Kiesgen pondered between calls at a local switchboard at a local ho-tel tonight over the question. The decision must be made before March 1, but, Mrs. Kiesgen must con-tend in the court by that time that Rev. Mr. Harness has been dropped from the

PASTOR DISMISSED

When Judge Vanderwerp was hand-ed down the opinion in which he held the minister and called his affair with Mrs. Kiesgen and a 17-year-old Hudson high school girl "not only a disgrace to his pro-fession, a new board of the Forest-avenue Church of Christ met and promptly dismissed the minister who had resigned when the storm broke two weeks ago, but had refused to give up the pulpit under a ninety-day call of the church. He had five days in which to serve under the ninety-day rule.

"It is the usual cold machinery of the law," agrees that Mrs. Kiesgen is not entitled to affection for her son, Max, who is entitled to "custody," but Judge Vanderwerp said Mrs. Kiesgen cannot give custody to the son if she contin-ues in the association for the minister. "Her continued conduct has shown her to be unfit."

Mrs. Kiesgen's mother and sister, both Hudson residents, took the stand against her at the time hearing as to the custody of the Seasons of her parents' actions in her conduct with the minister. Mrs. Kiesgen left her home, saying she must decide whether she is willing to give up the son. She left her parents' home Mrs. Kiesgen supported the boy by her work as a switchboard operator and

EATS EVERYTHING BUT DISHES

New Claimant to World's Gastronomic Laurels Devours Oysters by Dozens, Coffee by the Vat, Wine by the Quart and Tops it off With Couple of Jelly Rolls

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 7. (AP)—John Samuel Francis Dalton, gastronomist, has advanced his claim to the eating championship of the world. The record made some time ago by Dal-ton in a contest was, witnesses said:

Twelve dozen and eight oysters, three cups of coffee and one and a half quarts of wine, a box of crack-ers, two slices of jelly cake.

In a letter to the New Orleans States, Dalton claims that a light workout for him would be one bot-tle of tabasco sauce, fifty hard-boiled eggs and a dozen oysters, the last six with sugar. He would chase the meal with another bottle of tabasco sauce.

A reporter sent to investigate the claimant's eating capacity gave up the attempt to satisfy Dalton's appetite after he had drunk a bottle of ta-basco, eaten several dozen oysters and spent all the reporter's expense money for other food. Between oysters, Dalton threw in bananas, onions and bell peppers.

His manger said Dalton had just finished a light workout when visit-ed—"He just ate thirty-five bananas, eighteen onions and five bell pep-pers."

the $5 weekly alimony paid by her divorced husband, James P. Kiesgen.

Witnesses on both sides testified willingly as to Mrs. Kiesgen's fine character and the charges were di-rected largely against the minister who was blamed for Mrs. Kiesgen's difficulties.

BUILT NEW CHURCH

Rev. Mr. Harness came here from Tillamook, Or., two years ago and was in the public eye at once due to his activities in the Ku Klux Klan. He doubled the membership of the church and erected a new building and then stories were heard at church affairs and over family tables as to the conduct of the minister. Finally, Rev. Mr. Harness brought a $25,000 suit against five church women for slander. He dropped one suit, and offered to drop the others, but the defendants refused.

"We want to prove our stories true," they said. Then Mr. Kiesgen, who was divorced by his wife last May, brought suit against the min-ister for $10,000 for stealing the af-fections of Mrs. Kiesgen and he asked custody of the boy.

In the meantime a church trial was held and the minister exon-erated, although G. F. Denise, one of the three elders, testified Rev. Mr. Harness had admitted giving Mrs. Kiesgen a ring before she was di-vorced and keeping company with a young high school girl.

"But that isn't any crime, is it?" asked the elder in court.

A new church board resulted and Rev. Mr. Harness was summarily dis-missed.

MINISTERS' FAMED SONS POINTED OUT

Offspring of Preachers Own Tenth of Names in 'Who's Who,' Says Bishop

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Outstanding successes in the work of the world were recounted today by Bishop Ed-win Holt Highes of the Methodist Episcopal Church to prove the fal-lacy of the old saw about preach-ers' sons and deacons' daughters.

Emphasis in a preacher's home is not placed upon commercial success, he said, but he cited these sons of min-isters as successful in the market place: Edward H. Harriman, Levi P. Morton, Cecil Rhodes, Andrew Carne-gie, John F. Andrus, William C. Brown, John D. Archbold and Henry M. Flagler.

Three of the six largest Presbyte-rian colleges and the two greatest Baptist colleges are headed by preach-ers' children, he said.

In Who's Who in America of 12,000 names listed 1200 of them are names of children of preachers.

Bishop Highes was addressing the Society of Ministers' Sons and Daugh-ters in its campaign for the erec-tion of a memorial national tubercu-lar hospital, to be built as a unit of the National Tuberculosis Sanato-rium at Colorado Springs, Colo.

He cited a long list of ministers' sons successful in art, literature, poli-tics, statesmanship, among historians, in newspaper and magazine work, poetry and in science and inven-tion.

In contemporary journalism he list-ed Melville E. Stone, for years general manager and now counsellor of the Associated Press; Don Carlos Seitz, manager and now counselor of the the editors of the New York World; Bradford Merrill, manager of the New York American; Chester S. Lord, man-aging editor of the New York Sun, and the Patterson brothers of the Chicago Tribune.

"No preacher's boy ever goes far into this life without doing some-thing that displeases some one else," said the bishop. "Immediately comes the taunt: 'And you a preach-er's son.' One felt like having his privileges enlarged so he could ei-ther use a vigorous vocabulary or do a little vigorous fighting."

Man Believed Coast Autoist Shot to Death

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—A man who, from notebooks and papers found on him, is believed to have been John Glaubitz of Weed, Siskiyou county, this State, was found dying from several bullet wounds in Rose Canyon, near Pacific Beach, early this evening. Coroner Kelly, after an examination of the body and the scene of the shooting, said he believed the man had been shot while in an automobile, probably his own, and then thrown out.

The man's diary indicated that he had been making a tour south and had bought a 1927 license for his machine, a sedan, in Santa Barbara. He had several automobile road maps on him, with pencled markings in-dicating his daily runs.

No trace of the man's automobile was found by the police near the scene of the shooting, a little-used road some times taken as a short cut between San Diego and the north. The local police sent out a descrip-tion of the machine and its license number.

The police tonight are working on the theory that the man had been killed by some one whom he had picked up for a ride into San Diego. The dead man was about 50 years of age.

Young Appoints Two Judges to Fill Vacancies

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Gov. Young today appointed Joseph S. Koford as presiding justice of Di-vision II of the First District Court of Appeal to succeed Justice William H. Langdon, who was elected to the State Supreme Court last November.

The Governor described Koford as "one of the ablest judges of the Cali-fornia Superior Court, a man of re-markable judicial mind."

To succeed Judge Koford on the Alameda county Superior bench the Governor appointed Leon E. Gray, City Attorney of Oakland, and former Assemblyman.

INQUIRY SHOWS HUGE SHORTAGE

Chicago Securities Concern Chief Reported Missing

Less Than $100 Left After $630,000 Stock Sale

Local Residents Included in List of Investors

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Investiga-tion by the State's Attorney's office today of the Commonwealth Reserve Fund, a $1,000,000 corporation dealing in investment securities, was said to have revealed that $630,000 was re-alized from stock sales, but that less than $100 remained as a bank bal-ance, and that its president, Glenn Martin Meeker, last was heard from ten days ago in Vancouver, B. C.

Meeker, it also developed, was ousted as president five months ago be-cause the directors objected to his association with a blonde woman. He was said to have been a frequenter of night clubs and known as a man-about-town.

WIFE QUESTIONED

Mrs. Meeker was left nearly destitute with two children, and $400 in-terest was due on a mortgage on their home. She was questioned to-day at the State's Attorney's office.

A partial list of the 552 investors made public tonight revealed that they resided in Indiana, California, Ohio, Michigan and Kansas. Most of the investments ranged from $1000 to $5000. Rasmine and F. Kondrup, Hol-lywood, Cal., were listed as investors of $20,000 and Ivar and Elizabeth Olson of Chicago, of $12,000, the largest.

C. C. Woodmansee, first vice-presi-dent and treasurer, was questioned an hour today by two assistant State's Attorneys who expressed dissatisfac-tion with his answers. Woodmansee was anxious to depart for Newman, O., where, he said, his brother had died suddenly.

SUIT STARTED

The Commonwealth Reserve Fund was incorporated six years ago for $500,000, the capital later being dou-bled. The affairs of the concern reached the courts when suit was filed by Mrs. Anna Buckett of Chica-go, who invested $1500 in securities it offered. Recovery will be sought upon the ground that the State blue sky law was violated.

The attorneys later took Wood-mansee to a police station and said he would be charged with operating a confidence game.

BANDITS USE TORTURE TO GET JEWELS

Woman's Skin Seared by Lighted Cigars Until She Reveals Hidden Gems

CHICAGO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Bound and tortured for three hours while her husband was held prisoner in an ad-joining room of their suburban home last night, Mrs. Henry Everett finally collapsed and told three bandits where to find jewels and securities valued at $10,000.

"I'll die first," she screamed when they attempted to frighten her into giving the information, while Everett strained at his wire bands, but after three hours she yielded to the pain of burns inflicted with lighted cigar ends and revealed the location of a wall safe.

Everett, who managed to release himself a half hour later, found his wife seared on the shoulders and her bared arms, and even on her face with burns which physicians feared might leave her permanently dis-figured.

The Everetts, seized as they en-tered the house after returning from a picture show, were the second vic-tims within a few days of marauders employing similar methods.

Former Convict Vainly Hunted in Man's Vanishing

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7. (Exclu-sive)—Police tonight were twenty-four hours behind Willard Shannon, ex-convict, in their efforts to find and question him about the mysterious disappearance of Harold W. Lage, Stockton automobile salesman.

Lage has been missing since last Saturday and his disappearance has investigating officers divided in the-ory. Some believe him dead and others insist they have reason to be-lieve him alive. Lage's wife, stay-ing with relatives at Stockton, is re-ported on the verge of collapse and convinced her husband has been slain.

Shannon, it was announced to-night, spent most of last night in a garage at Bakersfield, sleeping in a car which Lage is said to have taken for an ostensible demonstration. Shannon slept intermittently with a .45-caliber pistol alongside him, ga-rage attendants reported. Trace of him was lost after he left the ga-rage.

INTEREST CUT ASKED

Modesto Senator Seeking Relief for Delinquent Irrigators

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—Interest on irrigation district tax sale certif-icates would be reduced from 24 per cent annually to 12 per cent under the provisions of a bill offered in the Sen-ate today by Senator Garrison, Mo-desto.

Irrigation districts have powers of taxation in California, the Senator ex-plained, and if, because of delinquent irrigation district assessments, a farmer's property is sold for taxes, the sale certificate, as a lien against the property, takes precedence over a first mortgage. The bill was framed with the view that 1 per cent per month, or 12 per cent a year, is gen-erous interest on a certificate which takes precedence over mortgages.

BERLIN BUDGET DRAWS ATTACK

Expenses Nearly Double Prewar Outlay

Sum of $500,000,000 Asked for Reparations

Citizens Find Solace in President's Needs

BERLIN, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Pub-lication of a budget of 10,500,000,000 gold marks ($2,625,000,000) for 1927, proposed by the German government, is greeted with virulent criticism by all parties in Germany. The budget provides 8,500,000,000 gold marks ($2,125,000,000) for general expenses and administration and 2,000,000,000 gold marks ($500,000,000) for repara-tions payments.

The politicians and taxpayers deem this too much, since the prewar budg-ets was only 5,500,000,000 gold marks ($1,375,000,000.) The Finance Minis-ter expects an income of 8,000,000,000 gold marks ($2,000,000,000) from taxes and customs, while the balance of the budget is covered by an in-ternal loan.

The only satisfaction the taxpayer finds in the bill presented to him today is the Presidential item. The total expenditures of President Von Hindenburg amount only to $149,000 in 1927, compared with $3,000,000, which Germany paid its princes be-fore the war. President Von Hinden-burg's pay envelope is $14,500 and expenses and allowances, $29,000.

Like the White House in Washing-ton, the German White House points proudly to its age. The palace in Wilhelmstrasse is 190 years of age and its administrators demand $12,-000 for "extraordinary repairs." They guarantee it to last for ages. While Germany's former sovereigns were dis-posed to have numerous castles, the budget shows that the President of Germany has only the White House in Wilhelmstrasse and a small hunt-ing lodge built in blockhouse style on Werblein Lake, near Berlin.

The main attacks of the press against the budget center on pro-posed increases in expenditure for the Reichswehr and German navy and Foreign Office.

The Democratic and Socialistic forces in Germany are uniting to force the Reichstag to reduce all expenses of a military character.

Champagne No Longer 'Staple' of Paris Cafes

PARIS, Jan. 8. (AP)—Champagne is no longer obligatory in the night life cabarets of Montmartre. Hard times have hit the place.

Signs are appearing outside some of the midnight "palaces" assuring the public that fizzy wine at 100 to 200 francs a bottle need not be bought.

Traveling clocks, an inch high, to be carried in handbags are seen in France.

I have often smoked Lucky Strike cigarettes and, frankly, I like them. Their flavor is good and they don't irritate the throat or vocal cords.

J. Wadsworth Jr.

Wadsworth's Powerful, Inspiring Voice

—clear, expressive, it has the quality which creates confidence

NEW YORK'S Senior Senator, noted for a speaking voice of rare impressiveness, safeguards his throat con-stantly, so as to be ever ready for a debate or a speech. His favorite cigarettes are Lucky Strikes, both for greater pleas-ure and throat protection.

Lucky Strikes have become the favorites of men whose priceless voices thrill their audiences, as they have with the millions because, first, they afford greater enjoyment and second, they are certain not to irritate even the most sensi-tive throat.

But in addition, a costly extra process—toasting for 45 minutes—develops the hidden flavors of the choicest to-baccos and at the same time removes all "bite" and harshness.

NEWS OF SOUTHERN COUNTIES

GAINES MAY NOT BE GIVEN TRIAL

Only Evidence Against Man is Own Testimony

Accused Jointly With Rev. Philip Goodwin

SANTA ANA, Jan. 7.—Faced by a rather staggering array of important criminal prosecutions at the very gateway to his term of office Dist.-Atty. Z. B. West, Jr., today announced that the trial of Albert Dewey Gaines charged with murder, has been postponed from January 11 to March 24.

West stated that he required more time in which to consider the Gaines case. The most prominent matter upon a heavy January calendar which included such important cases as the appeal of the gun club convictions and the trial of Fred C. Hathaway, prosecuted in connection with the San Diego forest fire.

The Hathaway case is set for trial in Justice Kenneth E. Morrison's court on January 11, the same day in which the Gaines murder case was scheduled to start in Superior Judge James L. Allen's court. The gun club appeals are set for hearing in Superior Judge Ames's court on January 17. This date also would have found the District Attorney's office in the midst of the Gaines murder trial. Such a conflict of dates would have been too severe a handicap to add to the shortness of time for preparation for the murder case, West stated.

The District Attorney admitted further, that he is not fully satisfied that the Gaines case should go to trial and that he desires more time in which to decide upon the proper course with reference to it.

Gaines, accused jointly with Rev. Philip A. Goodwin, American-Catholic priest, of murdering Joseph J. Patterson, Los Angeles bond broker, was used as the prosecution's star witness against Goodwin. Gaines's story was regarded as being responsible for the conviction of Goodwin, who received the death sentence. At the same time Gaines in his testimony cleared himself of actual connection with murder, though he admitted that he suspected that Goodwin had committed it.

The prosecution, it is said, has little evidence against Gaines other than his own story and the Gaines defense, it is known is confident that no conviction could be secured.

Aware of the possible weakness of the prosecution's case Dist.-Atty. West destres time he says, in which to delve into the case thoroughly and decide whether a trial would be justified or would be a costly waste of public money. The defense agreed to postponement and waived the legal time limit specified for setting the trial.

Judge Decides Woman Loses Teeth in Suit

ALHAMBRA, Jan. 7.—Judge William M. Northrup qualified as an expert in false teeth today in his justice court when he was called upon to decide upon the merits of a claim for damages brought against a local dentist by Mrs. R. S. Calin.

The color scheme of the teeth furnished to Mrs. Calin did not please her and formed the main point of contention in court. Finally Judge Northrup ordered the plaintiff to "try 'em on" in court so that he could judge for himself.

When Mrs. Calin posed with the dental work in place the court decided that the coloring was all that it should be.

Mrs. Calin had sued the dentist for recovery of $40 paid on the set of teeth and the dentist had filed a counter claim for $35 alleged to have been due on the contract. By the judicial decision the dentist gets the teeth back and Mrs. Calin won't have to pay the $35.

The Redlands branch of the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Bank was named depository for 1927.

JOLLY PARTY RAIDED

Corona Citizen, Friends, and Attorney in Other Booze Cases, Called on by Officers

CORONA, Jan. 7.—As a result of complaints of neighbors a raid was made on the home of Peter DeGeorge of 311 Belle street by local officers last evening.

When Officers George Gamble, William Patterson and George Baker raided the house they found what they term a full-fledged booze party in full swing.

DeGeorge's guests included about a dozen of his countrymen and their wives and Attorney Gerome L. Richardson, prominent attorney of Riverside.

This makes the third time that DeGeorge has been arrested for violation of the Volstead Act. For the first offense he paid a fine of $150 in Judge Stahl's court. His trial on the second offense is scheduled for the 24th inst.

Attorney Richardson was retained by DeGeorge in the first two cases and now that the attorney was caught in the net with the other members of the party citizens are wondering if Richardson will continue to represent his client.

The raid netted about four gallons of wine, one gallon of which was found on a table with several glasses in the room where the guests were seated.

Attorney Richardson evidently has a warm spot in the hearts of the DeGeorge family for suspended on the wall of the parlor may be found an enlarged picture of the Riverside attorney.

EARTH AT CALEXICO TREMBLES

Three Slight Tremors in Imperial Valley Recorded But Do No Damage

CALEXICO, Jan. 7.—Three slight tremors visited this city during the past twelve hours one at 11:50 last night, the second at 8:25 and the third at 11:54 this morning.

They were so light as to receive only passing notice from local people but visitors, who, less calloused to earthquakes, received a thrill.

Calexico's police department posted notices in the business district this morning warning pedestrians to walk in the middle of the street. Edward Mayberry, Los Angeles construction expert, who is in charge of building inspection work here now, declared that arcades overhanging the walks are especially hazardous and asked that the police order be issued.

The downtown district was practically without lights last night as a result of the order cutting off the electric current yesterday, but workmen are repairing lines today so that current will be available for refrigeration plants, telegraph and newspaper offices and other lines of industry where electricity is considered essential to community welfare. Mayberry and City Inspector J. P. Manuel today condemned the high school domestic science building and the City Jail and fire house as unsafe and ordered them razed.

D. Shaffer.

PLAN NEW BASE OF YACHT CLUB

Reports Revived at Long Beach After Conference

Alamitos Bay Anchorage Site to be Considered

Valuable City Publicity in Move Will Result

LONG BEACH, Jan. 7.—Reports that were current here a year ago to the effect that the Los Angeles Yacht Club is seeking concessions from the city of Long Beach with a view to moving the club's anchorage base from San Pedro to this city were revived here today by Mayor Filmore Condit, following a conference yesterday with yacht-club officials in Los Angeles.

The question of providing a suitable anchorage for a great number of sailing craft, belonging to the members of the Los Angeles Yacht Club, somewhere in Long Beach Harbor, or in Alamitos Bay, will be taken up with the Board of Harbor Commissioners here, the Mayor declared. Questions of concessions also will be placed before the City Council for discussion, the Mayor said.

Mayor Condit expressed the belief today that the establishment of the yacht club here would mean a wealth of valuable publicity for Long Beach and would be an asset for Long Beach merchants. The construction of a costly yacht club building somewhere along the Long Beach water front and probably in Alamitos Bay would be one of the results of the removal of the Los Angeles yachting organization to this city, it was pointed out.

New Arlington Cemetery for Legion Urged

BAKERSFIELD, Jan. 7.—An Arlington cemetery in Bakersfield, large enough to hold between 1000 and 2000 graves, is planned by Frank S. Reynolds Post, No. 26, American Legion. It will be discussed at the meeting of Kern County Council, American Legion, at McFarland, next Sunday.

The proposed cemetery will be an enlargement of the existing American Legion plot in Union Cemetery, where forty veterans are already buried, but which is already proving inadequate for the purpose for which it was intended.

Though marked with a granite monument, the plot today holds graves which are marked only by individual wooden boards. The promotion of the "Arlington" plan, however, will effect the systematic marking of individual graves with small concrete blocks set with brass plates bearing the engraving of the veteran's name, rank and date of death. A hole in the concrete block will be provided for white-painted metal crosses, which have been standardized in government national cemeteries.

CHINAMAN HELD FOR TRIAL FOR ASSAULT

ANAHEIM, Jan. 7. — Yee Chong, well-known local Chinese, is in the local jail today facing a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Chong is alleged to have placed a severe strain on international relations here yesterday when he invaded the home of Flodora Placentia at 119 West Charles street, and attacked him with a large butcher knife. According to a report made to local police by Placentia, Chong broke his way into Placentia's home, knocked Mrs. Placentia down and, cursing fluently, proceeded to attack Placentia. The battle took the combatants into the front yard, where passersby separated them and called police. Placentia was not injured by the knife. Chong was placed under arrest after a complaint had been sworn to by Placentia. No motive for the attack has been learned, it is alleged by police.

DR. MILLIKAN RETURNS

Declares Prof. Pupin Misquoted on Statement That Other Worlds Calling Us by Radio

PASADENA, Jan. 7.—Dr. Robert A. Millikan, head of the California Institute of Technology, returned to Pasadena today from an eastern trip during which he presided at a meeting of the American Committee on Intellectual Co-operation in New York, a nonpolitical organization composed of eminent leaders in various fields of though which has as its main object the promotion of international understanding.

Dr Millikan, who is chairman of the group, said that the committee is making considerable progress along this line, and while avoiding the politica battles which accompany the question of this country's relation to the League of Nations, is co-operating in so far as possible with the Committee on Intellectual Co-operation at Geneva.

The work of the American committe. includes the selection of the twenty-five most important books published in this country each year, to be reissued at Geneva; the eradication of national projudices from history textbooks and other matters of a nonpolitical nature. The comm..tee is, of course, sympathetic with the aims of the League of Nations.

Breasted of the University of Chicago; Elihu Root, at whose office the recent meeting was held, and Dr. Vernon Kellogg, secretary of the National Research Council, are among the members of the American committee.

During his trip, Dr. Millikan also conferred with Secretary of Commerce Hoover and others, concerning the end wment fund which the National Research Council is raising. He also attended a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Philadelphia, but did not speak.

Questioned about a news service's account of the address of Dr. Michael I. Pupin of Columbia University, which quoted Dr. Pupin as saying that "other worlds are calling to the earth by radio," Dr. Millikan declared that the eastern scientist was misquoted and that he made no such statement.

Dr. Millikan spoke before the national student conference of the Y..C.A. and Y.W.C.A. in Milwaukee, and at Denver and the University of Wyoming.

He said today that he and Dr. G. Harvey Cameron expect to report next spring on the results of their recent South American investigations into the nature of the cosmic ray, most powerful ray known to science, discovery of which Dr. Millikan announced in the summer of 1925.

VAN NUYS, Jan. 7.—Clifford Vanciel, 21 years of age, is being held here by Police on a charge of stealing the automobile of Larry Semon, Hollywood picture actor, after a chase on Victory Boulevard, in which Detective Newstetter threatened to shoot Vanciel unless he stopped and surrendered.

Newstetter first saw Vanciel in the Hupmobile roadster at Lankershim Boulevard and Victory Boulevard. A Hollywood woman and a Van Nuys woman were in the car. Vanciel suddenly opened his throttle and sped west on Victory Boulevard toward Woodman avenue, with Newstetter in pursuit. After a chase of two or three miles the detective boarded Vanciel's car.

In the car also were a belt and pistol holster which Vanciel told Newstetter he had stolen from the San Fernando police station. He said he also had taken a pistol but had thrown it away while he was pursued by the detective.

Vanciel is not unknown to the valley police, l ving at previous times been under arrest for various charges.

VENTURA HOTEL MAY BE CLOSED

Grand Jury Recommends Abatement Suit

Raided Four Times, Hooch Found in Rooms

Owner Twice Fined and Case Now Pending

VENTURA, Jan. 7. — The county grand jury, in session today, brought in a written recommendation that the District Attorney at once start proceedings to padlock the Hotel Ventura, the largest hotel in the city, whose owner, Gus A. Berg, has twice been fined for liquor violations. Another case against Berg is now pending in the United States courts.

Following is the grand jury's report:

"We, the grand jury of the county of Ventura, State of California, hereby recommend that the District Attorney of the county of Ventura take action to abate the premises located at 845 Main street, in the city of Ventura, county of Ventura, State of California, and known as the Hotel Ventura, by reason of such premises being used in violation of the national prohibition act.

[Signed]

"HOUSTON B. REINHARDT, "Secretary. "L. T. SHARP, "Foreman."

Berg, who was arrested in Santa Barbara after Sheriff Clark, Undersheriff Burley, Deputy Sheriff Suyter and others had found ninety-six quarts of gin and wine reposing in the linen room of the hotel, pleaded guilty to the charge of possession of liquor when he was brought before Judge Malvern Dimmick last night and paid a fine of $500.

The only explanation offered was that he had intended for some time to take the liquor out and destroy it, but that he had been so busy with business affairs here and in Santa Barbara that he had never found time to do it.

After Berg was brought back from Santa Barbara, he was taken to the hotel, where he produced a key to another room for which the officers had a search warrant. In this room the officers found about ten gallons of liquor. No extra charge of possession was placed against Berg on this find, the liquor being counted in along with the other ninety-six quarts found earlier in the day.

Berg first came into the clutches of the law in Ventura several months ago when the city police raided the hotel, found a large quantity of "bonded" whiskies, gin and wines, and arrested Berg. At that time he pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $500.

About a week ago Berg was arrested by Sheriff Clark on request of the Federal prohibition headquarters in Los Angeles, it being reported by the United States Marshal in Los Angeles that Berg was wanted for a sale of liquor made some time ago.

He was taken to Los Angeles, where he pleaded not guilty and was released under bail of $1500.

According to word from Los Angeles this morning, he is to be heard probably Monday in Federal court in Los Angeles on the charge.

The arrest of Berg came as a climax to a series of raids "pulled" by Sheriff Clark and his deputies the first half of this week in a clean-up campaign over the entire county. According to Sheriff Clark, twenty-three persons were arrested in these raids.

WANTS MAIL SERVICE

Lankershim Makes Another Move for Free Delivery System

LANKERSHIM, Jan. 7.—Postmaster Niblack has formally notified members of the Chamber of Commerce that he has started work on obtaining mail delivery on the streets of Lankershim, and that if property owners will co-operate there will be a free city delivery installed here by next July 1. He stated that the Lankershim population justified the improvement but that the required number of sidewalks in the townsite is still lacking.

Postmaster Niblack is now obtaining information as to the mileage of walks now laid, the number under improvement proceedings and where no provisions as yet have been made for the sidewalks as required by the national postal authorities. When the data are compiled a strenuous effor will be made to connect up all sidewalk links and to lay the other small number of walks still needed.

Postmaster Niblack states that he believes the sidewalk program can be completed by July 1, at which time, he has reason to believe that the postal authorities will grant the delivery service. Because of the lack of the service the Lankershim postoffice has been in a congested state for more than a year.

When the little girl complied the person lured her to a lonely spot near the aviation field. After assaulting the child the man drove his car back to the center of the city and left the girl standing in the street with her clothes badly torn. The father of the girl called the police and Louise tearfully told her story to Officer Earl R. Bell. Officer Bell enlisted private citizens and calling every available officer, scoured the city for the assailant.

Boy Charged as Drunk When His Car Hits Another

PASADENA, Jan. 7.—The combination of alcohol, an automobile and a 16-year-old boy left John Kitchen, 16, 213 South Avenue 60, Los Angeles, too sick to appear in Police Court this morning, where he is charged with intoxication, reckless driving and failure to give assistance after an accident.

According to Sergt. Lynn Harrison of the local police force, who arrested the youth late last night, he crashed into the machine of Thomas H. GLENDALE, Jan. 7.—Rushing out of the Central Fire Station on a call early this morning, Glendale's new fire truck, that was put in service a short time ago, collided with a Glendale and Montrose car for Eagle Rock, smashing all of the ladders on the truck and damaging the car to the extent of about $1000.

The front of the street car was practically ripped off in the crash. All the firemen and the street-car passengers escaped unhurt. It is charged the defendant was notified that the publication had not been authorized by Chaplin or anyone empowered to act for him.

AUTHOR TELLS OF PREPARING ARTICLE

Alfred Reeves, manager of the Chaplin studios and business associate of the comedian, yesterday declared he was not familiar with the details of the Pictorial Review suit.

Reeves stated, however, that during his last conversation with Chaplin, more than a month ago, the comedian told him he had authorized attorneys to file a suit against the Pictorial Review. At that time, Reeves declared, Chaplin intended to base his suit upon the fact that the Chaplin name was being used for advertising purposes and was intended to sell the magazine.

"Mr. Chaplin has always prevented his name or picture being used in any advertising campaign," Reeves said. "He stopped the production of a motion picture of his life which was being made in England and has stopped other people from using his name."

Reeves also declared Chaplin has stated many times that if his life story is to be written or printed Chaplin himself will write it or supervise it.

Data for his story of the life of Chaplin was gathered during eighteen months that he was associated with Chaplin as a member of his production staff, Tully told the Associated Press.

"I took the job with this story in view," said Tully. "Throughout that time I gathered my information and took copious notes. I'm sure that my articles are correct. I've had this story in mind for a long time because I've been intrigued by Chaplin's character."

The "hobo author," who has sketched many of the film stars in magazine articles, said he had only the friendliest feelings for Chaplin, but said he had not seen the comedian for the last year.

Tully's book, "Jarnegen," a story of the films and which created considerable furor among the motion-picture people, had offended Chaplin, the author said.

Rum Ships' Coast Guard Aide Tells Punishment

Crew Taken to Sea in Chains to Force Confession

Cold, Starvation, Abuse, Lot of Double Dealers

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—After the crew of the Coast Guard boat CG-126 had been detected fraternizing with and aiding rum-runners they had been set to watch, they were taken to sea in a cutter and kept in solitary confinement, chained hand and foot and fed on rotten meat until they confessed, their captain testified under cross-examination today.

Nicholas Brown of Boston, former skipper of the CG-126 and government witness in the trial of eighteen members of the so-called Kelly-Costello international rum ring, was taken over by the defense this afternoon. Questions concerning the treatment accorded him and his crew after their disloyalty was discovered brought forth answers scorching with bitterness.

CHAINED IN BRIG

"We were taken aboard the Coast Guard cutter Seneca," he said, "and taken out to sea. We were chained with leg irons and manacles to stanchions in the musty forecastle, not all together, but each one separated from the others in solitary confinement. We were fed rotten meat."

Day after day they were kept in the improvised dungeon, the witness said, and denied all opportunity to communicate with friends or lawyers. It was midwinter, cold and little air entered the closed compartments.

Brown said he did not know whether it was six or seven days they were kept there. "It was a madhouse and I was nearly out of my head," he added.

When he finally "come through," Brown said, he was taken ashore and to the office of A. Bruce Bielaski, "unscrambler" prohibition chief, where he made a signed confession. He was then admitted to bail and allowed to go home.

GUARDS TURN WAITERS

Before he was turned over to the defense, Brown told in detail of the friendly relations which existed between his men and the rum-runners. The CG-126 was assigned to rum row to enforce the law, but temptation in the form of bribes and plenty of free liquor caused the crew to throw in their lot with the rum-runners.

The CG-126 acted as convoy for fishing boats taking liquor ashore, ran a personal ferry service between rum row and land for supercargoes of the rum ships, and even carried loads of liquor ashore itself.

"I was drunk or at least drinking most of the time," Brown said.

"What sort of stuff did you drink?" he was asked.

"Champagne, generally," he answered, "or ale. Sometimes whisky. We were kept well supplied with ale and fresh meat."

PECULIAR SECT LOSING GROUND

Shaker Adherents Less Than 500 by Count

Cult Members Pacifists in Time of Wars

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (Exclusive.) After an existence of more than 150 years the religious sect known as Shakers is dying out, and unless there is some unusual revival within a few years it will have disappeared entirely. Its passing is due to one of the important tenets of the faith—that there shall be no marriage or living in marriage among members. Celibacy is strictly adhered to, consequently there can be no additions to the sect save by proselyting, and so far as is known no efforts now are made to gain converts.

In fact, whole congregations and communities of the Shakers have already disappeared. The membership was never large, being less than 5000 at its maximum, but it dominated seventeen communities in the States of New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine, Ohio, Connecticut and Kentucky, was exceedingly prosperous and made important contributions to agriculture and industry.

SECT VANISHING

Today, it is reported, there are less than 500 of them left. Lebanon, O., that once was one of the strongest of their communities, now has but a single Shaker among its inhabitants and about the only colonies are those at New Lebanon, N. Y., East Canterbury, N. H.; Pittsfield, Mass., and West Albany, N. Y. Moreover, the fertile farm lands they once owned and tilled and managed so successfully have for the most part passed into the possession of others and there are few evidences left of the wealth they amassed.

The beginnings of Shakerism date back to 1747 in England, when a group of Quakers formed themselves into a separate branch of their church. They became known as the Shaking Quakers, or Shakers, because of their practice under religious excitement of jerking or twitching their heads, arms and legs. One of the leaders of this congregation was Jane Wardlaw and it was she who in 1758 converted Ann Lee, who was the real founder of the Shaker sect. Ann Lee became a preacher and shortly afterward was imprisoned at Manchester on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Upon her release she began preaching again, and announced that Christ had appeared to her in prison and had become one with her in form and spirit. She gave herself the title of "Ann the Word," but her followers called her "Mother Ann." She was constantly in trouble with the authorities and finally decided she would no longer endure what she regarded as persecution and emigrated, with seven of her associates, to America in 1774 and founded the first Shaker settlement at Watervliet, N. Y.

FIRST PACIFISTS

It was Ann Lee who laid down the basic principles of the religion, which included such radical departures as the separation of the sexes and the owning in common of all property. The Shakers were also pacifists to an even more pronounced degree than the Quakers and Mother Ann preached against the War of Independence, forbidding her followers to take any part in it. This not only attracted attention to the new sect, but it also earned Mother Ann a term of imprisonment. Later, during the War of 1812 and during the Civil War, others of the sect were similarly punished for refusal to do military duty when called upon by their country.

When Mother Ann died in 1784 she had witnessed the establishment of two new Shaker communities, one at Hancock and the other on Mt. Lebanon, New Lebanon, N. Y., and the first Shaker meeting-house was opened on Mt. Lebanon the year following her death.

Joseph Meacham, one of her successors, gave the Shakers their ceasaful organization, which combines effective business methods with strict adherence to the tenets of their faith. The Shakers believe that God is king; that the sin of Adam is atoned, and that man is free of all errors but his own; that every human being will be saved; and that the earth is heaven, at present soiled and stained, but ready to be brightened by love and labor. They believe in the immediate revelations of the Holy Ghost, and they regard angels and other spirits as maintaining companionship and intercourse with those who have been purified and exalted by gifts of grace. They believe that at death man merely throws off the bodily garment and changes the form of his existence. They expect no resurrection of the body, the spirit, when it has left the mortal frame, being done with it.

ABSTEMIOUS LOT

In the matter of daily life the Shakers adhere to some unusual practices aside from that requiring the men and women, even those who had been married, to live together as brothers and sisters. The use of tobacco is prohibited, alcoholic liquors are known only as medicine, and their diet includes neither meat nor fish. Members of the sect attribute their almost universal longevity to their abstinence from meat as a food, and it has been asserted that no Shaker ever suffered from cancer.

In the Shaker communities no drones are tolerated. Everybody works; the men in field, garden, factory, and shop, while the women do the cooking and housework and much of the tailoring and repairing, prepare seeds and medicines for market and make various dairy products. Agriculture was their chief industry at first and the men of the sect seemed to be singularly gifted in selecting good land and them in making it amazingly productive. The result was that their communities became not merely self-supporting but several of them grew to be decidedly prosperous.

And they did other things besides farm successfully. The first buzz-saw is said to have come out of a Shaker shop and to their inventive genius is also credited the first metallic pen. They originated the drying of sweet corn for food and were reputed to be the first people in the United States to sell garden seeds in packets. They made furniture that was substantial, attractive and marketable, they originated the broom business and they were responsible for the botanic practice of medicine.

In some of their communities they were so prosperous that their neighbors became jealous of them, as well as critical of their religious beliefs and practices and this led to discrimination against them in local affairs and in some instances even to persecution.

Landis Gives Scandal Verdict Wednesday

INVESTIGATION ENDS SUDDENLY

Chick Gandil Substantiates Risberg's Story

Declares Sox Paid Tigers for Sloughing Series

Judge to Render Decision Early Next Week

JUDGE LANDIS.

Kenaw Mountain Landis, $65,000-a-year commissioner of baseball, who acted as judge, jury and inquisitor in the dramatic trial, announced he would give his decision involving the fate of some of the greatest stars in the game, at 10 o'clock next Wednesday morning.

If found guilty, these players will be banished from organized baseball, as were their accusers, Swede Risberg, and Chick Gandil, cast out of the game for their connection with the crooked world's series of 1919.

Risberg charged and Gandil today substantiated his story, that the White Sox pooled $45 apiece to pay the Tigers fo. sloughing the four-game series to the White Sox, September 2 and 3, 1917, so the White Sox could edge out Boston in the race for the American League pennant.

Branding these charges an "absolute lie" thirty-four players of the past and present members of those teams, declared the pool was a present for the Tiger victories over Boston. In support of this, Bill James, the Detroit pitcher, who received the money from the Sox—Risberg and Gandil—testified the told him it was for the Tigers' good work in beating Boston.

James denied vigorously Gandil's story that they two had framed the 1917 Labor Day series.

James said Gandil made him an offer of $200 for each Detroit pitcher who would beat Boston, and nothing was said about the Tigers tossing games to the White Sox.

TOD MORGAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Phil McGraw of Detroit, defeated Tod Morgan of Seattle, junior lightweight champion, in a ten-round contest at Madison Square Garden tonight. McGraw piled up an early lead that Morgan could not overcome.

No title was at stake, both fighters being over the junior lightweight limit. The bout was at coatchweight with Morgan weighing 133 and McGraw, 134 1-2.

Morgan was bleeding freely from the nose at the close, but finished gamely. At the final bell both boxers were attempting to slug, although both seemed tired. The decision was received by the crowd with mingled cheers and jeers.

The referee and one judge voted McGraw the winner, while the other judge thought it was a draw.

Morgan let McGraw assume the lead and the champion had to set out in the sixth round to overcome a long handicap. He proved unequal to the task for, although he won the sixth, seventh and eighth rounds, McGraw was still full of fight and was boxing furiously at the close.

McGraw scored repeatedly with

Harry Cooper, Los Angeles; defending titlist; Tommy Armour, Washington, D. C., who crashed a course record to win the Long Beach open last week, and Eddie Loos, Cleveland stylist, stroked home with perfect 71's to tie with Johnny Farrell of New York in the runner-up bracket.

George Von Elm, national amateur champ—from no place else but here—drew enough bad breaks coming home to slip up to a 72, but Bill Mehlhorn, Los Angeles (probably,) Al Watrous, Grand Rapids; MacDonald Smith, New York; John Black, Kansas; Bill Mader, Montana, and Hutt Martin and Dick Linares of Los Angeles, equaled El Caballero par with 72's. E. S. "Scotty" Armstrong, local amateur veteran from Midwick, also slipped into this distinguished bracket.

Highlights of $10,000 Open

Four men broke El Caballero par by two strokes in the opening round—Bobby Cruickshank, Mike Brady, Ed Dudley and Charley Guest. Each shot a 70.

• • •

The best score registered on the first nine holes was a 34, Bobby Cruickshank, Harry Cooper and Bill Mehlhorn turning the trick.

Four men turned the last nine in two under par—34—Mike Brady, Ed Dudley, Hutt Martin and Everett Seaver.

• • •

The biggest gallery followed George Von Elm, the national amateur champion, and Al Watrous of Grand Rapids, Mich. The latter was even pars for the eighteen holes, while Von Elm was one over.

• • •

Harry Cooper, winner of last year's $10,000 open, missed his chance for a 70 by dubbing a short chip shot to the eighteenth green. He took 71.

• • •

Jim Mason of Caspar, Wyo., made the only hole in one. He rolled in his tee shot to the 175-yard eighth green.

• • •

John Golden of Paterson, N. J., scored an eagle 2 on the seventh hode. It was a 200-yard approach shot.

• • •

It took David Martin, the Southern California junior champion, four strokes to get out of the mud when he wandered off the fairway to the fourth hole. The hole, a par 4, cost him nine strokes.

• • •

At the fifth tee Cyril Walker, former national open champion, bawled out the gallery for tramping on his heels, and invited Von Elm and Watrous to go through and take their gallery with 'em. "I don't mind telling you we're in this game," Walker said.

• • •

• • •

An unplayable lie cost Bill Mehlhorn two strokes on the third hole. He rounded the turn in 34, whereas if luck had been with him he might have made it in 32—four under par.

• • •

GEORGE YOUNG, CANADA CHAMP, IS PICKED AS REAL CONTENDER FOR CATALINA PRIZE BY ROSS

Despite the fact that a preponderance of the 148 swimmers entered in the William Wrigley's $40,000 Catalina Channel swim are Americans, there is a strong possibility that the prize money will go to an outsider.

William Wrigley Jr.

Norman Ross, San Francisco's "Big Moose," who is one of the favorites to capture the men's prize of $25,000, provided the channel is conquered, believes that George Young, Canadian amateur long-distance swimming champion, is going to prove a strong contender for Yankee mermen and mermaids.

Ross and Young are at present working out over at Catalina Island and Norman has seen enough of the Canadian in action to pick him as one of the men to beat. Like most long-distance swimmers, Young is big and comparable to Ross in that he too, is a speedy paddler as far as speed goes in lengthy aquatic jaunts.

[illegible] Chaffey, giant Ventura entry, is another possible victor [illegible] is working out at Catalina. Henry Sullivan and Charley Toth, Yankee conquerors of the English Channel, are given strong chances to beat the cold waters and tides in the Catalina Channel, but their style of swimming is slow and steady instead of speedy so, even though they do complete the swim, they're liable to be out of the money because paddlers like Ross and Young and Chaffey are liable to beat them across. If Ross, Young and Chaffey and their speedy styles are unable to last it out, Toth and Sullivan will be conceded better chances of dragging down the $25,000.

Aside from Ross, Young and Chaffey, there are five other Catalina Channel swim entries doing their training over at the pleasure isle. They are "Squirrel" De Arce, oftimes referred to as the "Sheik of Catalina," where he acts in the capacity of life guard during the summer season.

Psychology is a great power if properly applied, according to the professors who deal in matters pertaining to mental digestion. Mike Godet, well-known Occidental cassaba artist, was "it" yesterday afternoon when he unexpectedly appeared from out of the ether in his abbreviated court costume, thereby removing several wrinkles from the over burdened brow of Coach Eddie Kienholz who is now looking forward to giving the Bruins quite a battle when the two quintets uncork the Southern California Conference basketball season tonight in the new Occidental gymnasium.

Jack Ketchum

Godet's return to the fold would not have caused so much excitement had he returned from the East late tonight, according to schedule, but arriving a day before the first and crucial game of the season, zoomed the Bengals' spirits extensively. Kienholz's first-string guard was found to be in first-class shape although being away from school a week for a fraternity delegation meeting.

With Godet in the line-up Kienholz will have his full strength to combat the Bruins, who are at present slightly flushed from a 21-to-17 victory over Stanford. Good guards should prove important in the game as Coach Caddy Works's California five plays an offensive game and if the Tigers can stem Jack Ketchum's accurate heaves, they may be able to pull through with a victory.

Kienholz has a good pair of forwards in Capt. Solly Mishkin and Ross Parks, but Oxy fans have expressed doubts as to the marksmanship ability of the pair. So far this year the boys have failed to hit the basket with any degree of accuracy and as Works has a nifty pair of guards in Jim Armstrong and Ralph Bunche, the Brumbs will have to make their shots snappy.

The Bruins uncovered a new star in Ar. (Rabbit) Williams, a diminutive forward, who played a whirlwind game at Stanford. Williams will probably be given his chance tonight as neither Sunseri or Balter, former freshman stars, have been playing up to snuff.

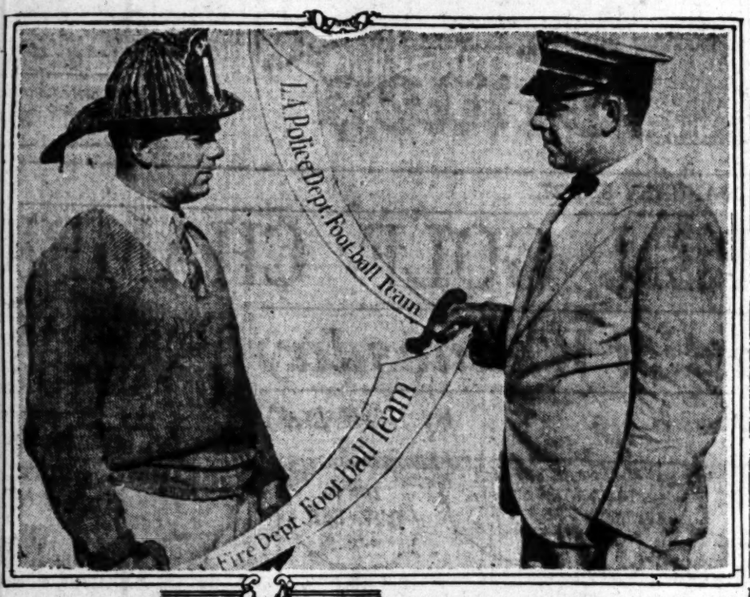
While the Bruins are highly favored on all sides, Works's quintet has played in and out basketball all season, putting up a great game one night and playing listlessly the next. The Bruins are also inclined to be a bit cocky, which bothers Works considerably, but they are expected to play their best against Oxy, and their best appears to be better than the Tigers' best.

Oxy will probably have a slight edge at center where Ted Ellsworth will tip the ball for the Tigers. Milo Young, also of last year's freshman five, pivots the Branch. Young is rapidly coming along and is expected to be a valuable man for the next two years.

Besides the men mentioned, Kenneth Walker, Charles Osgood, and the Black brothers make up the Oxy squad. Julius Blum is the long Branch gub guard.

POLICE, FIREMEN GAME IS TOSS-UP

Teams in Pink for Coliseum Grid Game This Afternoon



There's Rivalry in the Blewett Family

Coach Bill Blewett, left, mentor of the Firemen eleven, and Coach Jim Blewett, who performs a similar service for the cops, will be enemies for this afternoon at least. Both claim their respective team will win so it ought to be a full afternoon for the public.

WITH both teams in the pink of condition and all indications pointing to a bright and sunny afternoon, the big gridiron battle between the Firemen and the Policemen at the Coliseum this afternoon should be one of the most exciting games of the season.

The idea uppermost in the minds of the police department eleven is to give their rivals the Firemen, a good trouncing, and to back up their intentions their backfield combination is formed of the most powerful bunch of men obtainable, Hill at quarter, Glover left half, Caddell at right and Rose playing fullback. The kicking and passing of this combination is exceptionally strong, according to Coach John Blewett, who is placing his hopes of success on this outfit. The forward wall of the police team has weight and experience and should be able to hold the Smoke Eaters.

TWENTY ONE YEARS of BASE BALL

by Eddie Collins

[Copyright, 1927, by North American Newspaper Alliance.]

VI.—BLOCKING DOUBLE STEALS

After our old infield, Barry, Baker, McInnis and I, had been working together about two seasons, necessity, meaning my none-too-strong throwing arm, compelled us to adopt an original method for breaking up double steals. After considerable practice it worked very well, but not without several amusing results when the scheme was new.

It required extraordinary effort for me to get the ball to the plate, in time to head off a fast man, when I took the throw at second, so I proposed to Barry that with runners on first and third, I should cut in behind the pitcher when the man on first started for second. If the runner on third remained there I would open up my hands and Jack could catch the ball and get the runner going into second.

We worked on this for some time in morning practice and decided we would try it out on Cobb and Bush, Detroit being due in Philly for a series just at that time. We wanted especially to circumvent this pair for they took great delight in making us trouble and up to that time had been more successful than we liked.

The chance came soon enough. Early in the first game Bush got on with one out and Ty sent him to third with a hit. Jack and I knew what to expect and we were not disappointed. Cobb started on the first pitch. I cut in behind the pitcher to intercept the throw and nail Bush at the plate, but foxy Donie never moved off the bag. I opened my hands as per agreement and rehearsal, but Barry also was watching Bush and did not have time to put up his hands after the ball went through and it hit him full in the stomach, knocking him over. Cobb slid into second and then got up and gave us the hoarse hoot.

After that experience Jack said he would remember to keep his eye on the ball and let me watch the man at third. He did, and we pulled the play successfully several times before we left home.

Our first stop on the next trip was New York. That was quite awhile ago for the Yankees were playing up on the hilltop grounds. Jack Sheridan umpired all alone.

During the game Chase reached third, and Frank LaPorte, who was not noted for speed, was on first. La Porte started for second and I hastened over to my new position. Sheridan was standing behind the pitcher and when the throw came I made such a good bluff at catching the ball that Chase dove head first back to third, he having edged off a few steps in anticipation of a break for the plate.

Of course, I opened up my hands and let the ball pass through. Barry took it and tagged LaPorte out, standing up, ten feet or more in front of second. It was the third out and with the tag, Jack turned, threw his glove out on the grass back of short and started for the bench.

Now I not only fooled Chase but, also, Umpire Sheridan. When he saw me, as he supposed, catch the ball, he went to LaPorte safe without hardly looking around and started for the plate to take up his position there. To put it mildly, I was surprised to see the decision, and I yelled: "You blind, blankety, blank, can't you see anything?"

Sheridan never stood for any rough talk and turned wrathfully to see who had the temerity to talk like that to him. As he turned around he saw Barry throwing away his glove, high in the air.

Then I explained to him what had really happened but did not stress the fact that it was I who had made the protest. When the umpire realized how the play had gone it was too late to do anything and poor Barry spent the rest of the game wondering why he had been the goat for Sheridan's mistake.

Barry and I were in another peculiar play that was made in Detroit. It seemed that something always happened when we met the Tigers. A player named Lathers was at bat with one out and a man on first. He made a drive that took a bad hop the ball hitting me full on the nose, between my eyes and breaking an artery. The ball bounced from my face over to Barry, who grabbed it, stepped on second and threw to first making a double play. My involuntary assist kept me out of the game several days.

day—all contestants were accorded varying degrees of encouragement by wandering galleries—so much so in fact that unless officials in charge of promised ropes get under way today, many contesting golfers are going to be greatly handicapped.

Charlie Guest of Lakeside, playing several twosomes in front of Von Elm and Watrous, who drew the principal gallery, dropped pars consistently through a beautiful exhibition of iron work that has dropped strokes from the good-looking professional's game. Guest was never in danger, played every shot for the flag and needed a par for a 71, but elected to drop a fine birdie for the first 70 of the day.

VON ELM SAFE

Von Elm played the best golf of the day through thirteen holes, and was two under. His tee shot to fourteen rolled over the green to the bottom of the hill—and for the first time in many moons, "Jiggs" elected to lift his head. The resultant five on a hole he has parred with 3's consistently left him all square. He hooked into the basin of a tree going to sixteen and was again penalized one stroke when a left handed club might have made a par four possible. He finished in great shape and will be out there today, golfing with a stroke economy that is going to be very useful at the end of the 72-hole grind tomorrow.

Watrous tempered sound golf with enough breaks yesterday to finish with a 72, even par, while Bill Mehlhorn, away to a fine start, lost two strokes through an unplayable lie going to four. William more than evened the count with birdies on two, six and nine and was 34 at the turn, two under. He slipped one over on twelve and thirteen but dropped his final birdie on eighteen to finish even, with a 72.

Mike Brady, New York veteran, has been threatening to putt in California for several weeks past, and Mike recovered his touch yesterday. He played careful golf and ran down an eight-foot putt for his final birdie, on eighteen, and his first lap total of 70 that leaves him one of the most dangerous challengers in the championship.

Copper got away to a fine start also. The youthful defending champ played his shots with an unshakable confidence that will always stamp Harry as a dangerous exponent. He missed a short approach to eighteen, but laid his fourth ten feet from the pin and was down with one putt for his final par and 71.

MacDonald Smith, Great Neck (L. I.) stylist, experienced veteran with a world of golf knowledge, found the El Caballero course very much to his liking and would have scored a 70 just as easily as the 72 that rewarded his efforts. Mac's putter is functioning in fine style and he has started his seventy-two-hole golfing journey that should land him very near the top of the golf struggle that is going to develop into a great classic.

Ed Dudley won't hole approach shots daily, but the visiting star is the most promising golfer of the field. Dudley is due for a lot of seasoning—experience on partial-stroke economy, according to Bill Mehlhorn, but his sound exhibition yesterday was not a flash in the pan and his coolness under fire may carry the popular youngster right over the top in the battle that will be resumed today.

ARMOUR CAREFUL

Tommy Armour, of the Congressional Country Club—recreational homes of Senators and Congressmen in Washington, was very well satisfied with his 71 yesterday. Tommy will start his great drive Sunday morning, when the real weeding-out process will get under way. He made no mistakes yesterday—and one stroke behind the leaders is not bad about the same as a first-day lead to the soft-spoken and ultra-popular "Tommy."

Johnny Farrell, one of the finest examples of just what the professional golfer of today really is—started play yesterday, still suffering from boils that Johnny claims his room-mate, Joe Turness, adopted before leaving New York. Johnny has been in bed for the past four days with aforementioned boils, yet he stepped right out yesterday and scored a great 71—strokes better than even Turness dared hope for. Turness played much better golf than his score of 78 would indicate.

Bobby Cruickshank is just about ready to step out and win himself a championship. Bobby played faultless golf yesterday and was more than entitled to his 70 that tied the leaders for first-day honors.

No greater example of the class of the present play could possibly be advanced than the names of the seventeen championship contenders who equaled or bettered El Caballero par yesterday. Up until the time Charlie Guest swept home with his majestic 70—less than six exponents had been able to equal the figures used to designate tee and greens perfection—as numerically decided by golf experts—and El Caballero has been open with marvelous putting surfaces and good fairways, for nearly two years.

Immaculately clad scoring units combined in a scattered symphony of sensational shots that have never been excelled in even national championship, and through the barrage of stellar contestants, Eddie Loos, well in the van of the representative field, chalked up a par 5 on nine and was even par at the turn. Eddie collected birdies on seventeen and eighteen, after slipping one over on eleven and his 71 is going to be worth gold tomorrow night.

VETERANS STAR

E. S. "Scotty" Armstrong, many times State and southern amateur champ, carried the escutcheon for the "simon pures" and equaled par with a 72. Everett Seaver, second local amateur vet, after slipping up to a 41 going out, clipped par two strokes with a 34, coming home.

Dick Linares of Long Beach and Hutt Martin of Los Angeles, each capable of good golf, marked up 72's also, but the most impressive 72 of the day was recorded by John Black of Kansas, one of the most picturesque and noted professionals in this country. John is touring El Caballero with the same set of clubs that carried him to international fame when he upset tradition and came within a flash of winning the national open from Hagen, Barnes, Jones, et al, several years ago. John is lost without a trusty, also husky, black, briar pipe, but John is at home with any kind of a golf club.

Excitement was not confined to contestants yesterday—but Harold Lloyd and Douglas Fairbanks were the most enthusiastic pair in any gallery. Doug is developing into a real player—and Harold is going to furnish him lots of competition in the near future. It is a fast-stepping trick to land advantageous places in well-regulated galleries — but Doug's training has had to do with speed and he piloted his noted companion to the inside on every occasion. Both will be there again today and if plans of the Junior Chamber of Commerce do not miscarry, there will be more than a smattering of celluloid celebrities in the much bigger galleries expected to follow the play today.

Despite the low scoring—there is going to be a grand scramble to qualify today. Only the sixty-four low scores and ties will tackle the final thirty-six-hole grind tomorrow. While many critics are confident the winning score will not be under 290, there is no reason to change the prediction advanced in these columns yesterday, that the winning mark for the seventy-two-hole event will be very close to 288—or less.

Pairings and starting times for today are unchanged. A little more consideration by both contestants and spectators will be appreciated by all concerned for with bordering fairways gallery favorite on one side is working a distinct handship upon some worthy golfer near-by. The regrettable fact added several strokes to Cyril Walker's score yesterday—but today will be different.

EIGHT GOLFERS UNDER PAR IN FIRST ROUND OF RICH TOURNEY

Eight of the country's leading golfers cheated Old Man Par in the first round of play in the $10,000 Los Angeles open tournament over the El Caballero course yesterday, while eight more equaled the 72 figures. The four tied for first were two under, and four more had 71's. The leading cards:

GEORGE YOUNG PICKED TO WIN

Billy Logg, an old-timer, Jean Jordon, and Umberto Rovere, who has turned his attentions from grand opera singing and wrestling promoting to conquering the briny deep. Umberto has swum the Golden Gate, so battling the tides and currents is no virgin field for him.

The only woman candidate at present practicing at Catalina is Mrs. Valiery Mahr Schramm of San Diego. Back in 1916 Mrs. Schramm won the Golden Gate swim for women. In that same year Norman Ross captured the men's race across the San Francisco Straits.

HEZMALHALCH FINDS NEW CACTUS SPECIES

POMONA COLLEGE (Claremont) Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Chuck Holmes and Fritz Hezmalhalch, Pomona athletes, were the heroes of a scientific expedition into Mexico that was made during the Christmas holidays. Holmes shot more different kinds of game than any of the rest of the party and Hezmalhalch discovered a very rare species of cactus in a painful search.

JAWSON TO HAVE EDGE IN WEIGHT

Eastern Boxer Will Give Poundage Over Callahan in Vernon Go Tuesday

Two of Joe Jawson's opponents will watch him perform Tuesday night at Vernon against Callahan. They are Tommy [illegible] and Danny Kramer.

Both fought draws with Jack O'Brien as a lightweight and as a featherweight. They are at Manhattan gymnasium yesterday. Kramer and Jawson battled a round semi-wind-up to one of Mitchell's fights in Hollywood a couple of years ago.

Jawson scaled 135 when he met O'Brien. Since then he has gained weight.

The Milwaukee fighter is matched between the junior welter and welter. He scaled 140 pounds yesterday. When he fought Kramer he tipped the beam at 142. Against Zivic he weighed 144. Callahan will probably have the edge on it in the weight by a couple of pounds. Eddie Sears stated positively he would bring Monty in at 140 pounds. Jawson has been given the commission as his opponent, making 141. Jerry McCarthy, acting as Jawson's manager in the match, has prescribed a special diet for him.

JAWSON TO HAVE EDGE IN WEIGHT

Eastern Boxer Will Carry Poundage Over Callahan in Vernon Go Tuesday

Two of Joe Jawson's former opponents will watch him perform Tuesday night at Vernon against Mushy Callahan. They are Tommy O'Brien and Danny Kramer.

Both fought draws with Jawson—O'Brien as a lightweight and Kramer as a featherweight. They met at the Manhattan gymnasium yesterday.

Jawson scaled 135 when he boxed O'Brien. Since then he has taken on weight.

The Milwaukee fighter is now between the junior welter limit and the welter. He scaled 143 pounds yesterday. When he fought Sailor Poneman he tipped the beam at 142. Against Zivic he weighed 144. Callahan will probably have the worst of it in the weight by a couple of pounds. Eddie Sears stated yesterday he would bring Mushy in at 138 pounds. Jawson has posted $500 with the commission as his guarantee of making 141. Jerry McCarthy, who is acting as Jawson's handler on the match, has prescribed a special diet for him.

FAMILY TEAM

The Sutphin basketball team, of Outlook, Wash., is composed entirely of one family. Roy Sutphin, 17 years of age, youngest player, made eight of the points in defeating a team from Toppenish recently, by a score of 9 to 6.

Coach Hop Von Pelt's stalwart Lincoln cagers, who have reasons to hope for the City League championship this year, got off to an impressive start yesterday in the Polytechnic gym, where they finished with a rush to overwhelm the Mechanics, 34 to 19.

The Railsplitters showed good teamwork and power, which gave Capt. Eddie Christensen and Samarin plenty of opportunity to shoot, and that's all these Christensen was high point man of the game with 14 points, while Samarin caged 8 digits. Shorty Buttle Poly forward, led Mechanic attack, ringing up [illegible]'s 19 points. Boelter [illegible] of his points in the first [illegible] third and fourth periods [illegible] was assigned to guard [illegible] stuck to the Poly star [illegible] until he was taken out [illegible] committing four personals.

[illegible] the first and second [illegible] right up to the end [illegible] third period the Mechanics gave the Railsplitters a [illegible] battle than was expected. [illegible] the final quarter, [illegible] experience of the [illegible] players came to the fore [illegible] Trammel and [illegible] rapidly caged enough [illegible] to put the Railsplitters [illegible] front. In the third quarter, [illegible] team had reached 16-[illegible] and went out in [illegible] and were never headed.

Gro[illegible], with 14 points, and [illegible] center, with 13 digits, [illegible] honors. Poly led [illegible] 17 to 14, but the Railsplitters [illegible] a big third quarter, [illegible] 21 points to 4 for Poly, and [illegible] in the lead to stay.

RABBIT PUNCHES

BY PAUL LOWRY

GEORGE VON ELM and Al Watrous didn't lead the field at El Caballero yesterday, but don't count them out of the running on that score. There are fifty-four holes to play, and many of the boys who led George and Al at the end of the first round will be trailing them at the finish of the fourth. There were four 70's, four 71's and nine 72's chalked up on the scoreboard. Watrous had one of the 71's, while Von Elm had to be content with a 73.

Such splendid scoring on a water-soaked course indicates the high quality of the field. Just think of it! Seventeen players either equaled par or bettered it. Eight of them were in the latter class, and in the past only two pros have ever cracked par 72 at El Caballero.

The biggest gallery of the day followed Von Elm, the national amateur champ, and Watrous, who finished second to Bobby Jones in the British open last year, and were rewarded by a display of golf which might have just as well have been several strokes better, and may be today. "Might have been" is an old story, but the way Watrous steadied himself after finding three successive bunkers and made the last four holes in one under par indicates the class of that young man.

Aside from those two bad spots Watrous played impeccable golf. He made every shot he could reasonably have been expected to make, and his chip shots were things of great beauty and remarkable accuracy. On the other hand, Von Elm got his 73 with some brilliant golf and some bad golf. On the first nine holes he consistently outdrove and outapproached Watrous, but he shaved the hole on two long putts and missed two five-footers. He was two under par going to the fourteenth, having scored beautiful birdies on the twelfth and thirteenth holes, but a badly played shot to the green from the foot of a 30-foot slope cost him two strokes at the fourteenth. Then a lie too close for swinging comfort at the foot of an apricot tree cost George another stroke at the sixteenth.

Of those in the 70 and 71 class yesterday Bobby Cruickshank, Lighthorse Harry Cooper, last year's winner; Eddie Loos, Johnny Farrell, Bill Mehlhorn, Tommy Armour and MacDonald Smith are the best ones to watch. Mike Brady, sore because he wasn't sold in the Calcutta, surprised the boys by shooting a 70, and he may do it again today just for spite if nothing else.

Uplifters Win Way to Finals for Polo Title

KING TUT WINS KRAMER BATTLE

up a draw, but that's just what he called it, and it goes into the record books that way, although Billy Hart seemed to have the edge in at least four of the six rounds in his encounter with Irish Mickey Cone. The latter was on the canvas for an instant in the third round, saved himself from a knockdown in the fourth by balancing on his hands, and received a severe trouncing in the fifth and sixth cantos. Hart actually won the fight without much trouble.

Georgie Gordon and Mickey O'Dowd mauled away to a six-round draw in the special event, Gordon failing to produce his promised kayo punch. Claude Stotts defeated Frankie Forbs at four rounds in the second affair, and Johnny Gonzales subbed for De la Cruz in the opener to take the decision from Herb Turchi.

TO PLAY FINALS IN HANDBALL TOURNEY

Finals in the Class A and Class B doubles championship handball tournaments at the Santa Monica Athletic Club are on schedule for Monday. Keowan and Ahawalt meet Pierce and Clover in the Class A affair, with Gillette and Townsend facing Gripp and Thomas in the Class B battle. Fourteen teams still remain in the Class C playoff. The trophies will be presented to the winners Wednesday night.

MERCURIES COLLECT

The L.A.A.C. Blues had no trouble in winning from the Pasadena Athletic and Country Club quintet last night, 47 to 27. Jeffries, forward, with sixteen digits, was high-point man for the Mercuries, Chamberlain contributing a dozen more points. Cather was high for the defeated squad with eleven points.

WILSON MEETS GENERALS SUNDAY

Grid Teams Hook Up at Wrigley Field

"Stew" Beam, Hollywood Tackle

BY BRAVEN DYER

There seems to be considerable difference of opinion as to the outcome of tomorrow's professional football game between George Wilson and his famous Wildcats and Johnny Hawkins and his equally notorious Hollywood Generals. The rival aggregations tangle at Wrigley Field at 2:15 o'clock.

C. C. Pyle, who has a finger in the management of Wilson's team, states that George and his pals will beat Hollywood by two touchdowns. Pyle has seen the Generals play two games this season, so has some real basis for his comparison.

Wilson himself doesn't feel as sure about winning as Pyle. George says he knows Hollywood's line is good but that he figures the Generals haven't been harassed enough by end runs. Wilson does some of his most devastating work around the wings, so there ought to be a lot of excitement in this respect.

"Red" Grange thinks Wilson will win. The Wheaton iceman rates George as one of the hardest-running backs of all time, and opines that Hollywood will have no end (no pun intended) of trouble stopping the Washingtonian. "Red" has met Wilson several times this season and on at least two occasions George has walked off with the long end of the score, his team blanking Grange in one game.

It seems to be the general belief of Pyle, Wilson and Grange that Hollywood has little to offer in the way of offense. All three hand the Generals considerable as a defensive team.

Hawkins, on the other hand, has complete faith in the ability of his men to rise to the occasion. The Generals' goal line is uncrossed. Even the great Ernie Nevers could not batter his way through the wall which numbers such stars as Bob Berkey, Tiger Ratterman, Stew Beam, Pete Thompson and others.

Knowing that his team is good defensively Johnny has spent most of the past week polishing up his offense. Benny Tout, the former California Aggie star, has been doing a lot of ball carrying. If given some decent interference tomorrow he may be the big star of the game. Of course the Generals have that dangerous passing combination which includes Archie Hawkins on the throwing end and either brother Johnny or Bob Berkey as receivers. Unless Wilson's secondary defense is pretty smart Hollywood will chalk up some lengthy aerial gains. "Rabbit" Bradshaw, Wilson's safety man, is a wide-awake ball player, however, and Hollywood's best bet seems to lie in shorter tosses.

Personally, we figure the game a toss-up. Wilson's team is undoubtedly the best Hollywood has met. George's outfit has class and offensive punch. How good they are defensively remains to be seen. The Generals have established themselves as a truly great defensive team and in pro football, where breaks count for so much, the strongest defensive team often licks a better offensive club.

Homer Bouchey of Hollywood and Harold Plossel of the Huntington team were the stars in the water engagement. Plossel, who is one of the best back-stroke swimmers in the scholastic circles, handled the ball with much skill in yesterday's tilt.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER, BILL HENRY

JUST one week from today the fish in Catalina Channel will get a rare treat when the contestants in William Wrigley's aquatic handicap start churning up the waters in the vicinity of the isthmus in the hope of getting away with a part of the chewing gum magnate's bank roll. Granting that about one-third of the 150 entrants did so to get their names in the paper and that another third will start for the sake of getting their pictures in the paper, it will be the most unusual and striking event in the history of swimming.

• • •

When you line up about 100 taxpayers of assorted shapes and sizes, with suits of every known variety and a few never seen before any place, and covered from head to foot with everything from olive oil and vanishing cream to standard axle grease, you'll have something you won't forget in a long time. The start of the race, with the whole mob making a wild dash down the beach to be the first in the water and to get out to their waiting rowboats, will be as spectacular as anything anybody has ever seen.

• • •

The swimmers who are participating in the race are regarded with considerable disdain by the Islanders who don't believe anybody has a chance to make the swim. The other day Jack Howell, a well-known swimmer from San Francisco, put in a call for Norman Ross and in talking to the clerk at Judge Daul's Atwater Hotel on the other end of the line was astonished to learn that he had no idea who Ross was. "You surely know Norman Ross, the former world's champion, who is training for the channel swim," said Howell. "Aw, we got a dozen of them cuckoos over here," replied the native, "and to hear any of 'em talk they're all world's champions so we don't pay no attention to any of 'em." Such is fame.

• • •

Ross himself refers to all the contestants, of whom he is one, as the cuckoos. He says that after a dozen years or so of competitive paddling he has come to the conclusion that all divers and distance swimmers are cuckoo. As he explains it, the divers get cuckoo from the blows on the head when they hit the water and the long-distance swimmers are cuckoo anyway or they wouldn't swim so blame far.

LADY LUCK IS GOOD TO GUEST

pulled out to championship length, is easy.

Lady Luck, the heartless courtesan who holds merciless sway on putting greens the world over, looked on Charlie yesterday and was pleased. While many were cursing her for a fickle jade Guest merely smiled and in smiling won the fair lady's heart. By the time the sixteenth hole was reached he and Lady Luck were strolling down the fairway hand in hand and he was down in one putt each on the last three holes for three birdies in succession and a score of 70 for the eighteen holes.

DUDLEY GOOD

While Guest had thought his conquest of Lady Luck complete she glanced again over the rolling hills at El Caballero and spied another young man who deserved a second glance, one Eddie Dudley of Oklahoma City. Her conscience hurt her sorely as she sped to him as he stood at the seventeenth tee. His pitch missed the cup and a hole in one by less than six inches and he had to be satisfied with a two. On the eighteenth she more than made up for overlooking him till so late by helping him to an eagle 3 for a total score of 70 to tie Guest, little Bobby Cruikshank and Mike Brady, all with scores of 70.

Even though Lady Luck was so outspoken in her favor of Guest and Dudley she yet has the desire to spread the mantle of responsibility about her affairs of the links and it was not surprising to find her pleased with the dry humor of little Bobby Cruikshank. As for Mike Brady—it was probably his open defiance that won him favor. And then, too, perhaps Lady Luck felt that the youth of Guest and Dudley needed a fitting rebuke.

Leaving romance, these three and Lady Luck, strolling down the fairways we will turn for a moment to stark tragedy—the 84's turned in by Frank Walsh of Madison, Wis., and by Dewey Weber of Chicago; the 83 scored by Roy Tufts of San Diego; yes, and even the '8 scored by the former open champion, Cyril Walker. Cyril's day was completely ruined on the tenth hole when his tee shot imbedded itself in a boggy spot in the middle of the fairway. He took an eight on the hole and was neither happy nor satisfied. Joe Turnesa of New York, who distinguished himself a couple of weeks ago by winning the Sacramento open, played in just as bad luck as did Walker, with the difference that his was spread out over several holes instead of being all sewed up in one boggy spot ten by twelve feet.

TURNEST LOST

Turnesa was lost on the greens. Usually he is a great putter. Yesterday the putts were going any and everywhere except into the cup. He took a 78 for the round and frankly was lucky to get it—considering the golf he was playing.

The little seventeenth hole at El Caballero is a gem. It lives up to all that Billy Bell, Edgar Rice Burroughs and Rex Goodcell promised when the hole was first planned. The hole is 115 yards in length. The green has been beautifully moulded into the top of a little plateau.

Deep, sweeping traps protect the green on all sides. The ball off line, or over, or short is in trouble. But the green is so well marked and so visible that it is an admirable spot from which to watch the passing show of the golfers.

Here we parked ourselves in the fond hope of seeing a hole in one. We got a thrill when Jack Hart of Fresno dropped one right against the pin, only to see it bound away a foot. Again Allen Moser of Wilshire, pitched right up to the pin, stopping a foot short. Vainly watching for a hole in one we heard a shout from in back of Coonskin Cabin and raced on around to see the crowd congratulating Jimmy Mason of Casper, Wyo., for an ace on the eighth.

Harry Cooper and George Duncan gave us an excellent lesson in how not to play the seventeenth. Both spared their shots, found the bunkers and took 6s.

Yesterday morning we let ourselves in for a bit of caustic comment by picking Watrous, Mehlhorn and Loos. While it is true that others came in with lower scores we will stick by the selection and let the divots fall where they may. It would be a pretty poor excuse for a tournament if we were all agreed on the favorites anyway.

Today we can look for at least two or three scores under the 70 mark. A hasty glance ove the first day's results shows us that more than sixteen players turned in scores of 72 or better. This leads one to believe that it will take a score of 157 to qualify tonight and that the winning total score for the tournament will be about 283. Having given expression to these opinions we can now take the air.

Vikings Clash With Mercury Soccer Squad

The Los Angeles Athletic Club and the Vikings clash in the 3 o'clock game at Loyola field tomorrow afternoon, and according to dope not only promise to give the champs a real fight for the points, but figure to throw a scare into the leaders. All because of a combination of circumstances.

The Vikings are building for the cup series and are much stronger today than they were a few weeks ago. Their forward line is functioning satisfactorily, which means that opposing defenders are finding it more difficult to keep their charges intact.

Another circumstance is that the club will not appear at full strength against the Norsemen tomorrow. According to Manager Kezma, the titleholders will be without the services of Wathne and Allan, with the further possibility that Cook will also be an absentee. These players are on the injured list, and their absence from the line-up brings the strong Club down to equal rating with the Vikings.

MAPLE LEAFS AND RANGER PUCKS MIX

With both line-ups revamped and strengthened, the Maple Leafs and Rangers will clash tonight in an amateur ice hockey league game at the Palais de Glace, and although the Rangers won when these two sextets met before a couple of weeks back, the Leafs are said to be favored to take tonight's battle.

The Leafs have signed some new fast players, including Ernie Miller, speedy forward, formerly of Regina, Sask., who is scheduled to play tonight and who, it is predicted, will prove a tower of strength.

"Times" Daily Short Story

Between Rounds

By O. HENRY

IN ONE of the second-floor front windows Mrs. McCaskey awaited her husband. Supper was cooling on the table. Its heat went into Mrs. McCaskey.

At nine Mr. McCaskey came. He carried his coat on his arm and his pipe in his teeth; and he apologized for disturbing the boarders on the steps as he selected spots of stone between them on which to set his size 9, width Ds.

As he opened the door of his room he received a surprise. Instead of the usual stove-lid or potato masher for him to dodge, came only words.

Mr. McCaskey reckoned that the benign May moon had softened the breast of his spouse.

"I heard ye," came the oral substitutes for kitchenware. "Ye can apollygise to riff-raff of the streets for settin' yer unhandy feet on the tails of ther frocks, but ye'd walk on the neck of yer wife the length of a clothes-line without so much as a 'kiss me fut,' and I'm sure it's that long from rubberin' out the windy for ye and the victuals cold such as there's money to buy after drinkin' up yer wages at Gallegher's every Saturday evenin', and the gas man here twice today for his."

"Woman!" said Mr. McCaskey, dashing his coat and hat upon a chair, "the noise of ye is an insult to me appetite. Will ye bring the pig's face of ye out of the windy and see to the food?"

Mrs. McCaskey arose heavily and went to the stove. There was something in her manner that warned Mr. McCaskey.

"Pig's face, is it?" said Mrs. McCaskey, and hurled a stewpan full of bacon and turnips at her lord.

Mr. McCaskey was no novice at repartee. He knew what should follow the entree. On the table was a roast sirloin of pork, garnished with shamrocks. He retorted with this, and drew the appropriate return of a bread pudding in an earthen dish. A hunk of Swiss cheese accurately thrown by her husband struck Mrs. McCaskey below one eye. When she replied with a well-aimed coffee-pot full of a hot, black, semifragrant liquid the battle, according to courses, should have ended.

Triumphantly McCaskey sent the granite-ware washbasin at the head of his matrimonial adversary. Mrs. McCaskey dodged in time. She reached for a flatiron, with which, as a sort of cordial, she hoped to bring the gastronomical duel to a close.

On the sidewalk at the corner of the house Policeman Cleary was standing with one ear upturned, listening to the crash of household utensils.

"'Tis Jawn McCaskey and his missis at it again," meditated the policeman. "I wonder shall I go up and stop the row. I will not. Married folks they are; and few pleasures they have. 'Twill not last long. Sure, they'll have to borrow more dishes to keep it up with."

And just then came a loud scream below-stairs, betokening fear or dire extremity. "'Tis probably the cat," said Policeman Cleary, and walked hastily in the other direction.

The boarders on the steps were fluttered. Mr. Toomey, an insurance solicitor by birth and an investigator by profession, went inside to analyse the scream. He returned with the news that Mrs. Murphy's little boy, Mike was lost. Following the messenger, out bounced Mrs. Murphy—two hundred pounds in tears and hysterics, clutching the air and howling to the sky for the loss of thirty pounds of freckles and mischief. Bathos, truly; but Mr. Toomey sat down at the side of Miss Purdy, millinery, and their hands came together in sympathy. The two old maids, Misses Walsh, who complained every day about the noise in the halls, inquired immediately if anybody had looked behind the clock.

In the second floor front Mr. and Mrs. McCaskey came to the window to recover their second wind. Mr. McCaskey was scooping turnips out of his vest with a crooked forefinger, and his lady was wiping an eye that the salt of the roast pork had not benefited. They heard the outcry below, and thrust their heads out of the window.

"'Tis little Mike is lost," said Mrs. McCaskey, in a hushed voice, "the beautiful, little, trouble-making angel of a gossoon!"

"The bit of a boy mislaid?" said Mr. McCaskey, leaning out of the window. "Why, now, that's bad enough, entirely. The childer, they be different. If 'twas a woman I'd be willin', for they leave peace behind 'em when they go."

Disregarding the thrust, Mrs. McCaskey caught her husband's arm.

"Jawn," she said, sentimentally, "Missis Murphy's little bye is lost. 'Tis a great city for losing little boys. Six year old he was. Jawn, 'tis the same age our little bye would have been if we had had one six years ago."

"We never did," said Mr. McCaskey, lingering with the fact.

"But if we had, Jawn, think what sorrow would be in our hearts this night, with our little Phelan run away and stolen in the city nowheres at all."

"Ye talk foolishness," said Mr. McCaskey. "'Tis Pat he would be named, after me old father in Cantrim."

"Ye lie!" said Mrs. McCaskey, without anger. "Me brother was worth tin dozen bog-trotting McCaskeys. After him would the bye be named."

"Jawn," said Mrs. McCaskey, softly, "I'm sorry I was hasty wid ye."

"'Twas hasty puddin', as ye say," said her husband, "and hurry-up turnips and get-a-move-on-ye coffee. 'Twas what ye could call a quick lunch, all right, and tell no lie."

Mrs. McCaskey slipped her arm inside her husband's and took his rough hand in hers.

"Listen at the cryin' of poor Mrs. Murphy," she said. "'Tis an awful thing for a bit of a bye to be lost in this great big city. If 'twas our little Phelan, Jawn, I'd be breakin' me heart."

"'Tis foolishness, of course," said he, roughly, "but I'd be cut up some meself if our little—Pat was kidnapped or anything. But there never was any childer for us. Sometimes I've been ugly and hard with ye, Judy. Forget it."

"What's up now, Judy?" asked Mr. McCaskey.

"'Tis Missis Murphy's voice," said Mrs. McCaskey, harking. "She says she's after finding little Mike asleep behind the roll of old linoleum under the bed in her room."

Mr. McCaskey laughed loudly.

"That's yer Phelan," he shouted, sardonically. "Divil a bit would a Pat have done that trick. If the bye we never had is strayed and stole, by the powers, call him Phelan, and see him hide out under the bed like a mangy pup."

Mrs. McCaskey arose heavily, and went toward the dish closet, with the corners of her mouth drawn down.

Policeman Cleary came back around the corner as the crowd dispersed. Surprised, he upturned an ear toward the McCaskey apartment, where the crash of irons and chinaware and the ring of hurled kitchen utensils seemed as loud as before. Policeman Cleary took out his timepiece.

"By the deported snakes!" he exclaimed, "Jawn McCaskey and his lady have been fightin' for an hour and a quarter by the watch. The missis could give him forty pounds weight. Strength to his arm."

BANKING GROUP ISSUES REPORT

First National Chain Makes Good Showing

Resources Gain of More Than 6 Per Cent Shown

Robinson Appraises Status of World Affairs

Aggregate resources of the First National-Pacific-Southwest banking group increased $18,614,320.73, or more than 6 per cent, during 1926 to total of $334,016,966.70 on December 31, last, it was announced yesterday by Henry M. Robinson, president of the First National Bank and chairman of the board of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, before the annual meeting of holders of beneficial certificates of the banking group.

In his annual report, Mr. Robinson pointed out that the banking group is typically a California institution. The 2697 certificates outstanding, 97 per cent are held in California, with an average number of shares per holder of twenty-six, while the percentage of shares held outside of the state is only 3.7 per cent, with an average number of shares per holder of twenty-four.

DEPOSIT SHOWING

The increase in deposits of the First National during 1926 was $4,877,62; of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings, $11,607,873.12. The paid-in capital and surplus of the First Securities Company was increased from $600,000 to $1,100,000. Universally, the year just closed has proven to be excellent and it has been a good year in our particular fields," Mr. Robinson said in giving his analysis of the financial situation throughout the world and the nation, as well as locally. "We do not feel that indications for the future are quite as good as they were a year ago, and, while there is reason to expect good business for the first few months of 1927, there are a number of factors that would make one doubtful to prophesy good conditions for the last half of the year. However, we believe our institutions are in a position to cope with any problem with which they are likely to be confronted."

Regarding the international situation, Mr. Robinson, who was one of the three United States representatives on the committees of experts which formulated the Dawes plan, said in part:

FOREIGN SITUATION

"The year just past has shown some improvement in direction and establishment in international affairs, politically, socially and financially. The Dawes plan has worked successfully. During the two-year period there has been transferred payment of reparations in the form of currency and gold exchange amounting to approximately one-third of the total reparations payments; that is, about $175,000,000. The balance has been taken in the form of German products by deliveries in kind and paid for by mark payments within the boundaries of Germany.

"Basis for the settlement of international indebtedness has been determined upon between all of the im-

Usual Seasonal Drop Noted by Trade Review

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

Inventory taking and the usual seasonal dullness affected wholesale and retail trade this week, and distribution of goods was generally below a year ago. Retailing was helped somewhat by reduction sales, which were held with fair success in most trade centers. Wet, cold weather in the East Central and Southwestern States stimulated retailing of heavy clothing and footwear, but retarded most other lines, handicapped building and produced bad road conditions in country districts. At some points in the Mississippi Valley floods curtailed trade, and factory operations. Wholesaling was dull, except at Chicago, where good sales of dry goods were reported, with total purchases exceeding a year ago. At Detroit and other automobile manufacturing centers the trade situation was helped by the partial resumption of factory operations after the inventory period. Taking the country as a whole, however, wholesale trade failed to measure up to a year ago, but stocks of jobbers and retailers are generally believed to be lower, and moderate optimism as to the course of spring trade is expressed in most quarters.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Trading in cotton today was light and mostly local. Fluctuations were the narrowest for some time.

An opening advance for the near months was followed by a decline of 3 to 5 under yesterday's closing, with January selling at 12.67 cents, March, 12.82 cents; May, 13.01 cents; July, 13.20 cents, and October, 13 3-8 cents.

This was followed by an upturn in the early afternoon on local covering of shorts and a moderate amount of new trade buying.

The market looks to be in a narrow trading position and likely to remain so until the next Census Bureau ginning report, the 24th inst.

Much of the bullish talk as to the figures likely to be 1,000,000 bales under the government's crop estimate of 18,618,000 is only opinions and conjectures. Bullish activity, based on such forecasts entirely, has a poor foundation that would lead to a weakened technical position if the good weather continues.

Moreover, any attempted extensive bull movement in the market would seriously interfere with plans for cutting the acreage for the new crop that is, in the last analysis, the only remedy for checking this season's heavy overproduction.

An Liverpool spot was up 9 points from yesterday's prices to 6.98d for middling, with the day's sales 7000 bales. Futures there advanced 5 to 8 points early but reacted and closed quiet at a net advance of about 3 on the day against 3 to 5 due.

BOND PRICES AT NEW PEAK

Post-War Investors Perplexed by Combination of Conditions in Investments; 1905 Compared

BY EARLE E. CROWE

Striking of another new high record yesterday in the forty bonds used in the Dow-Jones average is additional corroboration of the forecasts for easy money. Many of the investment and financial authorities have insisted right along that the easiness promises to continue in the long term money market, and that the investment yields on the high-grade securities are definitely pointed downward.

To the post-war investors, as George E. Roberts of the National City Bank of New York points out, the prospect of even lower yields and higher prices on high-grade securities is naturally perplexing. Glancing over the movements of bond prices since the beginning of the century will give a better perspective, however, and possibly will demonstrate just what really does occur in the bond market when long-term money is cheap.

PREWAR BASIS

In a chart of bond prices recently prepared by the Brookmire Economic Service, the movements are traced in the various classifications of bonds since 1904. The highest prices of the century and correspondingly, the lowest yields, were reached in 1905, while the opposite situations generally prevailed in 1920 and 1921. Most of the newer investors are familiar with the conditions obtaining since 1917, when interest rates, yields and prices were on a different basis than are found in the existing market.

Taking the railroad bonds in 1905, the yield was approximately 3.8 per cent at the lowest, while at the end of 1926, rails yielded around 4.2 per cent. Public utilities sold in 1905 on approximately a 4.2 per cent basis, while now the basis is about 4.9 per cent. Industrials reached a basis of 4.4 per cent in 1905, and are now selling to yield almost 5 per cent. The average yield of all corporate bonds in 1905 was 4.2 per cent, against the existing 4.8 per cent.

From these comparisons it appears that bond prices still have a good distance to go if they are to sell on the 1905 basis. It means that investors must accustom themselves to lower interest rates, lower yields and higher prices if they are to obtain the safety that goes with high-grade issues.

PROBABLE OUTLETS

What will probably happen, however, will be a continuation of the tendencies that have already been manifest in the last several months. Many of the investors will turn to the more speculative bonds, or abandon the bond market entirely for the stock market.

Among the speculative bonds the opportunities will probably be seized in the debentures, the convertibles and in the foreign issues, either European or Latin American. In the well established corporations, however, the debentures, while theoretically not as well secured as mortgage bonds, are often issued with low interest coupons, and sell on a low basis. The recent issue of $120,000,000 Standard Oil of New Jersey debentures was sold on about a 5 per cent basis.

If the investors continue to manifest a tendency to put their money at work in the stock market, the exercise of greater caution in the selection of securities will be necessary. Probably the standard rails will be favored.

Santa Fe Plans Larger Freight Yard at Phoenix

PHOENIX, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Announcement has been made by General Agent F. L. Hanna that the Santa Fe will start at once on a $1,000,000 improvement campaign in this section. The major feature, at a cost of $300,000, will be the creation of a new freight yard, roundhouse and repair shops area at Grand and Nineteenth avenues, in conjunction with the opening of a new industrial district northwest of Phoenix.

The main-line tracks will be brought in from the avenue lines, while sixteen classification tracks and six storage tracks will be added. The present terminal in the southwestern part of Phoenix, just west of the union station, will be added to the freight station facilities. Under the new order the local pay roll will be doubled, though the local shops will handle no very heavy work.

To the northward the company is starting on the laying of ninety-pound steel on the Prescott-Skull Valley section, over Iron Springs Mountain, a distance of thirty-two miles. The program for the year also includes construction of a fifteen-mile branch from Beardsley, northwest of Phoenix, through the lands of the Beardsley-Agua Fria reclamation district, which now is building large storage dams and canals, for irrigation of 40,000 acres.

WOOL MART OPENS WITH CONFIDENCE

Competition Brings More Buoyant Tone to Foreign Prices; Domestic Firm

BOSTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

"The wool market opens rather quietly, but with considerable confidence and not a little interest displayed in wool in certain quarters. Prices are steady this week with last, demand being fairly general in character but chiefly for the finer domestic wools still.

"The foreign primary markets are buoyant on general competition and prices are pending against the buyer everywhere. European secondary markets are steady. Japan is a keen buyer of wool. America has bought only about one-third in the foreign primary markets what she bought last season to date.

"The manufacturing position is regarded as sound and the prospects good for the coming year, although no one looks for any boom times.

"Mohair is moderately active and firm.

"The rail and water shipments of wool from Boston from January 1, 1927 to January 6, 1927, inclusive, are 2,981,000 pounds against 3,810,000 pounds for the same period last year. The receipts from January 1, 1927, to January 7, 1927 inclusive, are 4,011,600 pounds, against 2,879,900 pounds for the same period last year."

STATE CROP VALUE OFF; TONNAGE UP

In 1926 California's Field and Fruit Outturn Brought Total of $375,495,000

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 7. (AP)—California's last year produced field and fruit crops in the total estimated value of $375,495,000, but this is a decrease of 9.16 per cent from 1925 while the output in tonnage fell off 81.93 from the previous year. As compared with 1924, the tonnage was 18.5 per cent greater but had a lesser value by 4.4 per cent.

This is shown in the annual crop summary made public today by E. E. Kaufman, chief statistician of the Federal and State crop reporting service for California.

For the past three years, California's crops have had the following estimated values: 1926, $375,495,000; 1925, $413,328,000; 1924, $392,844,000.

In 1926, the total agricultural production was 7,674,934 tons as compared with 8,119,900 tons in 1925. The acreage planted to crops last year was 1.95 per cent greater than in 1925, but only 85 per cent as great as the five-year average from 1919 to 1923.

Poor market conditions are held responsible in the report for the decrease in the financial returns to the farmers.

METRO-GOLDWYN PROFITS INCREASE

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and subsidiaries report net profit of $3,055,229 for the year ended August 31, equal after preferred dividends to $4.36 a share on the common stock, all of which is owned by Loew's, Inc. Net profit in the preceding year was $2,007,145, or $2.67 a share on the common.

LOCAL BANK SAVINGS IN HEAVY GAIN

Deposits at End of 1926 More Than Double Those of Five Years Ago

Savings deposits in Los Angeles banks have more than doubled during the last five years, the total now approximating one-fourteenth of the total savings deposits in all banks of the United States, according to a compilation just completed by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Total savings bank deposits at the end of 1925 in the United States amounted to $7,977,617,000. Of this, there were in savings and time deposits in Los Angeles banks alone $580,820,317. This is more than double the Los Angeles deposits five years ago, when $217,888,000 was on deposit in savings accounts. The Los Angeles total today is almost equal to the total savings deposits in the entire United States in 1880.

The per-capita savings for the city of Los Angeles is approximately $475, or more than six times greater than the average of $71 per capita for the United States. These figures serve to prove the tremendous growth of Los Angeles, since the deposits have more than doubled in the last five years, as has the population. It also indicates that the population here is well settled, for people as a rule do not open savings accounts until they have settled down into permanent homes.

The total deposits in the banks of Los Angeles, including savings deposits, in 1920 amounted to $409,397,000, while at the end of 1925 the total had increased to $1,048,175,000, a greater increase than any other competitive city in the country. Detroit's total deposits increased from $508,292,000 in 1920 to $884,027,000 in 1925, and Cleveland reported deposits of $627,578,000 in 1920 and $839,100,000 in 1925.

BANCITALY CLOSES AT NEW HIGH

Bank of Italy Advances Also to Record Level; Mines Strengthen

Bancitaly Corporation got under way again on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday and advanced under strong buying support to a new high for all time at 93 3-4, where it closed for a net gain of 1 3-4 points. Bank of Italy spurted also, adding 7 1-2 points to a new record high at 542 1-2.

The advance in Southern California Edison common was halted, the stock opening at Thursday's close, settling back 1-4 of a point to 32 7-8 under profit-taking, and closing fractionally net lower at 33. Edison preferred issues were firm. Los Angeles Investment was in demand at 2.98 and 2.98 1-2, closing at the former figure.

Julian Petroleum preferred rallied to regain the loss of the previous day and closed strong at 14 5-8 with a large number of shares crossing the board. Julian common also moved up 1-4 to 2 3-4. Union Oil of California closed steady at 55 5-8, after moving off to 55 3-8 in the morning. Associates lost 1-4 to 55 1-4. Standard Oil of California added a fraction to 58 3-4, as did Richfield to 24 1-2.

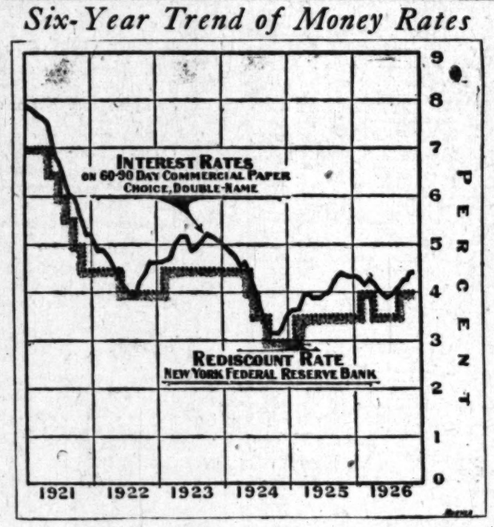
Gold Ore was the feature of the mining activity, the stock advancing 1 1-2 points with a heavy volume to a close at 10 1-2. Big Jim rallied 1 1-2 points to 45 and North Star moved up a point to 9. New Gibraltar added 1-3 of a point to 23, Western Apex held at 67 and Boundary Cone at 6 1-2.

Movement of Lumber in 1926 at High Level

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Measured by sales and shipments of lumber reported to the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association by about 500 of the leading lumber mills of the country, 1926 was among the big years of the industry, and possibly the largest since prewar days.

Both orders and shipments of softwood mills were slightly higher than in 1925, while production was about the same. Shipments and orders of hardwood mills exceeded production. The country's total output for the year is estimated at between 36,000,000,000 and 37,000,000,000 feet.

Six-Year Trend of Money Rates



Interest Rules Steady in 1926

Rates for capital have held a fairly steady course in the last year, although three changes were made in New York rediscount rate, against one in the preceding year. Commercial paper ruled slightly above the 6 per cent level.

FUNCTION OF SPECULATION

BY PAUL WILLARD GARRETT

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Wide as has been the discussion on it, the term speculation still leaves a bad taste in the mouths of thousands of people not familiar with the functions that it performs. E. H. H. Simmons, president of the New York Stock Exchange, in addressing the Detroit exchange at its annual dinner, went out of his way to define speculation and explain its place in the market world.

As he views it, stock exchanges neither approve nor disapprove of speculation as such. They simply recognize "that speculation is an inevitable and omnipresent economic force, that it performs an absolutely vital economic function, and that speculative transactions in the exchanges must be handled, and handled in an adequate way, if the exchanges are to serve a useful business purpose."

A clear-cut distinction between gambling and speculating is drawn by Mr. Simmons. Speculation consists in buying or selling property with the purpose of making a profit between the purchase and selling price, and meanwhile accepting the inevitable risks of the operation. Unless Alexander Hamilton had been able to persuade his countrymen to speculate in the original 6 per cent government bonds he could not have funded the national debt, and unless speculators had been willing to turn their funds into great railroad systems years ago, much of the subsequent development would never have occurred.

To an extent speculators in the stock market perform the same functions that are performed by speculators in the commodity markets. The cotton manufacturer is enabled to eliminate the market risks in his business by purchasing his raw material for delivery at a future date and at a given price. It is the speculator in cotton who takes that risk from the shoulders of the manufacturer. It was the original speculator in such stocks as the United States Steel and Pennsylvania Railroad that helped to give those issues seasoning.

THE INVESTOR

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Inasmuch as investors in this country have already accumulated a substantial total of foreign securities and are apt to be asked to subscribe for additional large amounts during the next few years, it is important that they study some of the underlying factors by which the safety of such securities are determined.

In the selection of securities of foreign governments much stress has been laid in the past on the importance of a so-called favorable trade balance, one in which exports of merchandise exceed imports.

Dr. Paul M. Atkins of the University of Paris, who served as a specialist on the American commission to negotiate peace, says in a study prepared for Ames, Emerich & Co., bankers, that "this idea has proved to be entirely false." He hastens to add, however, that this is because account is not taken of "invisible" exports.

England, he points out, for sixty years or more has imported more goods than she has exported and yet her financial stability as a nation is considered second only to that of the United States. France and Germany, he continues, before the war were looked upon — and properly so — as sound and secure from the financial and economic standpoint even though at the time both had "unfavorable" trade balances.

Since the war Holland and Switzerland have been the principal investment markets after the United States and Great Britain, but both show and have shown "unfavorable" trade balances for a long time.

Dr. Atkins goes on to explain that trade balances in themselves show only part of the picture, which has little meaning unless the whole is seen at one time. Merchandise imports and exports, he maintains, are simply a part of the total interchange of property rights which makes up the international balance of payments of a country.

The exports of Great Britain in 1923 amounted in value to only 80.7 per cent of that of her imports, Dr. Atkins points out, yet at the end of the year other nations were indebted to her to the extent of $450,000,000. This was made possible, he determines, by the fact that she rendered vast shipping services to other nations, almost five times the amount they rendered her, and that they owed her four times as much in the way of interest and dividends as she owed them in the same form.

Italy, he finds, makes up her deficits in imports over exports of merchandise by the expenditures of tourists who come to visit her artistic treasures and frequent her resorts and by the remittances of her emigrants who send their relatives each year more than is expended by tourists.

In pointing out the importance of going beneath the surface for facts in studying trade balances as applied to investments Dr. Atkins brings up a point which has no doubt been overlooked by many investors. Bankers, however, and others who have made a special study of securities have long recognized the necessity of obtaining all the facts in that connection.

NEW POWER FINANCING ANNOUNCED

San Joaquin Will Issue $25,000,000 in Bonds to Refund Other Liens

As the second phase of the financial program of Western Power Corporation approved in November by the Railroad Commission, Peirce, Fair & Co., Blyth, Witter & Co. and E. H. Rollins and Sons are prepared to place on the market in the near future an issue of $25,000,000 San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation unifying and refunding mortgage 5 per cent gold bonds, series "D." This financing will result in a reduction in interest charges of approximately $300,000 annually.

Proceeds of the issue will be used to redeem $14,225,000 first and refunding mortgage bonds, and $8,430,500 unifying and refunding bonds. The new issue will constitute a first mortgage against 95 per cent of the properties of the company and a direct mortgage against the remainder, subject only to $2,210,000 underlying closed mortgage bonds.

The first and refunding bonds to be called include $1,109,000 series "A" 6 per cent, callable at 103½; $799,000 series "B" 5 per cent, callable at 105; $2,125,000 series "B" 6 per cent, callable at 105, and $10,192,000 series "C" 6 per cent, callable at 105. The two series of unifying and refunding mortgage bonds to be called are $6,930,000 series "A" 7 per cent, callable at 107½, and $1,500,000 series "C" 6 per cent, callable at 105.

A portion of the new issue remaining after this refunding will provide additional funds for the company's extensive development plans now under way.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Permission to consolidate all of the twelve railroad properties which it now operates in Texas and Louisiana into a single company was given the Southern Pacific system today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

STOCK MARKET TREND UPWARD

Strong Support Gives Firmer Tone to Trading

Standard Industrials, Rails Lead in Activity

Buying Principally Confined to Professionals

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—The stock market displayed a distinctly firmer undertone today as strong buying support developed for the standard industrials and rails. Trading, which showed a moderate contraction in volume, was largely professional in character, although pools, encouraged by the ease of the credit situation, tried hard to attract an outside following in several specialties.

The weekly mercantile reviews reported little change in the business situation, which was characterized as irregular. Declaration of a 33 1-3 per cent stock dividend on Burroughs Adding Machine helped to revive the hopes of speculators, who expected the recent declaration of a 40 per cent stock dividend on United States Steel common to inspire the similar action by other large corporations.

Successful inauguration of a trans-Atlantic telephone service today was reflected in the revival of activity and strength of the common stock of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which closed 1 3-8 points higher at 151 3-4.

STEEL IMPROVES

Reports of increased mill operations at the plants of the United States Steel Corporation, compared with the announcement of large pipe and tin plate orders for the Orient, stimulated the buying of that stock, which closed 2 5-8 points higher at 158 5-8. American Smelting, which was heavy earlier in the week as a result of the inauguration of the new land laws in Mexico, rallied over a point. Pan American Petroleum issues also showed moderate improvement. Baldwin closed 1 3-4 points higher.

A cut in automobile prices by one of the smaller manufacturers led to a renewal of selling pressure against the motors, several of which sagged 1 to 2 points in the early trading.

NEW YORK BOND PRICES

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—In the heaviest day's trading in nearly two years, bond prices today advanced to around the highest level since 1912. Total sales ran close to $20,000,000. Because of the lower return on domestic bonds, the high yielding foreign issues attracted considerable attention.

Chief interest in the foreign group centered in Italian 7s, which advanced to within a small fraction of their record high on total transactions in excess of $1,000,000. French government issues also were active and strong, the 7s and 7 1-2s selling at new peak prices. Two-point gain in Rima Steel 7s and an advance of over 1 point in Fiat 7s enlivened trading in foreign industrials.

The banking syndicate which offered the $60,000,000 New York 4 1-4 corporate stock, announced that the entire lot has been sold. Bankers are expecting a continuance of the heavy investment demand. New offerings this week total almost $140,000,000, more than $50,000,000 over the corresponding week of 1926.

Railway liens advanced in sympathy with the strength of the railway shares. Atchison adjustment 4s and Illinois Central 3 1-2s recorded gains upward of 2 points, while Central New England 4s, Chicago and Western Indiana 4s, Denver and Rio Grande 4s and International Great Northern 6s advanced a point or so. Chicago and Alton 3 1-2s, one of the ew soft spots, fell back slightly over a point.

Light trading featured public utilities securities, which were irregular. Brooklyn Union Gas 5 1-2s dropped a point, while New York Railways and Chicago Union Elevated 5s advanced a point each. Announcement was made that a public offering of $25,000,000 San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation unifying and refunding mortgage 5 per cent bonds, series D, will be made shortly.

The quotations represent sales of bonds (in thousands of dollars) and the high, low and closing prices in the order given. To expedite transmission, zeros is omitted when same as low, and both low and close when same as high.

RAILS GAIN

The rise in the railroad shares was stimulated by talk of higher dividends and early developments in wage negotiations. Atchison was again a favorite, closing nearly a point higher at 163 3-4. Rock Island, which is expected to put on a dividend basis shortly, moved up to 73 3-4, the highest price ever recorded for the present stock, and then sold down a point. New York Central, Chicago and Northwestern and St. Louis Southwestern also showed substantial gains, but some of the Van Sweringen issues were under pressure.

Call money received at 4½ per cent and held steady at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper were unchanged.

The wheat market displayed a firmer undertone, with an advance of 1 cent a bushel in the May option, but the other commodity markets declined 8 to 15 points, and cotton was nipped 1-32 of a cent per pound.

Foreign exchange held steady with sterling and French francs around the old parity. The Canadian dollar was quoted at a discount of 5-32 of 1 per cent, despite the arrival of a gold shipment here from Montreal.

...ment countries and the United ...ons with the exception of France, ...ich the French representatives act- ...ing on the War Debt Commission ...ave refused to take as a basis of settlement ...ny further indebtedness. At this ...ime it has not been confirmed ...by any proper representative authority ...ere in France or the United ...States.

"There are evidences that if the ...ations between France and the ...United States be improved, the central ...bank of issue, working with the Federal Reserve Bank, have a definite ...basis for stabilization on a gold basis ...and the economy of the respective ...countries. These plans should be ...matured during 1927.

"Although it may or may not prove ...advisable hereafter for the United ...States, it is believed that, in the ...present empire, this action will tend ...to retard the value of our gold reserves and to bring about development in new countries as well as ...assist consumption on the part ...of those countries."

OIL NEWS

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

Facing the prospect of being able to develop perhaps in the neighborhood of 15,000 barrels of production a day from five drilling locations on the south dip of the field, E. L. Doheny made a trip to Ventura yesterday with J. C. Anderson, president of the Doheny oil companies, to take a look at the Petroleum Securities Company's Orton No. 1, which was flowing through the drill pipe at the rate of about 3500 barrels a day.

A production test was made in the Orton at 5616 feet, to see what it would do without being drilled deeper. With 650 pounds of pressure accompanying the flow, the well was making a great deal of gas yesterday and promised to build up somewhat. Mr. Doheny went to look the well over, the company being somewhat doubtful as to the advisability of drilling deeper, for fear of striking bottom water. The well already has 425 feet of good sand.

Orton No. 1 is about 800 feet west of Ventura avenue, and perhaps 500 feet west of Doheny's Willett No. 1, which has been wrestling with a fishing job for several weeks. Completion of the Orton well makes it appear likely that the Doheny organization will have room for at least five good wells on its two leases, embracing about thirty acres. The next project will probably be started between the Orton and Willett.

May Start Temple

Completion of the Orton No. 1 in the Ventura-avenue field at Ventura extends the proven area of that field approximately one-quarter of a mile south, and at the same time calls for some new drilling which may still further extend the field.

Across the avenue, to the east and somewhat to the south of the Doheny leases, the Walter P. Temple interests hold the Percy ranch lease which lies between the avenue school and the California School for Girls. It is asserted that the drilling requirements on this property call for the beginning of a well there within thirty days after the completion of a well at Ventura by Doheny.

Testing V. L. and W.

The Associated Oil Company is making a production test, at something like 5600 feet, in its Ventura Land and Water Company lease northeast of proven territory. This well is east of the McConigle lease, where the first well was completed a week ago. The company is understood to be testing the V. L. and W. short of 6000 feet to avoid running into bottom water, as the well is thought to be close to the north edge of the field.

Test Trust No. 4

The Union Oil Company apparently had effected a successful water shut-off in its Trust No. 4 well in the central part of the Rosecrans field. It was reported by officials of the company yesterday. The well was standing with the top of the oil at 2400 feet, the water level being at 5450 feet. Indications are that the well has succeeded in solving the water problem which has been the bane ever since the first production test was made a year and a half ago. Bottom of the well is at 5855 feet.

New Operators in Field

Two new operators are preparing to drill wells in the new city field in the west end of Huntington Beach, it was reported yesterday. Silas Wicker of Santa Ana is one of the new operators, and Ruther & Graham of Long Beach is the other.

Wicker has a location in the newly opened district, on Fifteenth street between Olive and Orange streets, where he will build a derrick immediately. Ruther & Graham will drill at Fifteenth and Walnut avenue.

G.-P. Well Completed

The General Petroleum Corporation has brought in its Hugo No. 4 well in the Buena-Olinda field with an initial production of about 200 barrels a day, according to field reports. The well originally was on production in the shallow zone, but was taken off production a few months ago, and redrilled to 4525 feet, its present depth.

The General Petroleum has three other wells drilling on the Hugo lease, and expects to have two of them completed within the next two weeks. These are Hugo, No. 5, and Hugo, No. 8.

More Bluff Wells

With its concrete retaining wall along the ocean front nearing completion, the Standard Oil Company is putting into effect an intensive drilling program on its Bluffs property between the Pacific Electric Railway tracks and the ocean. The Standard already has half a dozen wells drilling on this property, which is northwest of the town-lot district, and is building three more derricks. The new wells will be drilled along the shore opposite the town-lot district between Seventeenth street and Twenty-third street.

Starts Three Wells

The Wilshire Oil Company, which pioneered the new city field in the west end of Huntington Beach, is starting three more wells in that area, according to official reports. The new wells will be located on Nineteenth street, one within a block of Ocean avenue, and the other two within two blocks of Ocean avenue.

Shuts Down Wildcat

The California Petroleum Corporation, which has been drilling a wildcat well in the Telegraph Canyon district for the past year, has shut the project down for the time being, it is officially reported. The well is down about 4200 feet, and has indifferent showings, so far. The principal difficulty in drilling the well has been the inadequacy of the water supply, and work will not be resumed until this problem has been worked out.

Gets Small Well

The Standard Oil Company yesterday completed another small well in the Midway field, according to official reports. The well is the Midway No. 6 well, drilled to 3236 feet, which came in at 210 barrels a day.

Down 1675 Feet

George W. Johnson is down 1675 feet in his wildcat well on the boundary line between Los Angeles county and Ventura county, according to field reports. Johnson's well is on the Wickham ranch, and is within 400 feet of the wildcat well which the Marland Oil Company abandoned about four months ago. Johnson expects to get his first showings at around 2800 feet, where the Marland well picked up a good oil sand, which did not pan out when tested.

Starts New Well

The Crude Oil Company, operating in the west end of the city of Huntington Beach, is starting a new well in that field, according to official reports. The new well will be located on Fifteenth street between Ocean and Walnut avenues.

Values are steady at the limited trading prices. Graded dealers are rather firm in their selling price. Woods used in the manufacture of underwear have a fair demand at steady prices.

DRIED FRUITS

NEW YORK CURB STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 7. (AP)—Price movements in the curb market were still irregular today, but the main trend appeared to be upward. The ease of money rates, the strong buying support extended to standard industrials and rails on the "big board" and indications of an apparently unsatisfied investment demand for stocks all helped to create bullish sentiment. Public participation, however, continued on a small scale.

Oils moved within rather narrow and irregular limits. One of the most interesting oil developments of the day was the report that a temporary cessation of drilling operations on the Osage reservation was under consideration by Federal government officials. South American shares were slightly easier.

Revival of activity and strength on the Philip Morris issues, which advanced to new high records, was one of the features of the industrial group. Victor Talking Machine dropped 2 points on realizing following the announcement of an 8% cash dividend and a recapitalization of the company. Elsewhere, the strength of Foundation Company Foreign, Glen Alden Coal, International Nickel, Johns Manville (old) and Melville Shoe was counteracted by the heaviness of Arundel Corporation, Dunhille International, Johns Manville (new,) Singer Manufacturing and White Sewing Machine.

Public utilities were in better demand, with moderate gains being recorded by American Gas and Electric and United Gas Improvement.

The closing price is omitted when same as the low, and both low and close when same as the high. [Sales in Hundreds]

Upturn of Steel Laid to Activity of Strong Pool's Buying

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The sharp upturn in steel common from the low levels of the first hour, was in keeping with the report that a new and powerful pool had been formed by the speculative leader. At the close, the stock was under pressure after selling upward of 200,000 shares, and numerous other issues were forced down to the weekly or new low levels for the effect the downturn of heaviness in the issue would have elsewhere. At that point, however, large buying orders poured in from the stock and within a short space of time were selling at more than 2 points above the low. The buying is understood to have been on the position on the theory that the bear raid has not by any means discounted the proposed 40 per cent melon. Impressive buying continued well into the afternoon and left the general list a somewhat better tone.

Bulls in Demand

The firm short in Steel appeared to encourage a resumption of bullish operations in other directions. This was particularly true with regard to the railroad shares which, after sagging slightly at the outset, stiffened and responded to a broad and brisk demand in subsequent dealings. Led by gainers, notably Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Chicago Milwaukee, the entire carrier group swung ahead, with Atchison and New York Central moving up to new activity. Many accepted this movement as a strategic move to bull intended to discourage aggressive selling elsewhere.

Bear Bet Not Dangerous

Operators working for a reaction were in a position to capitalize the increase shown in stock exchange collateral loans as a basis for selling for a decline on the opening. But, while the trend was inclined to keep its followers on their toes to worry about for the time being, the increase had been discounted by the weekly figures issued by the federal reserve bank, and proved no great surprise. Unemployed funds piling up at the money centers and the investment market fairly boiling, the edge seemed to be off attempted bearish drives.

Industrial Can Drops

Industrial Can was under rather heavy pressure for a time today, and sold to new low levels on the day. Some were inclined to look for the selling to professionals looking for a reaction on the theory that trouble in American Can would find reflection in Continental and other carriers the selling was regarded as largely in the nature of discouraged liquidation by those who expect the forthcoming dividend statement to show up rather well. It was recalled that at the time of the last year an extra dividend of 11 was voted, but few if anything more than the regular 2 is the approaching meeting.

Motor Investment Market

Motors here today had their busiest session of the month, and the chief feature of trading in investment issues was the indicated drift away from the glit-edge descriptions into more speculative lines. This movement a significant sign by those are bullish on good stocks in the trend. The rise in bonds, however, has reduced yields to a point where investment demand will shortly subside in the absence of high-grade stocks. Many think it is reasoned, can still be an satisfactory terms, and there is no sufficient potential corrective force in the market to effectively lift it from the present rut and start an upswing of proportions.

New Top for N. Y.

Trading featured the nondividend railroad group throughout the session, getting into new ground soon after the start of business was traced to short covering was regarded as unfounded as stated to go on a long pull, probably 84 or 85 at the outset. No disappointment was felt at the failure of directors to discuss the question at their meeting early this week for the reason that a directors' meeting had been called in December as saying that it would happen before February. Buying of the stock on the dips was good right along.

SHIPPING and Los Angeles Harbor NEWS

FUTURE OF NEW SERVICE BRIGHT

Success of Line to Mexico Harbor Promised

Capt. Hancock Optimistic on Outlook for Trade

Mazatlan Tomato Shipments to Start Shortly

Trade experiments of Capt. G. Allan Hancock between California and Mazatlan promise to put the Mexican port on the commercial map, according to the Los Angeles capitalist who sailed south again yesterday with his trail-blazing passenger and freight steamer Oaxaca.

Tomato imports alone, from a highly uncertain venture in the past, promise to develop into an item of material volume for Los Angeles through the putting on of the cool air carrier. Capt. Hancock yesterday estimated 70,000 crates of the early Mexican product would be brought to Los Angeles from his Mazatlan ranch alone by the Oaxaca in the next few months, while he also will receive consignments from San Jose del Cabo and other near-by ports.

Southbound shipments also are developing into serious proportions, the Oaxaca departing yesterday with several hundred tons of pipe, lumber and general merchandise.

Passenger travel also is making headway, the vessel taking a number south yesterday in addition to a private party of Capt. Hancock's, which included Misses Mary Mullen, Mary Duggan, Marion Mullin; Mrs. Mary Bert Stevens, W. S. Strowbridge and Dr. and Mrs. Dan Sink.

The steamer will return the 16th inst., with 2100 crates of tomatoes as the first real shipment of the season, and sails south the 21st inst. Departing that trip she will carry a number of bankers, and on the following trip will have aboard several Santa Maria and Santa Barbara bankers, merchants and plantation men.

ADMIRAL LINE HAS BEST YEAR IN HISTORY

In his understanding of all other passenger-carrying services likewise hung a new record as to patronage.

Advance inquiries and bookings, however, foreshadow even greater travel this year, in particular, according to Captain Schuetten. All new liners, already booked to capacity, running into hundreds of the summer cruises of Southern Californians for the first cruise of Southern Californians for the first cruise of Southern Californians for the first cruise

Coal Producers' Counsel Fight His Appointment on Federal Commission

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7. (AP)—Attacks on the nomination of Cyrus E. Woods of Pennsylvania as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission were made today before a Senate committee by counsel for coal producers in Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Albert M. Belcher of Charleston, W. Va., declared that Mr. Woods' former and present corporate connections with Pennsylvania coal concerns and railroads and his appearance as attorney of record in the original lake cargo coal-rate case, which is again before the commission, disqualified him for membership.

Before Mr. Belcher made his statement, Mr. Woods had told the committee that he not only would not participate in the pending lake case, which involves rates on coal from the Pennsylvania and southern fields to lake ports, but would feel that he also was disqualified to take part in any continuation of the case after a decision is rendered.

Before his examination was concluded by Senator Goff, Republican, West Virginia, and other members of the committee, the former Ambassador to Spain and Japan denied the testimony of Joseph E. Grundy, head of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, before the Senate Campaign Funds Committee, and published reports that he was the manager for the combined Pepper-Penrose-Smith-Woodward ticket in the recent $3,080,000 Republican primary in the Keystone State.

STOUT-HEARTED WOMAN PASSES

Mrs. Macart of Hollywood Rare Personality

Pioneer in Animal Acts on Vaudeville Stage

Amasses Fortune in Old Age by Enterprise

Funeral services were conducted yesterday for Mrs. Joseph G. Macart, who probably was as remarkable a woman as Los Angeles has ever known. Practically penniless at the age of 70 years, she amassed in Los Angeles during the past seven years a small fortune, variously estimated from $100,000 to $150,000.

Mrs. Macart, as she was known in her old-time circus and vaudeville actress. Her husband was Fred Macart, also a showman and vaudeville artist. The pair were known for many years. They were probably pioneers in the training of monkeys for circus work. Their line was a dog-and-monkey act. When she was with the circus in her youth Mme. Macart did trapeze work.

COMMENCES AGAIN

After she settled down in Hollywood in their declining years, Mme. Macart was left practically penniless. That was only seven years ago. To support herself she was forced to take over a large house and she took in roomers.

A. H. Taft, head of the Taft Realty Company, a success himself, became acquainted with Mme. Macart and found that he was sure she could have a success selling real estate. He followed his suggestion and went to work for him.

Starting to business men with whom she had dealings, she snowed under quickly. J. M. Hutchinson, president of the Farmers and Merchants National Bank, who handled much of her affairs, said she seemed to have an uncanny instinct in guessing the future values of real estate. When she acquired money she bought property of her own. She built it over and made more and more, she went in on syndicate deals and shared in the profits.

Despite the fact that she was taken ill for three years was virtually confined to bed she continued her business activities. Her illness was a blow to her continued success. She continued business people to her home and conducted her affairs with them from her bedside.

ALERT TO LAST

In alertness of mind and high hopes were with her to the very end. It was only last Christmas Day that she entertained callers. Harry Leonard, general manager for the Western Vaudeville Managers' Association, was among those who visited her that day and he said she was sitting up in bed and was as bright as ever. She died unexpectedly.

Funeral services were conducted today. Burial was at the Hollywood Cemetery mausoleum. The pallbearers included, besides Mr. Harrison and Mr. Leonhardt, A. L. Taft of the Taft Realty Company, Ben Piedon, stage manager for the Orpheum; Harry English, secretary-manager of the National Vaudeville Artists' Club of Los Angeles; and A. Edward.

Mme. Macart resided at 5443 Sierra Vista street. She is said to have had a brother who died in their youth. She was a niece.

Miss Eva Forshaw, 27 years of age, of 682 South Coronado street, and Charles W. Benjamin, deputy county marshal, were injured, the former critically, in traffic accidents yesterday, police reported.

Miss Forshaw was taken to the Receiving Hospital and later to the Methodist Hospital. She suffered a crushed chest, concussion of the brain, a compound fracture of the left arm and fractured ribs.

Benjamin, who is 50 years of age and lives at 917 West Fifth street, was engaged in moving property when he was injured. He was in the street in front of 133 South Grand avenue when he was struck by an automobile driven by M. H. Downs, 240 West Sixty-fourth street.

The association will meet at 10 a.m. Monday at Knights of Pythias Hall, 230 South Spring street. Officers are John G. Todd, former Fire Chief, president; E. L. TWO NAMED TO AIRPORT COMMITTEE

Others to be Picked Soon; Group Meets Thursday to Study Sites Offered

Appointment of Zack Farmer and H. R. Brashear to represent the Community Development Association and the Chamber of Commerce respectively, on the advisory committee to aid the city in working out the Municipal Airport question was announced yesterday.

ZACK FARMER.

Three other members of the advisory committee, representing other civic organizations, will be appointed shortly, it was stated by Councilman Hughes, chairman of the special City Council committee on the airport. This committee will meet again next Thursday to study the project further.

H. R. BRASHEAR.

A number of sites for the proposed airport already have been placed before the committee, Councilman Hughes stated by Councilman Hughes. These include a 2400-acre site at One Hundred and Ninetieth street, another at Main street and Harbor Boulevard, a 640-acre plot near the Bandini industrial tract, 320 acres near Arcadia and 1000 acres near Central and South Park avenues.

It is proposed that the city construct the airport as a headquarters for both government and commercial planes. The rent charged the latter is expected ultimately to pay for the airport.

OPENING OF BROADWAY TO ADVANCE

Council Plans to Adopt Ordinance of Intention at Session on Monday

The new ordinance of intention for the opening and extending of Broadway from Pico street to Forty-first street, where it will join with Moneta avenue, will be adopted by the City Council Monday morning. The ordinance was before the Council yesterday, but as twelve members must be present to suspend the rules and adopt the ordinance on day of presentation, no action could be taken yesterday. Councilmen Criswell, Hall, Sparks and Zahn were absent.

The former Broadway-opening ordinance was repealed due to technical changes that had to be made as a result of the court decision invalidating the first Tenth-street widening proceedings.

The new assessment-district map for the Broadway opening was adopted by the Council November 26, last. Because of the benefit to the entire city to result from the opening and extending of Broadway, the city will contribute $500,000 toward the cost of the improvement. The Board of Education will return toward the cost of the improvement in assessments the amount the board will receive as damages for the condemnation of property for the Broadway widening, estimated at $26,700.

COUNCIL DEALS SHARKS BLOW

Resolution Authorizes City to Buy Delinquencies

Contractors Asked to Help Protect Land Owners

Workman in Move to Cut Burden of Assessment

To help property owners keep out of the hands of the assessment sharks, City Clerk Dominguez has issued the following notice to the public:

"List your property within the city with the City Clerk, Room 6, City Hall, north annex, 226 South Broadway, either by calling in person or by mailing descriptions of property within the city of Los Angeles you own. Then you will be notified when special city assessments for street improvements, storm drains, sewers, ornamental lighting posts, etc., become due and to whom payable. Don't delay. Do it now."

President Workman of the City Council yesterday called upon all contractors, their financial backers and improvement-bond houses to cooperate with the city in making effective the action taken by the Council yesterday to drive the assessment sharks out of business.

This action was the adoption of a resolution by which the city will purchase all delinquent assessments on improvements constructed under the act of 1911 of less than $25, in order to keep these assessments out of the hands of the sharks. The delinquent assessments can then be paid off by the property owners at the City Hall on payment of the assessment with the legal interest rate of 10 per cent per annum on the delinquency.

"The resolution adopted by the Council," said President Workman, "I believe, will be the most effective blow ever dealt the assessment sharks, but will require the co-operation of the contractors, their financial backers and the legitimate investment-bond houses to make the plan work, for under the act of 1911 the collection of assessments is done by the contractor or his assigns.

WILL BUY PAPER

"Under the terms of the resolution adopted yesterday, the city will purchase these delinquent assessments of less than $25 from the contractor or his assigns, often a finance company or a bond investment company. If the contractor or his assigns refuses to sell these delinquent assessments to the city, there is nothing further the Council can do about the matter, unfortunately, except that in cases of refusals, I believe that the public should be informed of the names of these contractors, finance companies and improvement-bond houses that refuse to join with the city in protecting the property owners from these sharks. If the companies prefer to sell these delinquent assessments to sharks rather than to the city, then the public should know it."

THE RESOLUTION

The resolution, unanimously adopted by the City Council yesterday, on motion of Councilman Colden, was as follows:

"Whereas, the City Engineer has reported to the City Clerk that between January 1 and July 1, next, there will be completed and accepted by the city more than fifty public improvements, necessitating assessments on two hundred and fifty thousand (250,000) property owners; and,

"Whereas, the Council and its legislative committee are aware of the serious injustices practiced on property owners whose public improvement assessments under twenty-five ($25) dollars have become delinquent, causing these property owners to deal with brokers in order to redeem their property;

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that the City Council hereby directs that in all assessments levied under the

Failure of Keyes to File Information in November Believed to Have Outlawed Issue

That the conspiracy charges against Aimee Semple McPherson and other codefendants were outlawed by a stipulation and that the case has been a dead issue since late in November was the startling opinion expressed last night by a number of leading jurists and attorneys of the city.

The attorneys and judges consulted asserted that the case was outlawed when Dist.-Atty. Keyes failed to file in the Superior Court information against the defendants within thirty days after commitment papers were signed and filed in Superior Court by Municipal Judge Blake, who held the evangelist to answer.

By the terms of a stipulation between the District Attorney, Mrs. McPherson and other defendants, the time for the filing of the information was extended for an additional thirty days until the 10th inst. The time automatically fixed by law was late in November.

While there was a difference of opinion among some of the lawyers interviewed yesterday the point raised an interesting question of law, they said. Even if the extension of time for the filing of the information did outlaw the case it was believed by those who expressed their opinions last night that Mrs. McPherson's attorneys would not take advantage of the point inasmuch as they, too, signed the agreement.

However, some of the attorneys and judges interviewed were of the opinion that the law makes it mandatory on the District Attorney to file an information within thirty days after the commitment papers are filed. They based their belief on Section 809 of the Penal Code, which uses the words "it shall be the duty of the District Attorney to file an information within thirty days."

WORD "SHALL" POINTED TO

The State Supreme Court has held, the judges and attorneys stated, that the word "shall" carries a mandatory meaning. Furthermore, the filing of an information gives the Superior Court jurisdiction over a case and, they stated, jurisdiction cannot be conferred by stipulation.

A number of other attorneys were of the belief that the stipulation would stand the test, inasmuch as Mrs. McPherson, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman, the defendants, affixed their signatures to the stipulation waiving the time set by the law for the filing of the papers. Their attorneys also signed the document as did Mr. Keyes.

For the reason that the defendants themselves, and not the attorneys as in most other cases, agreed to the stipulation, these attorneys were of the opinion that Mr. Keyes was within his rights in asking for such a continuance.

"MIRACLE" LECTURE TO BE GIVEN

Expert to Explain All About Spectacle

Elinor Patterson as the Nun

LEAVE WITH PAY GIVEN ASSESSOR

Col. W. G. Schreiber Will Take Extended Rest From Arduous Duties

The tremendous increase in the work of the City Bureau of Assessments which last year levied $23,000,000 in assessments and will this year levy $30,000,000 resulted yesterday in the Board of Public Works and the City Council granting a three months' leave of absence with pay to Col. W. G. Schreiber, for thirty-seven years head of the bureau.

The work of the bureau during the past year was many times greater than during other years. In addition, Col. Schreiber had to battle with the Council for necessary additional personnel and working space for the bureau.

On December 31, Col. Schreiber tendered his resignation to the Board of Public Works stating that the condition of his health did not permit his remaining at his post. The board refused to consider the resignation, on account of Col. Schreiber's long record for efficiency and the esteem in which he is held, and so yesterday voted him the leave of absence with pay which was quickly approved by Council.

During Col. Schreiber's absence, the Assessment Bureau will be in charge of Maj. R. F. Follmer, assistant assessment clerk.

MISS VICTORIA POWELL, who for the past three years has been lecturing on "The Miracle," will deliver tomorrow night a talk on the Reinhardt spectacle from Dr. Frank Dyer's pulpit in the Wilshire Boulevard Congregational Church, Wilshire Boulevard and Plymouth avenue, at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Powell's talk not only is descriptive of the spectacle and pageantry being produced here by Morris Gest at the Shrine Auditorium, but also includes data on the working of the organization of 600 persons who move through the mute story of "The Miracle" with rarely a sound of a voice and only the boom of old Gregorian chants from an organ echoing through the vast Gothic cathedral to guide them; the symphony orchestra playing at other times the colorful score of Humperdinck and the distant choir chanting old Maria chants as were sung by the Rhineland peasants.

Among the members of the cast who are prominent socially is Elinor Patterson as the Nun. She is the daughter of Joseph Medill Patterson, co-editor of the Chicago Tribune, and she was a society girl when Mr. Gest chose her for a part in "The Miracle." She has been with the company for the past two years.

Miss Powell will tell how Karl Vollmoeller at a suggestion from Reinhardt wrote "The Miracle" from the old Rhineland legend, which inspired Maurice Maeterlinck to write "Sister Beatrice," Gottfried Keller's story, "The Virgin and the Nun" and John Davidson's poem, "A Ballad of a Nun."

Miss Powell will give free lectures at Bullock's on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 11 a.m. in the special hall built in connection with "The Miracle" exhibition and at Central Library Thursday at 3:30 p.m. and the 20th inst at 8 p.m.

RIVER PROJECT TOPIC

"The Colorado River Project," is the title of a talk to be given by Dr. Reuel L. Olson, professor of law at the University of Southern California and author of the Colorado River compact, at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Federation of State Societies, composed of officers of all the State societies, on Monday at the Broadway Grill. The president of the federation, Col. F. M. Rubles, will preside.

INDUSTRY HERE LEADING COAST

Figures for 1925 Disclose Remarkable Gain

Percentage Increase Far in Van of Other Points

San Francisco Has Decline; Oakland Forges On

Industry in the city of Los Angeles is increasing faster than in any other city on the Pacific Coast, according to census of manufactures for the year 1925, recently received by R. D. Sangster of the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce.

The value of manufactured product of industries in the city of Los Angeles during 1925 was $545,983,480, or an increase of approximately 31 per cent over the value as recorded in 1923 by the Federal census.

While Portland, Seattle and Oakland showed varying increases for the two-year period ranging from 4 to 19 per cent, San Francisco's product fell off nearly 2 per cent.

FIGURES CITED

The comparative figures were as follows:

City.	1925.	1923.
Los Angeles	$545,983,480	$417,654,681
San Francisco	460,112,286	416,717,535
Seattle	165,761,662	153,780,947
Portland	166,956,959	134,414,779
Oakland	146,341,333	132,491,578

The comparison is limited to the several cities and does not include their respective metropolitan areas.

Los Angeles in 1923 was less than $1,500,000 ahead of San Francisco, the second highest output, whereas in 1925 she stood about $140,000,000 ahead of the northern metropolis; in other words, almost equal to San Francisco and Oakland combined.

Los Angeles not only is outstripping other Pacific Coast localities industrially, but has done so consistently for several years.

COMPARISON SHOWN

By the census of manufactures the comparative increases of value in manufacturer products in the industrial centers on the Pacific Coast during the decade 1914 to 1923 were as follows:

	Per cent.
Los Angeles	304
San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley combined	180
San Francisco (only)	137
Seattle	142

The Federal census of manufactures was taken every five years prior to 1919 and since then has been made every two years.

Formerly it included all industries operated on the "factory system," but beginning with 1921 no establishment is included having an annual output of less than $5000.

Veteran Given State Pay Due Him Since 1898

For nearly twenty-nine years money has reposed in the treasury of the State of Montana for a number of veterans who enlisted from that State at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, according to John V. Lemon of the Sawtelle Soldiers' home.

JOHN V. LEMON.

Yesterday Lemon, who enlisted in the First Montana Infantry, Company C, on April 28, 1898, received a check for $22.95 from the office of the Governor, which he only recently discovered was due him.

According to Lemon, that sum represents compensation from the State from the date of his enlistment until he was mustered into service of the Regular Army, May 7, 1898. He says several States made this provision at the outbreak of the war, but many veterans do not know it.

The Lancer

Every time a new administration goes into power all the crude errors of the past are going to be dismissed with Christian forgiveness and perfection is to reign thenceforth.

As, for instance, the sweet but efficient way—from now on—the State traffic cops are going to deal with the offending public. And the public are going to remember always to be ladies and gentlemen at all times and so on . . .

According to the new chief of the State Motor Vehicle Department. . . .

Here's wishing him luck, anyhow. There's no reason why a lowbrow with a police star should be allowed to insult motorists who break the law. Or to make comments—rude or otherwise.

THE LAST GASP

The soviet government of Russia has begun to pass out marriages and divorces like food samples at a country fair.

This is the beginning of the end. You will see that Russia will scratch off the vermin who have been ruling it since the revolution—and that very shortly.

Revolutions seem to have a normal course which must be run. If Russia follows the accustomed course, there will shortly be a return to some sort of monarchy—not the Romanoffs, however—and then the emergence into some sane sort of republican government.

Meanwhile the Lenin-Trotzky regime leaves a record of horror, blood, debauchery and crime unequaled in all human annals.

Lenin, unfortunately, is dead. But there is still Trotzky. We can only hope that he will get what is coming to him when the upheaval comes—and that it will hurt him plentifully.

COL. HOUSE

"Col." House and Senator Glass are quarreling as to whom belongs the credit for the achievements of the Woodrow Wilson administration.

This is a laugh. The havoc of our present troubles—both in the Latin countries and in Europe, is the echo of the Wilson achievements.

If Wilson had preserved a severely legal attitude toward the countries at war in Europe—insisting upon our strict, literal, technical legal rights, we never would have been in the war.

We nearly got into a war with England during our own Civil War over the Mason-Slidell affair; then Wilson allowed England gaily to tip over her own doctrine during the World War blockade. And, on the other hand, permitted Germany to get away with murder.

We will be lucky, before we are through, if it does not cost us money and blood to regain the prestige lost in the farce comedy "invasion" of Mexico in pursuit of Villa.

If "Col." House is responsible for the foreign policy of the United States during the Wilson administration—as he darkly hints—he had better hunt up an old ladies' home and learn to do tatting.

SLAB-SIDED FLAPPERS

The health of the modern flapper would seem, however, to be one of those things that needn't be worried about.

ARMY' AGENT FEARED SLAIN

Augusto B. Ruque, said by Federal operatives to have been the "special agent" for Gen. Enrique Estrada, accused Mexican rebel, is being held by his attorney, Lorrin Andrews, to have met with foul play. Andrews has asked Lucien Wheeler, head of the Department of Justice in Southern California, to conduct a hunt for the missing agent.

Ruque's failure to appear before Federal Judge Jennings Thursday when his name was called as a witness in the Estrada case led to issuance of a bench warrant and forfeiture of his bond.

The missing man was last seen when he left Attorney Andrews's office in the U. S. Chapman Building Thursday morning. He announced that he was going for San Diego on business. Mr. Andrews's inquiry revealed that he had not reached the southern city.

MAY REBUILD CASE

The disappearance of Ruque means that the government attorneys must rebuild their case, it was indicated yesterday at the prosecutor's office.

Estrada and his 181 companions in exile are charged with coveting the throne of the Calles government by the U. S. Atty. Ohannesian yesterday declared the opening gun in the trial of Estrada and eighty-seven others accused under Federal statutes with having conspired and organized an armed expedition against the Republic of Mexico from U. S. soil.

Special assistant United States attorneys appeared before United States Judge Jennings in the forenoon and made a denunciation of the Mexican rebels whose capture by Department of Justice operatives last fall nipped what he termed "an armed invasion" of a country at peace with the United States.

VIOLATED NEUTRALITY

"We are not so interested in what Estrada and his men intended to do in Mexico as we are with their deliberate violation of the American neutrality law," Ohannesian declared.

He then detailed the Federal investigation, beginning with the observance of shipments of arms from New York to San Diego to the Parker Hardware Company; the purchase of airplanes from a San Diego manufacturer, and the purchase of dynamite, caps and fuses in California, all of which is outlined in the grand jury indictments of the defendants.

"The airplanes were ordered under the signature of Jose S. Healy, Irish-Mexican newspaper man and secretary to Estrada," Ohannesian charged.

"The munitions were ordered by Benjamin Ruque, whom we believe to be financial agent for Estrada."

Ohannesian pieced together the bits of evidence laboriously gathered by Capt. A. A. Hopkins, Department of Justice agent who caused the arrest of Estrada and his men near Tia Juana. Estrada never moved a muscle in his face as the firey prosecutor struck repeatedly at the former Secretary of War in the Huerta Cabinet.

It was intimated yesterday by the defense that the defense would not make its opening statement until after the government had introduced its evidence.

NEW STREET NAME ASKED

Residents on Cashio street, formerly Seventeenth Drive, yesterday petitioned the City Council to change the name of the street to Alta Loma Drive.

TWO SEIZED IN LIQUOR DEATH

Companions of Youth Suffer Severe Bad Effects

Brothers Taken on Suspicion of Manslaughter

Clay Hankins, 46 years of age, and a brother, William Hankins, 48, of 1737 East Ninety-second street, were arrested last night by Deputy Sheriffs Peters, Hanby and Hackett charged with suspicion of manslaughter in connection with the death yesterday of Dennis J. Cavanaugh, 22, believed by officers to have been caused by poison liquor.

The arrests followed an ultimatum issued by Harry Wright, chief criminal deputy sheriff, that in the future every effort will be made to apprehend venders of poison liquor and prosecute them for manslaughter in case of the death of any of their customers.

TRAIL PICKED UP

The trail of the poison liquor was picked up by the officers when they discovered that two other youths who had been with young Cavanaugh on the night of his death were in a serious condition as a result of their drinking. Walter Scott, 20, of 1622 Van Ness avenue, Graham Station, was in a critical condition at his home and "Tex" Scott, a friend, of 1832 Tansey street, Graham Station, was ill after drinking with Cavanaugh. Both youths told officers they and Cavanaugh had purchased the liquor in a store at 1712 East Ninety-second street owned by the Hankins brothers.

Cavanaugh's body was discovered on the lawn beside the residence of Mrs. Minnie Green at 1647 Roosevelt avenue yesterday morning by Gwyndola Wood, 14, who was passing the house on an errand. Mrs. Green when informed of the tragedy, immediately informed the Sheriff's office.

TOTAL INCREASED

An investigation revealed that young Cavanaugh had returned to his home at 1531 East Ninety-second street Thursday night and after dinner had left the house in good health. His father, Dennis Cavanaugh, Sr., told officers that his son, although not addicted to drink, occasionally imbibed.

When last seen alive the youth was in company with the Scott boys, according to C. A. Hawkins, owner of a cigar store at 1713 East Ninety-second street, who related the incident to the authorities.

A strong odor of alcohol about the youth's body led to investigation of the theory that Cavanaugh's death had been caused by poisoned liquor.

Cavanaugh's death, according to Coroner Nance, makes a total of fourteen persons who have lost their lives in Los Angeles since the beginning of the Christmas holidays by drinking poisoned liquor.

GRIFFITHS IN CITY ON WAY SOUTH

Veteran Yachtsman and Shipping Magnate to Hunt in Gulf of California

Admiral James Griffiths, admiral of the Pacific Coast Yachting Association and Puget Sound shipping magnate, arrived from Seattle yesterday aboard the Admiral liner H. F. Alexander, to board his yacht Sueja for a lengthy hunting expedition in the upper reaches of the Gulf of Lower California.

Besides Mrs. Griffiths, the veteran yachtsman was accompanied by Capt. H. A. Haley, commander of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress, Australia, who, with his wife, will also make the cruise.

The Sueja, a new 112-foot craft regarded as the finest Diesel-driven yacht on the Pacific, met the H. F. Alexander off Point Fermin yesterday morning and escorted Admiral Griffiths into port.

When she makes her northbound voyage from Los Angeles Harbor on the 21st inst., the H. F. Alexander will take north the entire company of Universal screen players who will make "Back to God's Country," a production which Lynn Reynolds will direct with Mt. Rainier as scenic background.

Mrs. Carroll Dies at Home in Santa Monica

Mrs. Edgar B. Carroll died Thursday night of pneumonia at her home in Santa Monica. She will be remembered by many friends in San Jose, where she was born and lived, and in Sacramento and San Francisco, where she married and lived for many years. With her at the time of her death was Lewis E. Hanchett, her brother.

Mrs. Carroll was a sister of Mrs. George Crocker of San Francisco and Mrs. J. B. Wright of Sacramento, who died some years ago. Mrs. Carroll's parents were pioneers, having crossed the plains to California in '49.

MAKES IT TOUGH ON GAME FISH

Craft Designed to Aid Deep-Sea Angler

Capt. Farnsworth and Sporting Boat

A SPORT fishing boat designed by Capt. George Farnsworth which it is believed will revolutionize game fishing has been launched by the Wilmington Boat Works.

The unique craft was built especially for the taking of broadbill sword fish and tuna in Catalina waters. It has a cockpit equipped with revolving chair in the bow as well as aft. This permits the following of a fish head-on in the natural way instead of backing up on the fish.

A sunken deck with twenty-seven inch bulwark and eighteen-inch clearance allows for the angler to follow his catch around the boat and saves much maneuvering of the craft during a fight with a great game fish. The aft cockpit is equipped with two revolving chairs.

The sport fishing boat has three controls, one in the bow, one on top of the cabin, which serves as a lookout and is mounted by a powerful searchlight, and a third in the aft cockpit.

A fully equipped galley, independent lighting system and a new ventilating system have been incorporated in the building of the boat by Capt. Farnsworth. The ventilating system forces draft through five funnels into the bilge and eliminates dangerous explosive gases. Two 100 horsepower Kermath engines are below the bridge deck. All tanks are aft of the engine room.

The sport boat has a cruising radius of 1000 miles, carries 1100 gallons of fuel and 800 gallons of water. She has a fully equipped galley, a pilot house and chart room, which also serves as a salon, and a cabin with berths for four persons. The craft is 40 feet in length with 10.6-foot beam, finished in teakwood and cost $18,000 to build.

BAIL INCREASED IN DELINQUENCY CHARGE

Clyde Clark, charged with a statutory offense against Natalie Williams, 16 years of age, was returned to jail yesterday when his bail was increased from $2500 to $5000 by Judge Hardy. Clark entered a plea of not guilty. His trial is scheduled for February 7. The Williams girl is said to be a member of the wealthy Everhart family of New York. She is declared to have become acquainted with Clark several months ago, when he was employed as a chauffeur by her grandmother. Clark is represented by Attorney Richard C. Hunting.

VENTURA, Jan. 7.—Construction of a $35,000 modern two-story hotel was started here today by Joseph Hoover. Hoover declared that the hotel will be one of the finest in Ventura. The new hotel will be leased to a well-known California hotel company, but the name of the operating company was not announced. Workmen started to lay the foundation for the hotel today.

CARE IN BACKING OF CARS URGED

Trucks More Often Involved in Reversing Accidents, KHJ Listeners Hear

More care in backing was urged in the daily traffic talk given yesterday over KHJ by the police bureau of public safety. Drivers were asked to be more careful in backing out of driveways and alleyways, on public streets and in other places.

"Motor trucks are involved in backing accidents more frequently than passenger cars," it was said, "partly on account of the large, special bodies which prevent drivers from seeing to the rear. Whenever a truck is being run backward, someone should stand within view of the driver and direct him by motions of the hands."

A large amount of damage is done to private property by careless truck drivers and delivery men who run their vehicles upon lawns, break up sidewalks and damage driveways, ruin trees and shrubbery, tear off steps, etc.

Act of 1911 on improvements completed before July 1, next, the bureau of assessments be directed to furnish the City Council with a list and amount of delinquent assessments of less than twenty-five ($25) dollars on these improvements, so that the city, through this Council, can then purchase these delinquent assessments in the same manner as has been and is being done by the Council of assessments under other improvement acts."

DELINQUENCY SMALL

The relatively small number of assessments of less than $25 that became delinquent was shown by records obtained by Efficiency Director Knox in order to assist the Council in its work to drive the assessment sharks out of business. In five large improvements where there is a total of $2,177 assessments of which 8158 were for less than $25 each, of these 8158 only 929 were delinquent. Giving these an average of $10 each, which is large, the city's outlay in purchasing these delinquent assessment would be less than $10,000. That these are 100 per cent collectible is shown by the fact that the assessment sharks pay the delinquent assessment and a bonus to the finance companies for these assessments.

The city's interest earnings last year on the assessments now purchased by the city for improvements constructed under the Opening and Widening Act of 1903, the Improvement Act of 1913 and the Street Lighting Act was $17,000.

The Council yesterday struck at the heart of the problem of protecting the property owners from the delinquent assessment sharks, as most Los Angeles public improvements—paving, sewers, storm drains, etc.—are now being built under the provisions of the Act of 1911.

DESIRE TO PAY

Actual practice at the City Hall in connection with the payment of those delinquent assessments now being purchased by the city show that all property owners desire to pay these small assessments and remove the liens on their property. The sharks serve notice on the property owners and demand attorney's fees and costs in addition to interest. In the case of the delinquent assessments purchased by the city are no attorney's fees and costs to pay, and thus a terrific blow will be dealt to the assessment sharks, if the contractors and the finance committees will co-operate by saying "No" to the assessment sharks and will self these delinquent assessments to the city.

SEEKS TO LOWER ASSESSMENT BURDEN

To ascertain if changes in procedure can be made so as to reduce the public improvement assessment burden in Los Angeles, President Workman of the City Council yesterday appointed two committees.

The possible budgeting of public improvements so that the year's work can be laid out in advance in such a manner that no one section of the city will be overburdened with assessments at the same period will be investigated by a committee consisting of Councilmen Barnes, Sanborn and Ash, City Efficiency Director Knox, City Engineer Shaw and City Attorney Stephens.

A committee consisting of Councilmen Allan, Randall and Shaw was appointed to confer with the County Board of Supervisors to work out, if possible, the using of county flood-control bonds for building main lines of city storm drains which carry city and county flood waters. The taxpayers of the city now pay 80 per cent of the expense and the bond charges for flood-control work, President Workman said, and the city should therefore receive assistance in its storm-drain construction which is now paid entirely by city assessment districts, the taxpayers in which are also paying for the county flood-control work.

PARTICULAR WHO WASHED FACE

And Since He Wouldn't Let Wife's Dog Do It, He Lost Her, He Says

Just because Elmer E. Wood would not allow Lorene Ann Wood's dog to lick his face, she became so angry she told him she did not love him, according to Wood's suit for divorce, filed yesterday.

Mrs. Wood declared she liked the dog better than she did her husband, Wood complained, a declaration which he said caused him grievous mental anguish.

Rum Defendant Gets Fine When He Dodges Oath

Jose R. Domingues was perfectly willing to testify in his own behalf when invited to do so yesterday by Municipal Judge Turney before whom he had been haled to answer to charges of possessing liquor.

But, he commented, it would be a waste of time if he had to testify under oath.

"Why do you object to taking the oath," queried Judge Turney.

"Well, your honor," Dominguez explained, "if a man tells a lie under oath he will go to hell. If he is not under oath nothing will happen to him. If I took the oath, I wouldn't do myself any good without sacrificing my future life after death."

Dominguez did not testify. Judge Turney found him guilty.

The judge imposed a fine of $150, remarking as he did that at least loss of salvation will not be a penalty Dominguez would have to face, if his opposition to the oath is based on fact.

SALESMAN HELD HERE ON MICHIGAN CHARGE

Calvin Taylor, a salesman, was taken into custody yesterday by Detective Lieutenants Edwards and Davis on a fugitive warrant from Benton Harbor, Mich., in which he is charged with embezzlement. The arrest was made at 726 South Broadway and police will hold the suspect pending further word from Benton Harbor authorities. Details of the case against Taylor are lacking here.

THOMAS H. GOSS

RESEDA, Jan. 7.—Thomas H. Goss, rancher, who lived on Hatteras street in the Runnymede section, is dead. The body was interred today in Hollywood Cemetery by the Van Nuys Funeral Parlors. Mr. Goss is survived by his widow, Mrs. Esther Goss.

Local College Debate Team to Leave on Tour

Two Occidental debaters, Don Tyler and Glenn Lembke, and their coach, Charles F. Lindsley, will leave late in January to carry the East-West conquest across the Rockies in an endeavor to break the tie existing since the New Year game between the sections. They will engage in thirteen debate conflicts with college teams as far east as Cleveland, O.

The Eagle Rock team is working against time now to prepare for a trip of 8000 miles, and a schedule of fifteen debates in twenty days upon six different questions.

Don Tyler first attracted oratorical fame by winning the national interscholastic oratorical championship at Washington, D. C., in 1924; he has since been on three varsity debating teams at Occidental. Lembke has debated for eight consecutive years on South Pasadena school and Occidental College teams and is now debating manager. Prof Lindsley, as head of the speech education department, was called to Occidental from the University of Minnesota staff in 1924 and has coached debate winners each year since.

The men will leave the 20th inst. to visit Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah, discussing the question of personal liberty; University of Denver, Denver, Colo., to argue that democracy has failed; Park College, Parkville, Mo., on the same question; Butler College, Indianapolis, Ind., and Wittenberg College, Springfield, O., on the question of personal liberty. Three other Ohio debates are with Ohio Wesleyan University, Denison University at Granville and Western Reserve University at Cleveland, where the question of war debts payments will absorb attention.

February 1 they will meet Marquette University in Milwaukee to argue against modification of the Volstead Act. Farm relief will be talked at Carroll College and Lawrence College in Wisconsin; prohibition at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa, and the question of alumni control of universities with the University of California, February 10.

SANTA MONICA CITY OFFICIAL INJURED

SANTA MONICA, Jan. 7. — J. T. Peasgood, City Building Inspector, suffered head and back injuries which may prove serious in an auto crash today. At Euclid avenue and Cedar street, his car collided with that of Mrs. Jennie McWarco of 2780 Verdun street, Los Angeles. Peasgood was taken to the Santa Monica Hospital for X-ray examination.

FOUR-STORY PLUNGE KILLS PASADENA MAN

Charles Meyers, 21 years of age, of 1121 Wesley avenue, Pasadena, jumped or fell yesterday from a fourth-floor window at the Glendale Sanatorium and was killed. His body was sent to the Jewel City undertaking rooms. No details were received in the report to the Coroner's office.

Why You Should Go to Church

By Rev. E. W. Kenyon — Evangelical Meetings, 118 East 10th Street

DR. E. W. KENYON, Evangelist

BECAUSE— All that is best in our Civilization is but a By-Product of Christianity.

Non-Christian Lands need no Patent of Copyright Laws until our Christianity is given them.

As the Visible Church has given us this priceless heritage we should honor it once a week by a PUBLIC ATTENDANCE.

God is the God of our Nation, as we honor Him He will honor us.

Giving Public Reverence to God is a fine habit for a fine people.

Pulpit Guest—DR. FREDERICK WARDE, Shakespearean Interpreter—Scripture Selections

Tenor Soloist Guest—PIETRO BONELLI, the Brilliant Italian Tenor.

My dear Friends:

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick of New York is considered by thousands the most influential preacher in America. I have known him for twenty years, heard him often, corresponded with him frequently and read him much.

For the next ten weeks I am going to follow his lead in my study and in my pulpit. His book, "Adventurous Religion," contains all the stimulation and helpfulness and wisdom which characterize Dr. Fosdick's sermons. While it is not controversial in tone or intention, there is no dodging of the issues of fundamentalism or the general religious situation in America at the moment. Few are more competent than Dr. Fosdick is to interpret this complex condition, and his words will be of the utmost significance to all who are interested in the factors of religion. I am going to enjoy giving these sermons and I invite you to enjoy them with me.

Faithfully yours, FRANK DYER.

WHY NOT NOW?

It's as sure as doom, fellows. Eventually it's bound to be a case of either back to the farm or back-to-the-wall.

STILL IN DARKNESS

If light is nearly twenty miles a second slower than had been supposed it may help to explain why a lot of Democrats haven't yet received it.

CALIFORNIA SECOND

New York leads the States with 1,815,765 motor vehicles. California is taking her smoke with 1,614,479. Ohio is third; Pennsylvania, fourth; Illinois, fifth.

FIVE IN ONE

Motor vehicles, according to a recent report, in use in the United States now exceed 22,000,000, or one for every five persons—or, better stated, five in one.

GROWLS IN VAIN

A lot of folks never worry about the wolf at the door because they're never at home, so long as the tires hold up and there's gas enough to run the car in which they own a one-fiftieth interest.

CODE OF MORALS

Some one has offered a prize for the best code of morals for co-eds. Officer Muldoon says that so far the traffic regulations are the only code they recognize and they bust that every day or two.

THIS FREEDOM

Some of us can't help envying other countries a little. In foreign lands the Diet only rules the people politically, while in this fair land of reducing faddists it governs so many of us domestically.

OFFICIAL WINTER

Winter began officially at 6:54 a.m. on the 22nd of December; for at that moment the sun stood over the Tropic of Capricorn pausing to turn back. The official variety is about the only winter known in California.

FOR THE LADIES

A new de luxe train from New York to Key West carries a special lounge car for the ladies which is equipped with a smoking room, shower baths and a soda fountain. Surely this should give the girls all the comforts of home.

LIQUID COAL

Can't understand why those eastern people are trying so hard to invent liquid coal. Doesn't it already melt and run away fast enough? As we recall the glorious winter seasons back East, what is really needed is a liquid clinker.

PIGEON-HOLE PLANE

A Baltimore genius has invented an airplane that will fold its wings when it alights and is able to enter an ordinary garage to roost. Now if they will invent one that can lay eggs and hatch out young ones the government will be happy.

CHANGE THE QUARREL

One of the Chinese generals has ordered 10,000 Bibles for distribution among his troops. If he could get a like consignment in the hands of the enemy the rivals might be able to throw away their swords and get together in a friendly wrangle over fundamentalism and modernism.

"OH, U.S.A."

A revue, "Oh, U.S.A.," showing the "bigotry, hypocrisy, record mania and capitalistic rapacity with which the United States is drenched," opened in Berlin recently. Germany is officially friendly to Uncle Sam and just why the musical show should be staged at this juncture is unaccountable.

CHINESE CHANCES

The Chinese are not a militant race. Neither do they indicate much aptitude in politics. They are designed to be peace-loving and hard-working citizens and could easily develop into one of the most prosperous nations in the world if they could but find the right leadership. There are so many millions of them that they might dominate the earth.

THE SLUGGISH LOVER

A Missouri woman is suing her sweetheart for breach of promise. She has been engaged to him for twenty-eight years, but the wedding day had never been set. Those who believe in long engagements will concede that twenty-eight years is a wider margin than safety would suggest. A sluggard who will keep a maiden away from the altar for twenty-eight years may well be haled into court.

TWO WEDDINGS FOR ONE

A Colorado justice of the peace is also a minister and when he marries couples he gives them a double-header. He first joins them with the simple civil form and follows this up with the accustomed ritual of his church. A marriage of that kind ought to take. The preacher-jurist rather thinks it does—in fact, none of his clients has yet turned up in the divorce courts. Two marriages for the price of one make quite a hit with those who are thriftily inclined.

CLEVELAND WAKES UP

Stirred by the example of Los Angeles and Detroit, with their comparative growth that makes Cleveland look as though it were standing still, citizens of the Ohio metropolis are demanding that the handicap which keeps the city from achieving its manifest destiny be removed.

Cleveland is known to the country as "a closed-shop town" and the shackles fastened by the labor unions on its industries form a handicap so galling that it is becoming intolerable.

Recently the Cleveland Plain Dealer published in a Sunday issue a forceful and courageous statement concerning what the closed-shop servitude was costing that city as a residential and industrial community. It has been copied by other Ohio publications and its effect has been to stir the citizens of Cleveland to organize and rid themselves of the closed-shop octopus.

The following extracts set forth clearly the nature of Cleveland's handicap:

> Cleveland has got to clean house! Cleveland is hugging to its bosom a fox that is literally gnawing its vitals. The fox doesn't care that it is endangering the health, possibly the life, of its victim. As long as it is well fed is all that concerns its vulpine highness.
>
> I refer to the closed-shop principle of organized labor, especially in connection with the building-trade industry. Cleveland now has the reputation, in many out-of-town localities of being a closed-shop town; it is startlingly true, and every citizen of Cleveland is paying tribute, directly or indirectly, to one of the most vicious principles of unionized labor.
> It is needless to expand on this subject. Everybody knows about it, and nobody seems to care, or at least no one seems to realise the deadly nature of this plague which has fastened its claws on our fair city. If it were only the tremendous additional cost which this system fastens on every new structure it might be borne, but this is nothing compared to the infinitely greater, and not to be calculated, cost arising from the compulsory restriction of effort, the dictation and classification of the time that should be expended on certain kinds of work, the demoralization of its members and of all with whom it comes in contact and which reaches out everywhere and indefinitely. The devilish ingenuity of the scheme lies in the fact that everyone who builds becomes a participator and abettor of the plan, and he pays dearly for the privilege. And the heart-breaking thing about it is that he must either conform or not build!

Needless to say that a great many people are not building. Oh, yes, you point to the tremendous building activity that has been going on in Cleveland during the past ten years. One billion dollars expended! Yes, and you have paid a quarter of that billion, over and above a proper and reasonable cost, as a penalty for supporting the closed-shop plan. And by supporting it you have probably held back $1,000,000,000 more during the same decade.

This protest against existing conditions was written by P. A. Connolly, an able and active member of the industrial community. He warns that "There has been a lot of loose talk to the effect that Cleveland is slipping industrially. The talk may be loose, but the facts are stubborn. If Cleveland has not slipped she has not grown as she should, as her many advantages warrant her in growing. This city ought to be the Mecca for out-of-town manufacturers. It has everything to attract them, but they are not attracted."

Then he points to the defect, the surrender of the municipality to the arrogant labor unions. And what he says of Cleveland is equally applicable to scores of other American municipalities. Where freedom is possible no one cares to live in perpetual servitude. When manufacturers in the Middle West have to make a choice between Detroit and Cleveland the most of them choose Detroit, because they can operate in that city more efficiently and economically under open-shop conditions, under the American plan, than in a city where they are perpetually hampered, harassed and often plundered by the despots of the labor unions.

Los Angeles and Detroit are growing faster than any other cities of like population; and their growth is substantial. Their example proves that the open shop is a great impetus to industrial activity, that independent workmen produce more per man employed than those who work under closed-shop restrictions, where industry on the part of the individual is penalized. The upward trend of industry in both these cities can be traced directly to the open shop. Cleveland will continue to slip so long as it lacks the courage to break the shackles by which it is now galled and hampered and joins the constantly increasing ranks of the open-shop industrial communities.

LONG-WINDS

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, recently "achieved a sentence" lasting six pages of printed matter. It had 1743 words, 125 commas and 32 semicolons. It inspired a paragrapher in the New York Times to ask, "Ain't education wonderful?"

A sentence of such dimensions, like a suspension bridge, must have some thought of importance to convey across a broad chasm to demand a span like that. It is in peril of collapsing of its own weight before it delivers the thought.

Railroads have discarded the paths the deer laid out and are making vast outlays to straighten pieces of track with many curves surveyed by the original builders. The short cut is modern in mechanics and in thought.

Bulk no longer impresses either in sentence or commerce. The man who cannot yield up his idea in short sentences is a back number and the train of circumstances is liable to go off and leave him.

Without criticism of Dr. Butler, for his achievement may have its justification; yet in general it may be said that the age of long-winds is past. Sonorous Websterian periods would lose a case any day at the bar. The Senator who would rant through such a flight might lack leave even to print.

Long speeches and lengthy sermons are taboo. Padding is no longer acceptable—folks want the point. An ordinary audience would run ahead and get the thought and go to sleep for the orator to catch up.

Mastodons and ornithosaurians are extinct save in museums. Swifter and more agile life has put the bulky hulks of things out of commission. There is even doubt whether the big, unwieldy dreadnaughts are longer serviceable against the wasps of the sea and the hornets of the air.

Even the little word "the" is under the ban. Somebody has calculated that it occupies about one-twelfth of the space on a printed page. In twelve pages one of them is made up entirely of "the's." So it is being cut out to save paper. Pulp comes too high.

When a sentence, irrespective of the thought it conveys, becomes news it is too long. It is a freak. Life is too short.

Even long words are becoming pedantic. Business is too brisk. The world expects a man to say it so it can be understood and make it snappy. Doctors and scientists are beginning to talk in language that can be understood.

Lincoln and Bunyan spoke in one syllabled words. When Stanton would criticise Lincoln's speech the great President would say, "The people can understand." That sometimes is the object of speech.

The lighter, airier, brainier football squad goes off with the glory over huge beef and power. Physical force may gain more yardage by plunging the line; but the lighter team with brains makes the touchdowns. And touchdowns often count in life.

If that literary achievement had not been made by a great university president it likely would be a life sentence.

AXLE-GREASE

The question of the nude has protruded into athletics and this department of modern education is likely to settle matters with a bang. Shall the Catalina Derby be done in a garb of grease?

Long Beach, which appears to be accustomed to clothes, arrested those who were hardening their primeval personalities to the waves and weather. While given considerably to oil, that town does not seem to esteem it highly as clothing.

Is the nude in athletics silently but inexorably ushering in a new age? Wherefore and also why should it be ethically all right to be naked in art, but athletically all wrong to swim in a tawny suit of axle grease?

Why should highbrows fold their hands in ecstasy in the presence of the one and hold their hands over their eyes and look through their fingers at the horrors of the other? Besides there is utility in grease—it lubricates the body's bearings in the water.

Are we hesitant upon the brink of the nude? Will the gridiron shuffle off silk pants in the near future even as it has substituted these for quilted bags because they impede touchdowns?

Track teams long ago reduced the question of clothes to imaginative bvd's. A sprinter picking his almost-nude way through the foliage on a cross-country run no longer excites suspicion, even among elderly spinsters. Women long ago disposed of many garments as unnecessary, and what are remnant are shrinking rapidly laterally as well as perpendicularly. Clothes are swiftly becoming futuristic in high gear.

We are unquestionably reverting to nature. Possibly exposure to weather may superinduce fur again and garments may become superfluous. It may be that we lost our original fur or feathers because Deity did not care to waste material upon beings who considered their own designs so vastly superior.

Is modesty largely in the mind, after all? Since the statuary which we dote so much on from the classic period is nude, should an ocean classic be materially different? Can it be that the Creator's ideas of beauty and utility are about as modest as our own, after all?

WHEAT TO BISCUIT

Wheat in the field was harvested, threshed, ground into flour and baked into biscuit all within the span of five hours in the course of a record test made in Ohio. Thus showing that, after all, a farmer is a mighty independent guy when it comes to measuring life by the daily bread.

Preparedness

[Protected by George Matthew Adams]

CANADA STOPS A LEAK

Coast Guard vessels report that not a single rum-runner is in evidence along our whole Pacific Coast, from the Canadian border to the Mexican line. This happy condition, officials assert, is the result of cooperation of the Canadian government in determining the destination of liquor-laden vessels outbound from British Columbia ports.

Thus vanishes, though mayhap only temporarily, a disreputable feature of American-Canadian coastwise trade. For years a fleet of furtive craft with great speed and negligible scruples has plied from Victoria and Vancouver and neighboring harbors with profit to itself and damage to international relations.

Our Coast Guard cannot relax its vigilance. But its labors will be less, now that the Dominion's eye is on the clearance papers of the ships that fare southward from the Straits of Juan de Fuca.

COUNTING THE FLIES

In its campaign against flies the Japanese government has been paying a bounty upon the scalps of the naughty pests. As a result the municipal clerks have had to count the carcasses of nearly 23,000,000 flies that were brought in by the swatters. That is an attention to detail that would likely be dodged by an American politician. He would want to tally them a wagonload at a time. The only flies he would count would be at the ball park.

TOO NERVOUS TO WORK

Count Salm von Hoogstraeten is nervous and has a great distaste for work. At least that is what the wife says in her letters. So far as known he never did a day's work and he never knew he was expected to. That's what befalls a guy for being nervous. It is feared that there are other men in the world whose nervousness impairs their capacity for work. Nervous folk will have a fine alibi to offer for their laziness.

OVERDOING IT

By James J. Montague

I'm in favor of moderate quiet,
I lose my habitual poise
In the wild metropolitan riot
With its ear-splitting salvos of noise.
And yet, when the darkness surrounds me
And the silence descends like a pall;
It worries and frets and confounds me
Because I hear nothing at all.

Dispatches have lately made mention
Of the plans of some well-meaning chap,
To develop a clever invention
Which shall wipe every noise off the map.
He will still all mechanical clamor,
You will hear not a clang or a jar,
If you wallop a nail with a hammer
Or start up a refractory car.

The baby will beg of you mutely
For his nocturnal lacteal cheer,
But his voice will be stilled absolutely
And never a wail will you hear.
The children may romp in the attic
And no one will know they are there,
And even the howls of the static
Will vanish away in the air.

But silence, instead of caressing
My sensitive soul with its balm,
I fear would prove wildly distressing
And rob me of rest-giving calm.
The stillness midst which I was sitting
Would go through my heart like a dirk,
And, therefore, I don't mind admitting
That I hope his invention don't work!

THE DREAMER

By The Foothill Philosopher

I dreamed I was a great creator. For my joy I made two men, each of whom I endowed with power to act and reason, to will, to, feel, to believe and doubt. I knew them both for creatures of my dream and told them that their life was all from me.

Puffed up with vanity, one of the men replied: "Since I came from you and partake of your consciousness and power I must I something of myself and I hereby declare my independence of you."

The other man said: "Master, I see that I am nothing of myself and I hereby gladly dedicate my life and love to you, in whom I live."

Then, to amuse myself, I began to drop golden coins about the feet of my two creations. The rebel of my dream began to greedily gather them up, piling them about him in great shining heaps, not realizing that they were dream-coins, gathered by a dream-man. He seemed never to be satisfied, but continued to heap up the money until the stacks grew so high that they fell upon him and buried him in a glittering grave.

The other man let the shining pieces fall through his fingers, admiring their luster while knowing still their unreality. While playing with the coins he thought only of me who had given him life and the power to appreciate the glory of the dream. And when he grew weary of playing he crept into my heart and rested there, knowing himself for the creature of my dream, yet at the same time realizing himself to be one with the dreamer.

"But where is the other man?" he asked.

"He is still in my heart," I answered, "and as much beloved as ever. The only difference between you and your companion is that you are aware of my life in you and your life in me, while he renounced his heritage for a shadow."

Then I awoke and said to myself: "Perhaps I, too, am the creature of a dream—but, if I am, there must be a Dreamer in whose heart I shall one day find rest."

WHEN WILLIAM PENN DINED

Were William Penn to come back to his province for the Sesquicentennial, few changes would impress him more than the complete alteration that has taken place in the hours for meals, and what is consumed at them.

My lord proprietor ate his heavy meal at noon, and a heavy meal it was. Little or nothing was eaten before that sacred hour, although in those good old days many began the day with a drink of some very strong beverage. You would never guess the other "breakfast food." Radishes. "They procured appetite and helped digestion."

By noon the table was set with knife and spoon; forks were very rarely used then. Meats of all kinds comprised most of the food. There seem to have been very few vegetables, and we must remember there were no cold storage facilities of any kind.

Why Penn's father did not die of apoplexy or liver trouble has puzzled many historians. On January 6, 1682, he gave a dinner, at which, in addition to a "chine of beef and other good cheer," they had "eighteen mince pies in a dish."—[Corn Exchange.

When Car Lines Make Money

Street-car systems have to earn their dividends between 7 and 8:30 a.m. and between 5 and 6:15 p.m. During all the other hours of the day they operate at a loss, on the average, according to a recent survey.

An Inspired thought

MONTROSE, Jan. 4.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Mrs. Coolidge has had an inspired thought for expressing by beautiful symbolism the passing of the old and the birth of the New Year. Much has been said and something accomplished toward a sane Fourth of July, but our present first lady has been the first to imagine a sane and beautiful New Year.

Let us make her thought fruitful and next year, from all our hilltops, where, on Easter morning, a cross was planted, from Mt. Rubidoux to the sea, let a trumpeter sound the taps and the reveille and impressive music be played. California should lead the way. Shall we continue to make New Year's eve hideous or shall we make it a time of beauty?

To Create Business

PASADENA, Dec. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I have read with great interest your editorial in this morning's Times in regard to the "assessment sharks." It is also amusing to note your suggestion that an investigation by the Bar Association might have a wholesome effect. Why don't you slam the blame right where it belongs? The only thing that is wrong with the law is the fact that it aims to create business for and excessive fees for the legal fraternity. It was written into the law for that purpose and by the deliberate connivance and engineering of the legal profession. No one else is benefited. The law could have been framed so as to have made it certain that the investor in street bonds should be safeguarded—which is right and proper—without bringing the graft of the lawyer into it at all. Why was it done? The lawyers, of course, had the law so drawn; it benefits no one else. Your reference to the ethics of the legal profession, I take it, is intended to be humorous. Over $600,000 was allowed the lawyers as fees in the matter of the receivership proceedings in the case of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad. This amount was approved by the court and taken out of the funds belonging to the investors, including hundreds of widows and estates. In the matter of the receivership of Wilson & Co., the sum of $300,000 was allowed the attorneys and approved by the court. It has reached such a point that even a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, J. B. Eastman, protested against the extortionate claims put in by the lawyers and allowed by the courts in all cases of this kind and suggested organized reform. The same thing is involved in the matter of the assessment foreclosures. It is the lawyer's graft, approved by the courts, that works the injustice.

CASEY.

Putting On and Taking Off

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In your issue of today C.F.S. says, "It is no worse for the human form to be exposed in the nude in a swimming match than it is for the human form to be exposed in the nude in our art galleries in the guise of art." That is absolutely true, but neither is right nor necessary. Those girls who wish to take off their clothes would also be pleased to remove the grease. What is it in the human breast that prompts our girls to court danger? Why do they wish to see how long they can play with fire without getting burned? Why do they want to see how near they can go to the edge of the precipice without falling over? Why do they desire to skate where the ice is thinnest? They act like moths around a candle.

No entirely modest, pure woman would go to the beach and pull off her clothes and parade along the shores, before hundreds of men and boys, clad only in a scant bathing suit, and she has no moral right to do so.

Genuine modesty, virtue and character are permanent inherent qualities that are not taken off and put on as we do our clothes.

HORSE AT LAKE'S BOTTOM

Some inhabitants of the Guatemalan town of Flores—the modern town on the site of ancient Haltunna—say that the image of a great stone horse may be seen at certain times in the waters of Lake Peten-Itza, near the uninhabited island of Santa Barbara, where it sank when the raft transporting it was wrecked according to the legends of the country. When Hernando Cortez visited Haltunna on the way to Honduras he left behind a lame white horse.

The Indians, so the story runs, having never before seen a horse and, understanding only that it was sick, fed it as they would have fed a human invalid of more than ordinary importance. The poor brue died.

Upon its death the poor Itzae, who had worshipped it as something rather more than mortal, were fearful of Cortez's wrath. So they thought to befool the conquistador. They carved from white stone a replica and set it up in their chief temple against Cortez's return.

In some manner the image found its way to the bottom of the sea, where it is now said to repose.

ENGLISH AS IT IS SPOKEN

A young woman went into the jewelry department of a large store and asked to see some strands of pearls. A French clerk showed the customer the merchandise; and as the clerk was clasping a strand about the woman's neck she pinched her skin with the clasp.

ACHES OF AGE

Gaffer Peters, in his sweater, beneath his pepper tree: "Oh, day I'm feeling better," Gaffer Peters, "glory be! I am old and expected that I'll suffer less more, so I'm not surprised, deed, when my frame is sore. Oft I hear old men complaining of a dozen aches combined for the hottest language straining that their ills may be defined. And they think it most outrageous that their legs are full of woe, that they've maladies contagious that they're taking pills in row. 'I am getting just what's coming,' are the thoughtful words of men when some piebald aches are humming up and down my spine. If a person makes a fuss or, scorning counsel and advice, keep living on forever, he is bound to pay the price. My condition is merely normal at my age of sixty-two, and I make no pretense of dismal, I am getting just what's due. When my limbs are readily toiling and affliction gives a yowl, I don't hear me vainly wailing lamentations smoking hot. Because I am feeling gaudy, as you find me here today, with no squeams in my body, I have happy things in store. Now and then a day is gloomy when an old man's free from pain, and sad memories are gloomy and the transient pep he knows, but the time to do his sighing is the time to do his rejoicing, that merry day like this, kindling not for pain of bliss. Let him then be up and owning all the walling that he sends; for a gray old man who groaning is a trial to his friends.

JURY CHARGED BY JUDGE

Convicted in Liquor Trial Face New Hearings on Asserted Flagrant Offenses

Stating that more flagrant offenses of willful perjury never have come to his notice and that he will endeavor to see that prosecution against such offenders is pushed to the utmost, Municipal Judge Stafford yesterday sent cases to perjury complaints against five defendants shortly after they had been found guilty of liquor charges by a jury in his court.

The jury returned the verdict against the man after deliberating only three minutes. Judge announced his decision to try perjury charges against them and ordered them taken into custody. The court then ordered a $5000 bail raised from $2500.

The perjury complaints were based on testimony of the five men who had pleaded on charges of possession. Under cross-examination by Deputy City Prosecutor Eberhardt, one of the five men under oath said he did not have in his possession, nor did he see, any liquor when they were arrested on the night of December 10, last, at the We Should Worry Cafe, at 714 North Van Ness avenue.

Sergts. Sweetnam and McMullen and Officer Buggy testified they found glasses of beer in front of each of the men at a table in the cafe. They said the liquor was poured into one bottle and analysis by the City Chemist had proved it to be beer of high alcoholic content.

Further testimony of the officers revealed they had found 800 quarts of beer and a large quantity of alcohol, whisky and gin in a plant at the rear of the cafe. William Duffy, proprietor of the cafe, Mrs. Nell Duffy, his wife, and Carl Weingard, a waiter, were arrested at the time and their trials on possession charges will come before Judge Stafford on the 21st inst.

THREE-DAY ARGUMENT RECORD

Attorney Wipes Brow After Concluding Opening in New Phase of Long Litigation Over Note and Setting Mark for Superior Court

The longest opening argument on record in the Superior Court was made yesterday when Attorney Frank C. Goodspeed, in Judge Wood's court, wiped his brow and sat down after having addressed the court for three days.

The case before Judge Wood is that of the National Bank of San Pedro against Stansbury. It has been in the courts in one way or another since 1917, and has been tried by a jury, two judges, a referee, in the Appellate Court and in the Superior Court during several years.

The suit is that of Bank Charles Stansbury on a $6000 note at 120 per cent of John Balch, his partner in the sheet-contracting business. The note was assigned to the bank, which brought suit after it had gone to protest.

Stansbury filed a cross-complaint asking for an accounting and a dissolution of the partnership. The case went to judgment once, was reversed on appeal and sent back to Judge Wood. A jury was impaneled, but as intricate matters of accounting were involved, Judge Wood held it was no case for a jury, discharged the venire and sent the accounting down to a referee. His act in discharging the jury was upheld in the upper courts, and the referee made a report.

The matter now before the court is a lengthy objection by Attorney Goodspeed, representing the bank, to the findings of the referee. It is still on trial.

"Miss California's" Mother Pledges Effort to Cancel Unexpected Marriage

Legal proceedings to annul the recently announced marriage of Aloha Porter, better known as "Miss Venice," and "Miss California" in various beauty contests, to Leonard Leroy Thomas, a dancer, will be instituted within the next few days, it was learned last night from Mrs. Eugene Borgeson, Miss Porter's mother.

The annulment will be asked on the ground that Aloha was but 17 years of age when the ceremony was performed last Friday, and that she was married without the consent of her parent, Mrs. Borgeson declared. The action will be filed by Attorney Charles E. Wyman.

"Miss California" proved a so-called kissless bride, according to her mother's version of her short-lived matrimonial venture. The version was concurred in by Aloha, who still is a resident at her mother's home on South Bonnie Brae street.

"I thought they were going out to see about some dancing contract," said the mother, "and the next thing I knew Aloha called me up and told me she was married."

"I knew I didn't want to be married just one minute after it was all over," admitted Aloha.

Young Thomas's first meeting with his mother-in-law was his last, according to the latter. It developed that Mrs. Borgeson hurried to her daughter's side, so to speak, grasped the latter and hurried her home, where she has remained ever since. Telephone calls from her husband have been answered by the mother, it is understood.

"Aloha is my only child," explained Mrs. Borgeson. "I have spent my life training her. She has been given the best dancing teachers and dramatic training. I wanted her to have a career. At least, I wanted her to be 21 before she married. But the adulation, admiration and excitement of being "Miss California" seems to have swept her from her feet. It's just a little too much for so young a girl. Ordinarily, Aloha has been a very good girl."

FOREIGN PRODUCTION WILL OPEN

"Faust" Given Premiere at Figueroa Theater Today

"Faust," Murnau's production of Goethe's poem, opens at the Figueroa Theater today, and judging from the tremendous amount of interest already displayed in this fascinating engagement the management predicts it is going to be one of the most successful in the history of the theater.

F. W. MURNAU

New York critics have pronounced it one of the most extraordinary pictures yet produced from both a directorial and photographic standpoint, and the cinematographers, directors, actors and other prominent film people and their organizations are planning special nights to attend the picture.

Emil Jannings is the star, and he is said to have never given a more forceful, scintillating portrayal than that of Mephisto in this story.

The picture opens today at 2 o'clock and there will be four shows daily with Santaella's orchestra of twenty musicians on the stage both afternoon and evening.

Coolidge Sets Precedent When He Views Film

With the United States Marine Corps band playing a special score and a detachment of the soldiers of the sea lending a touch of military color to the occasion, President Coolidge set a precedent last week by attending, with Mrs. Coolidge, a special showing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Tell It to the Marines," in the auditorium of the Interior Department Building at Washington.

It was the first time that a President has ever officially gone outside the White House to see a motion picture, though he has in the past witnessed the screening of films in his private coach while traveling.

"Tell It to the Marines," which was produced by M.-G.-M. in co-operation with the United States Marine Corps and now in its third week at the Embassy Theater in New York, was shown before one of the most distinguished gatherings of American public officials ever to see a photoplay.

In addition to the White House party, which was made up of the President and his wife, Everett Saunders, secretary to the President, and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Stearns, there were present six members of the administration Cabinet, including Secretaries Hoover, Wilbur, Jardine, James and Dwight F. Davis, with their wives, and dozens of outstanding figures in military and Congressional affairs.

"CASTLES IN THE AIR" CLOSES RUN AT MASON

"Castles in the Air," Edward D. Smith's production, closes a long run at the Mason Theater tonight. The show ran more than a year in Chicago before going to New York, where it ranks among the most popular musical comedies, and Los Angeles was the city in the United States to see it. The popularity of "Castles" is said to be predicated upon a varied appeal, for it has in happy proportions the right mixture of comedy, drama, music, and dancing.

ESTELLE TAYLOR WITH LASKY

To Be Featured in Mildred Davis's Coming-Out Film; May Robson Signs New Contract With De Mille; Warners Hand May McAvoy Clever Story

BY GRACE KINGSLEY

New evidence that Paramount will give "Too Many Crooks," the picture that will bring Mildred Davis back to the screen, the greatest all-star cast ever assembled for a farce comedy was offered yesterday when Estelle Taylor, as foreshadowed in this column early this week, was signed for the role of Boston Fanny, according to announcement by B. P. Schulberg, West Coast executive of the company.

ESTELLE TAYLOR

In the role of Boston Fanny, Miss Taylor will play the part of a famous confidence woman who tangles matters up in a hilarious manner with her taking ways.

Estelle Taylor's name marks the eighth member of the cast to be named to date. Aside from Miss Davis and Miss Taylor those so far selected are Lloyd Hughes, George Bancroft, George Seigman, Gayne Whitman, John St. Polis and Tom Ricketts, every one of whom has a distinctive reputation for outstanding screen portrayals.

The story of "Too Many Crooks" is from the popular novel by E. J. Rath. Fred Newmeyer, who made eight of Harold Lloyd's greatest successes, will direct. Rex Taylor is preparing the screen adaptation. Production is scheduled to begin next Monday.

Ever since her triumph in "Don Juan," with John Barrymore, Miss Taylor's services have been greatly in demand. United Artists, to whom she is under contract, are looking for an adequate starring vehicle for her.

May McAvoy's First Warner

That petite May McAvoy will be presented in only the best material under her new long-term Warner Brothers contract was manifest yesterday when it was announced that her first vehicle would be "Matinee Ladies." The story is an original by Raymond L. Schrock, and offers Miss McAvoy a world of opportunity to display her subtle comedy talents. The adaptation is by Edward Clark and Harry Dittman.

MAY McAVOY

Already a splendid cast has been assembled with Miss McAvoy in the lead. It includes Malcolm MacGregor in the leading male role, Hedda Hopper and Charles Lane. Byron Haskins, who was recently elevated to directorial rank because of his previous meritorious work in the photographic field, will handle the reins on "Matinee Ladies." Production is scheduled to commence today.

Two Beauties for Universal

Instead of "Beware of Widows," in which Laura La Plante is being starred by Universal, the title really should be "Beware of Laura's Cast." For not only is Miss La Plante, as you all know, an exceedingly alluring young lady, over whose celluloid double any man might be proud to break his heart, but the two feminine players signed in her support yesterday are two regular pulse-teasers.

KATHRYN CARVER

They are Paulette Duval and Kathryn Carver, one a brunette beauty, the other a blond, so that you pays your money and takes your choice. Miss Duval has appeared in a number of films of late with great success. Miss Carver is really none other than Kathryn Hill, formerly known as the Harrison Fisher girl, and who has changed her name just for luck. She has heretofore played only small parts, but has shown herself as possessed of great talent as well as much beauty. This will be her first big role.

The story is by Owen Davis, and Wesley Ruggles will direct. Production begins the first of next week.

Ben Lyon Soon

BEN LYON

The actor, who recently completed work in the Robert Kane picture, "The Duke of Ladies," with Mary Brian, will arrive just in time to step into one of the principal featured roles of "The Tender Hour," which George Fitzmaurice is now preparing to film as his first picture under his new First National contract.

Billie Dove, who has just completed an important featured role in "An Affair of the Follies," with Lewis Stone and Lloyd Hughes, will be featured with Lyon in the picture. Alec B. Francis has the third featured role.

Lyon has been playing in First National productions in New York during the past year or so, so he has never had a peep at the new First National studio in Burbank, and they are fixing up a nice dressing-room for him.

Emil Chautard In It

I'll just wager that Emil Chautard has never been sorry that he quit directing for the acting end of the picture game. He has drawn many nice roles, and now he has signed for the very nicest of all.

The role of the wise priest, Pierre Chevillon, in "Seventh Heaven," has fallen to Chautard, the role being given him by Fox and Frank Borzage after many tests had been taken of other players. The role is a most important one to the story.

May Will Stay In

That bouncing and blooming comedienne, May Robson, is going to stick along in the films, much to the joy of all good fans.

Yesterday Miss Robson signed a new contract with Cecil B. De Mille, under the terms of which she will continue to make pictures for him during the coming year.

Miss Robson, known to all lovers of stage comedy through "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," "Ma Pettingill," and others, has been playing in pictures ever since last summer with the De Mille organization. Her first effort, "Pals in Paradise," will open at the Hillstreet tomorrow. Another is "Rubber Tires," which will be shown later. De Mille also gave her an excellent part in his "King of Kings."

Ronald Colman Home

Ronald Colman arrived home from Honolulu yesterday. The Goldwyn star has been fittingly vacationing in that charming locale since completion of "The Night of Love."

The star will at once prepare to start work on Henry King's production of Rudolph Lothar's stage play, "King Harlequin," which Samuel Goldwyn will produce.

"SNATCHERS" CLOSES TONIGHT

"Cradle Snatchers" will have its final performance tonight at the Playhouse. After a lengthy engagement of almost five months, the departure of this comedy farce with Helen Bolton in the leading role will interest many who are looking forward to Louis O. Macloon's new show, "Loose Ankles," the New York comedy, which opens Monday night.

Gather the fallen leaves and pile them high on the dying flower garden. It will mean earlier spring flowers.

THEATRICAL

THAT DESERT AGAIN

HOT SAND, HOT LOVE, FIGURE IN "WHITE BLACK SHEEP"

By Herbert Moulton

If anyone is inclined to doubt this fact, a visit to Loew's State will prove convincing.

For there we find Richard Barthelmess melo-ing his way through a melodramatic affair called "The White Black Sheep," which has more thrills per reel than any feature this theater has shown in many months.

And there are just gobs and gobs of Arabs and guns and horses, and more hairbreadth escapes for Barthelmess than Hairbreath Harry ever dreamed of.

"The White Black Sheep" is the kind of picture that will be thrillingly entertaining if you leave your critical equipment at home. For an hour of 212-degree adventures it is well-nigh perfect.

On the other hand, if you happen to come out of your absorption and turn analytical, your entire evening is apt to be a mess. I strongly advise against anything of this sort.

Barthelmess, as the somewhat hot-headed youth who gets into a scrape in England and seeks life anew on the great Arabian desert, is pleasing from the matinee viewpoint.

His escapades in the native village, his torture at the hands of the native villain, and his final dash to the garrison to warn the troops just in the nick of time, will thrill old and young alike—providing the elders have retained that charming perspective of youth.

Miss Miller does fairly well as the heroine, who does more to get her man than any cinematic Royal Northwest Mounted Policeman ever had the nerve to do.

I'm afraid, however, that she's a bit too intense most of the time. She looks as if she'd like to gobble Barthelmess up, which is inconsistent because she appears very well nourished.

Prisco gives a splendid portrayal, but Corrado would appear to better advantage if his work had been toned down a bit.

Others appearing are Erville Alderson, who is excellent in a character role; William H. Tooker, as the Colonel; Sam Appel, Templar Saxe, and Col. G. L. McDonell, who also plays a colonel.

Fanchon and Marco have a "Wanderer Idea" on this bill.

ENGLISH CONCERN MAY BUY FAMOUS

[Copyright, 1927, by New York Herald-Tribune.]

LONDON, Jan. 7.—A report as yet unconfirmed is being circulated in London to the effect that the Provincial Cinematograph Theaters, Ltd., which has been expanding its business recently is now figuring as a potential purchaser of the Famous Players Corporation of America in order to obtain a footing in the American market.

It is also stated that certain big continental film producers, notably UFA., the German organization, have stipulated that the future output from them to the United Kingdom can be handled only on a reciprocity basis. This will be done, it is said, in order to enable the continental markets to be partly stocked with English films in place of the American product, with which they claim recently to have been swamped.

BREAKS LONG JINX

Michael Kallesser's sex comedy, "One Man's Woman," featuring Harland Tucker and Mabel Forrest at the Orange Grove, will enter its third week tomorrow night at the cozy little Grand-avenue playhouse. This production, which opened on Christmas night, is said to be one of the most popular plays ever produced there and has broken the jinx which seems to have hovered over the Orange Grove for the past year.

WARNERS "IMPROVE" ON ROCHE

BY KATHERINE LIPKE

It is to be hoped that Arthur Somers Roche never sees the film version of his thrilling crook story, "Wolf's Clothing," now showing at the Uptown Theater. The shock would certainly unnerve him.

Warner Brothers have taken the title and the name of the hero and, around these two skeleton facts, have built an entirely new theme. The result is a wild and hilarious series of incidents which do not justify the changing of Mr. Roche's hero from a reformed crook to a subway conductor. This is but one of the minor crimes committed against the original, "Wolf's Clothing."

The story is in Warner Brothers deals with a hard-working employee of the New York subway system who gets New Year's off and starts out to see the city night life. He is run over, spirited away by an escaped lunatic who changes clothing with him and sends him into the center of the city to enjoy himself.

He meets a girl who amazingly is wandering around a cafe on New Year's Eve alone and they form a team, a hidden hand from a window drugs their wine and then the fun commences. Lack of space prevents my further enumerating the incidents of this wild plot, but at the end our hero awakes from a feverish and delirous dream to find that the night's happenings were all in his aching head.

Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller, like the good sports they are, step into the leading roles and somehow make the whole picture seem interesting and humorous. Patsy is wearing a most becoming blond wig which gives her an entirely new appearance. Once in a while she looks as if she wasn't sure what it was all about, but for the most part she is charming and engaging as the society girl out for a lark.

Monte Blue is splendid as the subway employee who gets knocked into New Year's society and seems at all times to be enjoying himself. Some of his scenes are taken in miniature, apparently illustrating how small and ineffectual he feels, and these are very well done.

John Miljan as the escaped lunatic is clever and humorous. His facial expressions are very funny at times as he looks at everyone with wide staring eyes and a silly grin.

That facile wearer of the monocle, Douglas Gerrard, is a society detective. I was rather uncertain just what his use was in the story, but as a collector of laughs he was most necessary. Mr. Gerrard is a new and interesting type of comedian and he seems to be very popular.

Roy del Ruth directed "Wolf's Clothing."

The stage presentation this week at the Uptown is great. Abe Lyman and his orchestra have several interesting numbers and with them are Al and Rae Samuels, the boy dancers who give a Chinese syncopated dance which is splendid. That little colored boy Angelus Babe is on hand for the Charleston and the Black Bottom and he is a great favorite. Helene Grant sings "Little Red Riding Hood." Miss Grant is most attractive and possesses a charming personality. However, she apparently tries too hard to put herself over.

There are two dancing girls whose names I believe are the King Sisters. Their act is picturesque and attractive. There is also another Collegians Comedy.

WANDA HAWLEY IS ON ORPHEUM BILL

The screen will contribute its bit to the new bill coming to the Orpheum tomorrow matinee, by releasing Wanda Hawley, long a star of the films, for her first stage appearance in Los Angeles.

Miss Hawley will appear in a comedy sketch "Squaring The Circle," by Al Boasburg. She will be supported by J. Stewart Wilkenson and Oscar Briggs.

Another offering on the new bill will be 'Jerry and Her Baby Grands" the 1927 edition of this piano quartet. They will appear in a stage offering with the assistance of a large company. Other interesting spots on the bill will be filled by the Hamilton Sisters and Jessie Fordyce in "Playtime," Pisano, the marksman showman; Harry Lang and Bernice Haley in "Who is Your Boss?" and Sybil Vane, the prima donna petite.

WELL WORN PLOT

Elinor Glyn Film at Criterion Not Too Original

The plot deals with the rather well-worn situation of British class distinction coupled with a loveless marriage.

The whole matrimonial, and financial tangle in which the cast of "Love's Blindness" finds itself is brought about by one of those ever-present promises to the "dear departed," concerning daughter's future husband.

To fulfill the vow, father concocts a scheme whereby a very eligible and desirable nobleman finds himself in serious financial dismculties, necessitating the monetary aid of "father" who asks in return the privilege of calling him "son-in-law."

After everything is arranged daughter is advised of her approaching marriage, but is discreetly told that the young nobleman is violently in love with her.

Appearing in the role of the young nobleman is Antonio Moreno. Moreno does as much as is possible with the part. At times he manages to make the typically "story-book" hero realistic and convincing.

Grace and charm characterize the role of the girl, that excellently portrayed by Pauline Starke, while the jealous "countess," with designs on the hero and his home, was adeptly performed by Lilyan Tashman. The feline characteristics employed by Miss Tashman in her role made the part an outstanding one.

COMPLETES ROLE

Einar Hanson, who was recently signed to a long-term contract by the Paramount Company has finished his work in Frank Lloyd's "Children of Divorce." He will start work within a week on a new Paramount production.

MAKING FINAL SCENES

WESTERN RUNS TRUE TO TYPE

Zane Grey Film at Metropolitan is Another Romance of Open Spaces

BY MARQUIS BUSBY

Zane Grey's stories must be easy to write. After the first the rest should come easy. The titles change, the names of the characters, the locale, perhaps, but the plots never vary.

All of which is to let you know that "The Man of the Forest" at the Metropolitan this week is just another Zane Grey story.

Take one noble hero, misunderstood throughout the better portion of the action, a lovely heroine, stir in a particularly despicable villain, and you have the recipe for "The Man of the Forest," as well as the many stories of the kind preceding this particular opus.

However, if there must be men of the great open spaces, strong, silent, virile gents, it is perfectly satisfactory to have them portrayed by Jack Holt. At least his acting is painless, and he isn't entirely lost when out of the saddle.

Georgia Hale is a business-like heroine. She shoots Holt without batting an eyelash, but the poor girl didn't know then that he would later turn out to be the hero. Warner Oland, one of the screen's most despicable villains, is excellent as the scheming Clint Beasley, and George Fawcett appears to advantage in the brief role of the heroine's father.

But El Brendel and Mike, the pet mountain lion, are really the high points of the picture. No one can take a scene from Brendel, and as a Swede ranch hand he provides genuine comedy relief. Mike isn't that kind of a lion, but she is a good comedienne. Rinty and Strongheart had better look to their acting laurels.

Direction and camera work are faultless, and the exteriors quite magnificent. There is none of the shoddiness of production often discernible in western productions.

John Waters directed.

"Spicy Surprises," the Jack Partington presentation this week, is not particularly spicy, nor surprising, but it is colorful and entertaining. Herbert Hoey and Doris Walker are an attractive singing and dancing pair. The Walker part of the duo is most delectable and scores with her Black Bottom done after the fashion of the tap dancer.

Princess Pat, none other than Mike, the lioness in the picture, has an act of her own, too. Pat displays considerable affection for her trainer, and he says that she was raised on a bottle.

She seemed to relish beefsteak yesterday, so it's hard to say whether the announcement about the bottle is a recommendation or not.

Albert Hay Malotte, offering selections from "Aida" on the organ, and other program novelties were included.

RUSSIAN BALLET IS GAYLY ACCOUTERED

Mordkin and Company Surrounded by Modern Art in Scenery and Costumes

BY ISABEL MORSE JONES

Mikhail Mordkin and his Russian ballet gave two programs at the Philharmonic yesterday and will finish the week and two more colorful presentations this afternoon and evening. Although this has been a season of ballet, Los Angeles is showing itself as not too satiated to attend the Russian performances, especially those of such a favorite as Mordkin.

In the principal ballet of the afternoon the honors went to Boris Anisfeld, whose designs of the scenery and costumes were marvelous riots of color miraculously blended and synthesized with the choreography arranged by Mordkin. It was a joyous Arabian nights' affair with Mordkin dancing the part of the sheik and Vera Nemtchinova, Hilda Butsova, Pierre Valdimiroff and Nicolai Zeroff sharing in its success.

Mordkin is magnificent as part of the picture. Vera Nemtchinova is the personification of grace and charm, and easily takes the highest place in the company for technical and interpretative perfection. Hilda Butsova is a skilled dancer, she will always be that, but she does not seem to have retained the fascination she once held for her audiences.

In the divertissements the individual talents of this excellent company had full sway and the play of fanciful costumes upon a quiet gray background gave opportunity for many original designs. The lighting was an integral part of the effectiveness of these smaller groups and contributed largely to the beauty of the entertainment.

Vera Nemtchinova's Snowmaiden was an elfin bit of humor and Hilda Butsova's Seagull dance, while obviously suggested by "The Swan," which Pavlowa made famous, was arresting in its beauty. The Dance Classique by Vladmiroff might better have been named Dance Cossack because of its Russian virility. The delicious drollery of Wanya-Tanyka, an animated wooden-doll pantomime to the music of Liadow's Musix-box, was so infectious that it had to be repeated.

The finale was an Egyptian dance suite of many moods with Mordkin and Nemtchinova dancing admirably together. Mordkin displayed some of his old fire and abandon and Nemtchinova gave a wonderful exhibition of toe-dancing in a highly spiritualized version of an Egyptian princess.

The performances as a whole are notable for costuming and scenery. They are modern, colorful, brilliant and designed with a skilled knowledge and a highly developed artsense. The dancing reaches the heights of the old Russian ballet frequently enough to remind the onlooker of glories that have passed and to make him hope for a finer development in the future combination of the arts of the painter, the dancer and the musician.

FILM ROLE COMPLETED

Lionel Barrymore, now under contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has completed the role of Harlam Kelly in Edmund Goulding's production, "Women Love Diamonds."

CLEANING UP FILM

With only a few more days of actual camera work, Edward Sedgwick, directing William Haines, Sally O'Neil and Harry Carey in "Slide, Kelly, Slide" for M.-G.-M., is "cleaning up offshots" to meet his finishing schedule.

NEW PLAN FILED FOR SEWER EXIT

Outfall Beyond San Pedro Breakwater Proposed

State Board of Health Held Favorable to Scheme

Harbor City Screening Plant Averts Objections

Application to place the outfall of the county metropolitan sewer at a point 4000 feet beyond the San Pedro breakwater has been filed with the State Board of Health by County Sanitation Engineer Warren, it was announced yesterday.

Warren's action follows refusal several days ago by the State Board of Health to grant location of the outfall at White Point, following concerted objection by numerous interests.

Under the new plan, for which it was indicated full sanction will be given, a tunnel under the full length of San Pedro will be required in addition to powerful pumping stations.

Harbor interests have been carrying on an energetic campaign to locate the outfall at a point 17,500 feet beyond Terminal Island, the plan worked out by Dr. Charles Gilman Hyde, noted sanitation engineer.

Warren's latest plan has been shorn, however, of one of its previous objectionable features, the location of a screening plant at the foot of the government breakwater. Under the present specifications the screening plant would be located eight miles inland, at Harbor City.

LONG BEACH RAISES PSYCHOLOGICAL POINT

LONG BEACH, Jan. 7.—Location of the metropolitan sewer outlet at the Los Angeles-Long Beach breakwater is not detrimental to the health or welfare of Long Beach, in the opinion of Long Beach city officials. This was revealed at the City Council meeting this morning by Councilman H. S. Callahan, who declared that following a trip of city officials on an inspection tour of various proposed sites for the outfall they agreed that the breakwater location would be harmless to Long Beach.

Councilman Callahan's revelation came during an attack made by City Manager Henderson before the Council on the latter's fight to have the outlet located at the breakwater or at the Badger-avenue location on Terminal Island.

Councilman John T. Arnold concurred in Councilman Callahan's statement that the breakwater site will not prove harmful to Long Beach health, but declared his belief that the city may suffer because of the psychological effect of emptying sewage into the ocean anywhere near Long Beach.

Efforts will be made by city officials opposed to the breakwater site to interest the Federal government in the fight by pointing out that "location of the sewer outfall at the breakwater would leave the ships of the United States battle fleet wallowing in sewage."

Fear that the Navy Department will select another naval base, elsewhere on the coast and move its ships away from Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor in the event the sewer outfall is located in this vicinity has been expressed here several times.

White's Point or Hyperion, where the Los Angeles city outfall is located, are the logical sites for the metropolitan sewer outfall, City Manager Henderson told the Council.

Grand Larceny Charge Placed Against Katz

Granting the request of Dep. Dist. Atty Russell to issue a special commitment charging grand larceny in addition to one charging embezzlement, Municipal Judge Blake yesterday ordered Morris Katz, brother of Harry Katz, diamond broker mysteriously slain in 1924, held to answer before the Superior Court on the two felony counts growing out of the asserted theft of about $6000 worth of diamonds from Joseph Sydenberg. Judge Blake fixed bail in the sum of $5000.

Katz is specifically charged with having stolen gems entrusted to him by Sydenberg, a diamond merchant, on March 24, last. The prosecution contends Katz obtained the jewels on his representation that he had a prospective purchaser, to whom he wished to display the gems. Katz disappeared that night from his apartment in the same building where the elder Katz was murdered.

Attorney S. S. Hahn, representing Katz, contends that Katz lost the diamonds and left town in fear of the consequences. Katz was apprehended in Chicago a short time ago and returned to this city for trial.

Obsequies for Octogenarian to be Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. Rosa Piuma, for many years a resident of Southern California, who passed away at the Pasadena Hospital the 6th inst., following an illness of three weeks, will be conducted from St. Andrew's Church, Pasadena, Monday at 9 a.m., Reynolds and Eberle directing.

Mrs. Piuma, who was 85 years of age at the time of her death, came to this country from Italy in 1895. She was the mother of Giovanni Piuma, prominent merchant and former Italian consular agent, who was in Italy at the time of his mother's passing.

Mrs. Piuma leaves besides her son Giovanni, a daughter, Mrs. Maria Briano of Pasadena, a brother, Stephen Peluffo, pioneer merchant of this city, fourteen grandchildren and twenty great-grandchildren. Mrs. Piuma had been residing intermittently with her son and daughter for the past several years.

William J. Connor, 60 years of age, said to be treasurer of International Crusaders, Inc., a religious advertising concern with offices in the Merritt Building, was arrested yesterday at Eighth and Broadway by Detective Lieutenant Posner on suspicion of passing checks with insufficient funds. The asserted checks are said to total about $400. Connor is said to have used blank checks of the concern. He lives at the Hotel Wesley Terrace.

REVEL OFFERS EVELESS EDEN

Masquers Exile Fair Sex From Stage

But Girls Can Help This Way

ENTIRELY devoid of femininity, the Masquers' Revel to be staged at the Philharmonic Auditorium the evening of the 15th inst., will present a situation unusual in the annals of Los Angeles showdom.

Patterned after the famous Gambols of the New York Lambs' Club, the revel this year will be an Eveless Eden so far as the stage is concerned. No woman will appear behind the footlights, although there will be presented chorus and musical numbers wherein the men will impersonate the fairer sex. Among the members of the Masquers' Club who will don feminine attire are: Jack Mulhall, Arthur Rankin, Robert Agnew, Billy Sullivan, Raymond Hallor, Richard Walling, Gaston Glass, Don Lee, Earle Foxe, Halsom Battley, Creighton Hale and Charles Delaney.

Douglas MacLean, president of the actors' organization, will preside at the revel as Harlequin, and female members of the theatrical and screen profession will play an active part in the revel, although they will not be on the stage. They will officiate as hostesses under the leadership of Mrs. John Ford.

MUD HUT HER HOME IN AFRICA

Angeleno Who Gave Up Comfortable Life Here to Tell Natives of Distant Land Story of Gospel Writes About Wild Surroundings

The only white woman in a community of several thousand natives in the heart of Africa, Mrs. R. Glenn Morton, who with her husband, left Los Angeles last May to engage in missionary work in Bechuanaland, gave up her comfortable home here, with its running water, built-in bathtub, electric lights and a gas range, to live in a one-room mud hut, with thatched roof and her well of drinking water nearly a mile away, to tell the natives the story of the gospel.

In a letter to Mrs. H. E. Buchheim, who is connected with the Southern California conference of Seventh-Day Adventists, Mrs. Morton elaborates on the difference between what Los Angeles offers and what she faces out there. Her husband is the superintendent of Bechuanaland Mission.

"Not a thing have we heard yet from our eight precious boxes shipped from Wilmington last May, and we were promised them in three months," she says.

"It is beginning to look grave, as though the worst has happened to our things. Things are bare in my house, and maybe are destined to remain so. Think of our books, music, linens, bedding, and all the little personal things we value. We can be glad for the many little things which were in our trunks and with us.

GOAT IN WELL

"A goat fell into the mission well (which is about a mile or nearly so away) and drowned. I don't know how long he remained there. A little flat door is over it on the ground and it evidently tilted when Mr. Goat stepped on it. Our water girls have been going to the tribal well. Glenn dreams of a water system here some day. I think we could have it if we ever see the money in view. How lovely it would be to have a vegetable garden. All our water is carried in gasoline cans on native girls' heads.

"We have a fairly comfortable house and have picked up a little furniture, but have none of the little homey touches that our roving boxes might supply.

"Our mission, including three buildings (two dwelling houses and dispensary,) covers about four acres; and we now have it nicely fenced in, and are still waiting for the gates. Three burros brazenly entered my front yard this morning, but that's nothing in Kanye.

CONDITIONS DESCRIBED

"There are 16,000 inhabitants here in Kanye, they say, though you would never dream of it to look at the place. Kanye is the second largest native stadt in South Africa. So you see we have plenty of work before us."

In spite of the difference she finds in surroundings in Africa over what she enjoyed in Los Angeles, Mrs. Morton believes that eventually "I shall master the language and hope to do more work for the people. They live in little one-room mud houses, round, with thatched roofs, in filth and dirt. Many of the children even of some size wear no clothes at all. And oh, the dirty rags which some wear! How I'd like to make some of the little Sabbath-school children some clothes. Think I shall when my sewing machine comes—if it ever does."

SPEEDING BLAMED ON LOVE ROW

Romeo Tells Judge Quarrel With Girl Made Him Drive Car at Excessive Rate and Begs Court That Suitable Punishment be Inflicted

Earle Calkins, 526 Acacia street, Bell, has paraphrased an old saying to the effect that when love flies out the window, discretion goes with it.

He presented his own case to Municipal Judge Russill in support of his claims. He presented it so well that he convinced the judge there is a lot of truth in the old saw about the course of true love.

Calkins was taken before Judge Russill yesterday to face trial on a charge of speeding on East Florence avenue. When arrested he convinced the officer that he was not driving while intoxicated.

"I'm not drunk. I'm in love," he told the arresting officer.

Yesterday he repeated his story, enlarging on it materially. In telling it he admitted he was speeding.

"But you see, judge," Calkins explained, "my girl and I had quarreled and I didn't care what happened. I drove recklessly, I guess, as the officer said. In fact, the more I thought of it the madder I got and the madder I got the faster I drove."

Judge Russill was impressed and offered leniency in the form of a suspended sentence and a lecture. But Calkins demanded punishment. He expressed fear he might have a relapse and do it again.

"Well, the crash of your love affair might make you try suicide, so I'll deprive you of one method," Judge Russill said, as he ordered Calkins's car stored in the County Garage for thirty days.

"That's fine," agreed Calkins, "by that time I'll have another girl. I won't be back, I'll see to that. If I quarrel again I'll walk home."

Permit to Sell Stock Held Up by Mexico Law

Uncertainty as to whether the land laws of Mexico would affect the production of the guayule brush and its manufacture into rubber was partly responsible for the denial yesterday by the State Corporation Department of an application made by the American Rubber Corporation for permission to sell $50,000 worth of its stock in California.

It was stated at the local offices of the Corporation Department that a series of hearings disclosed that the corporation would have no assets in the United States, but planned to use the money derived from stock sales to establish a factory at Torreon, Mex.

The guayule plant became a subject of widespread interest when it was announced by American authorities recently that experiments conducted on Federal land proved it to be a feasible source of good rubber.

Women are employed as porters around the railroad stations in Germany and work right along with the men.

Workman Cites Attack Attempt; Suspects Union

J. Lindau of 3115 Malabar street, employed in an open shop cleaning and dyeing establishment at Bell, reported to Hollywood police that a rush had been made at him yesterday by men he believes are union sympathizers. As he came out of a tailor shop at Clinton and Virgil streets, he said, men jumped from two automobiles and came running toward him. He turned back toward the tailor shop and when the tailor came out, he said, the men returned to their cars and went away.

Lindau declared he had received a telephone message Thursday night, warning him to look out for trouble because he is a nonunion man.

The elite of the world of arts were present last night in the art gallery of the Hollywood Library at the opening of the exhibition of paintings by Innocenzo Daraio, local Italian artist, featured by an entertainment conducted by the International Artists Club under the direction of L. E. Behymer, president.

Kenny and H. Waters, a landscape of the home of Cecil B. De Mille and a number of interesting Italian screens.

The program of entertainment, arranged under the supervision of Paul Francisco Lupo, honorary president of the International Artists Club, and Miss Irene D'Arville, included operatic selections by Signor Giuseppe Lombardo, baritone from the Metropolitan Opera; Elvira Tanzi, accompanied by Mme. Clelia Guerrieri; Grace Ensminger Clauson and her orchestra; Mme. Real Mureal; Senorita Hortense Herrara, Spanish danseuse, and Dr. Feodor Kolin, conductor, composer and pianist.

DAUGHTER'S DEATH ONUS ON MOTHER

Aged Woman Confesses to Poisoning of Mrs. Nation; Despaired of Recovery

"I gave my daughter cyanide because her illness was growing worse, and then drank what was left in the cup to kill myself," Mrs. K. B. Rigg, 78 years of age, told Deputy Sheriff Croushorn and attendants in the psychopathic ward of the General Hospital yesterday when accused of administering the poison which caused the death of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Nation, last Wednesday.

Mrs. Nation was found dead in her home at 646 South Greenleaf avenue, Whittier, and her mother in an unconscious condition on the floor near the bed after Mrs. Nation's daughter, Mary, ran to a neighbor's house and spread the alarm.

Investigating officers reported that Mrs. Nation had been ill with rheumatism for several months.

A Coroner's inquest into Mrs. Nation's death yesterday resulted in a verdict of "death by cyanide poisoning administered by Mrs. K. B. Rigg, while in a despondent condition."

Doubt Cleared on Certificates for Veterans

Any possible doubt as to the authenticity of adjusted service certificates lacking an "A" number in connection with loans for World War veterans was cleared up yesterday by the receipt of a telegram to the local office of the United States Veterans' Bureau.

According to S. J. Garner, chief of personal service for the local office, Assistant Director Breining at Washington telegraphed that 100,000 of the adjusted service certificates were issued without the so-called "A" number. This, however, does not affect the validity of such certificates. Bankers, when such certificates are submitted for loan purposes, are advised by the Washington office to use the identification number on the lower left-hand corner of the certificate.

Services for Aged Angeleno Will be Today

Elizabeth M. Weaver, for more than forty years a resident of Southern California, died Thursday morning at her residence at 927 South Burlington avenue. Funeral services will be conducted in the chapel of the W. A. Brown Mortuary Parlors at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The deceased, who was 86 years of age, was the widow of George E. Weaver, hotel man of Los Angeles and Catalina Island. She was well known throughout Southern California for her charitable activities and work in the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Weaver leaves two sons, Clarence J. Weaver and Ralph M. Weaver, both of Los Angeles; a daughter, Mrs. W. G. Guild of Brookline, Mass., and a brother, F. A. Mosher of Los Angeles.

ORPHANAGE REPORTS

Los Angeles Home Lists Names of Wards Now Enrolled

The half-orphans are Loa May Donnellan, 5; James Donnellan, 10; Marjorie Donnellan, 12; John Donnellan, 8; Mary Payne, 6; Lucinda Layne, 3; George Roby, 10; Crawford McCormack, 9; Donald Haefer, 8; Walter Koerner, 3; Mary Koerner, 3; Rose Koerner, 5.

GOVERNMENT FIGHTS PINE BLISTER RUST

To stop the spread of the pine-blister rust, a tree disease prevalent in Washington, government experts are clearing currant and gooseberry bushes out of the forests of California and Oregon, S. N. Wyckoff, a timber-disease expert, said yesterday in a speech before the Science Club. The rust, he said, will not spread from pine to pine, but only from pine to bush and bush to pine, and if the bushes are removed the chain is broken. The sugar-pine forests of the Sierras are seriously endangered, and the step is considered necessary to save them, he said.

Damage Case Breeds 'Mice' in Metaphor

Judge Bishop and a jury in his Superior Court department were struggling all day yesterday with medical metaphors in the suit of Ida A. Rex for $25,000 damages against the Bimini Income Properties, Inc., which operates Bimini Baths.

Mrs. Rex charged that an attendant had wrenched her knee and that she is permanently lame as a result.

The defendant maintains that any injury suffered by Mrs. Rex did not result from anything done to her in its bathing resort. Instead, the defense is attempting to show by medical testimony that Mrs. Rex is afflicted with "mice on the knee" and they are "hatching."

"What's this about mice 'hatching'?" Judge Bishop wanted to know. It was explained to him that "mice on the knee" is a medical term descriptive of a disease and that the spread of this disease is referred to as "hatching."

"The attendant hurt one of my knees," Mrs. Rex related. "I said to her, 'Don't you do that to my other knee.' She said, 'Say, I've been working at this long enough to know what's good for your knees.' And then she did the same thing to my other knee."

The case is still on trial.

FILM MODE SHOW FOR EAST

Peggy Hamilton, "Times" Fashion Expert, Will Present Screen Modes to New York

Peggy Hamilton, fashion expert for The Times, left last night for New York City where she will stage a fashion show of Hollywood screen styles, beginning the week of the 18th inst.

Miss Hamilton is being sent to New York by The Times in recognition of the fact that largely because of the influence of the film styles created in Hollywood, Los Angeles is fast becoming one of the fashion centers of the world.

"Perhaps Los Angeles people do not fully realize the tremendous influence exerted in the world of fashions by the screen fashions of Hollywood," said Miss Hamilton. "And few people outside Hollywood realize the great effort and expense put forth by the Hollywood studios to create fashions in gowns. My fashion show in New York is for the purpose of showing the people in the East some of the screen fashions in reality. Women in the East and elsewhere, for that matter, see the stars wearing wonderful gowns in pictures and they have an idea they are not real—that they are camouflaged. They do not realize that the studios here have gathered fashion experts and designers from the four quarters of the globe, as it were, to create these gowns. We are going to show them some Hollywood screen fashions in real life."

Miss Hamilton's fashion show will be at the New York Biltmore. She will employ screen actresses to portray the gowns and she will wear some of them herself in the finale of her show. She took with her ten trunks full of gowns from the Hollywood studio wardrobes. The studios and designers that will be represented in Miss Hamilton's show include: Cecil B. De Mille, designer, Gilbert Adrian; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, designers, Rene Hubert, Andre-Ani and Ethel Smallwood; Universal Film Corporation, designer, Johann Mathieson; William Fox Studios, designer, Kathleen Kay; First National Studios, designer, Cora McGeachy; Paramount Pictures, designers, Howard Greer and Travis Banton; Inspiration Pictures, Inc., and Edwin Carew Productions.

This is the first time that Los Angeles has engaged to stage a fashion show in New York. Similarly, it was Peggy Hamilton who staged the first Los Angeles fashion show in Paris. The success that attended Miss Hamilton's fashion ventures in Europe was remarkable.

SHORT HAIR STYLE HELD PERMANENT

Hairdressers' Convention Ventures Prediction on Fashions of Women

That bobbed hair has come to stay and that every new coiffure devised will be based on the bobbed style are predictions in an address made before hairdressers and beauty culturists of California at a meeting in the banquet room of the Alexandria hotel yesterday.

Mme. Louise of Paris and Chicago was the guest of honor. She had journeyed to Los Angeles to give a special talk on the creation of styles and the future of the hair dressing fashions.

"The future of hairdressing will be a combination of the 'bob' and 'long hair,'" said Mme. Louise. "It will never be the long hair known in the past, which hung over the shoulders, but it will be bobbed on the one side and short on the opposite side, so that attractive coiffures can be executed."

Mme. Louise was the guest of honor of the National Hairdressers' Association, of which the Los Angeles Hairdressers' Association is one of the seventy-two locals.

EXPERIMENTING IMPROVES SETS

Users Can Make Changes for Better Reception

Legion Post Puts on Frolic Program

KHJ Will Broadcast Game Between Police and Firemen

BY DR. RALPH L. POWER

Radio fans rapidly are learning that their receiver needs considerable experimenting on their part to get the best reception consistently.

Many cases a shorter aerial, perhaps, also a smaller lead will bring more stations in your receiver, or the set may, perhaps, percolate better in some parts of the room. Try it in other parts of the room, or in other parts of the house.

The set will permit the change. Try the antenna coupling or try different wave traps. These are considered by individuals may themselves, and the time will come when radio engineers will have charted many parts of the city, or even the world, to locate receptive points.

HEAD AND LIVE SPOTS

Advices from Europe seem to indicate that Bude-in-Cornwall, a resort in the west of England, probably a radio paradise. At least radio fans can turn in reception at practically any time at on the air, and good music, with tone and volume, is said even during summer months of the continental stations. Only a few miles from Bude, is considered "dead spot" for reception in the United States there are good and poor ones for local long-distance reception. In the vicinity of the San Bernardino mountains, for instance, almost year reception of New England and Canadian stations, as well as South-American broadcasts, predominate, while spots in the immediate vicinity of the Grand Canyon are a negative from the standpoint of the broadcast enthusiast.

CHILDREN'S HOUR

The children's hour opened the KHJ broadcast at 6:30 last evening with Margaret Bond, violinist, playing two numbers, and Marguerite Bringham, "Nightingale," giving several popular songs.

Johnny Downs, the "All American Boy" of film and KHJ fame, was a favorite entertainer for the radio audience as was Bettimae Pfefferkorn, known as "Bobolink."

Dorothy Hufford, 6-year-old piano pupil of Mildred Bordin, played three selections, and three pupils of Winifred Pollard gave readings; June Starr Carroll, juvenile dancer and reader; Eleanor Seabloom, 9-year-old reader, and Billy Gardner, little 4-year-old reader.

Rev. C. Sidney Maddox, pastor of the West Adams Baptist Church, offered the evening Scripture reading and the 8 o'clock broadcast period opened with frost and weather reports and world-wide news.

The musical portion of the night's program included Hal Miller, tenor, with three numbers, "Mary," a Scotch ballad by Richardson; a Carrie Jacobs Bond number, "Nothin' but Love;" and "Ah, Moon of My Delight," from "In a Persian Garden," by Lehmann.

OLD-TIME FIDDLING

The treat also included old-time fiddling numbers by John Franklin, two groups of harp soldos by Grace Curry, and some of his own readings given by Police Sergeant Cyrus C. Johnson, known as the poet laureate of the police department.

This was followed by a frolic program lasting more than an hour and presented by Maywood Post 223 of the American Legion.

The saxophone quartet, composed of Virgil Malone, Lloyd Spence, Gus Gagle and Guy Phillips, gave several numbers and Gus Gables doubled on the entertaining by also offering a banjo solo.

Roy Carter with a saxophone number or two, harmonica selections by Shorty Walters and a piano selection by Guy Phillips also were part of the Legion program.

Between solos the Maywood Post drum corps performed and Bob Garrett's American Legion Orchestra, known also as the Harmony Boys, furnished the rest of the musical program which was a rollicking hour of entertainment.

STATION LITERATURE

KOIL, in Council Bluffs, which is often heard by Los Angeles DX hounds, has issued an attractive calender for the new year; KFNF, in Shenandoah, Iowa, has just published a clever little booklet which, while somewhat of an advertisement, contains photos of the radio staff, entertainers and studio; and KOAC at Corvallis, the station of the Oregon Agricultural College, has just sent out an illustrated leaflet of its broadcast schedule from the 3rd inst., to March 25.

B. O. Heller, owner of KFXB, a 500 watt set at Pine Knot, has just returned to Big Bear. His station, assembled with the old KWH as a nucleus, has been off the air for three months and it is reported the set is to be moved near Los Angeles soon where it will operate as a commercial station.

When KMIC opens in Inglewood Monday night its announcer will be Charlie Wellman at one time manager of KFWB.

Last Monday the setting-up exercises at KNX were discontinued and J. C. Casey transferred his activities to KMTR for the gym stunts at 7:30 each week-day morning. This change was recorded in the program schedule and in the radio news column of The Times on Tuesday. But other Los Angeles papers are still printing the old schedule.

At 1 o'clock today KHJ will come on the air with the football news from the Coliseum by direct line. Uncle John will officiate at the microphone and give the play by play results of the gridiron classic between the city police and fire departments.

University Girls Have Own Revue to Show Styles

Paris may be convinced that she is an authority on feminine costume but she has a rival in the co-eds at the University of California, Southern Branch, where the girls yesterday afternoon staged a fashion revue showing the proper attire for all occasions.

The event was a feature of the first Associated Women Students assembly of 1927 and was presented under the direction of Barbara Brinckerhoff, vice-president of the A.W.S. The display was arranged in five scenes, beginning and concluding with university campus views, and including "Afternoon at the Club," "Open House," and "The Dance." Each scene was prologued with a song, written by Gene Emerson and Dorothy Baker; Gail and Peggy Weaver did the singing. Twenty-five girls participated in the production.

LECTURES ON DECORATION

Using Barker Brothers' eleventh-floor studio as a "classroom," Edgar Harrison Wileman is giving a series of twelve Saturday-morning lectures from 9:30 to 12 o'clock on interior decoration under the auspices of metropolitan college of the University of Southern California.

DE MILLES SEPARATION CONFIRMED

Brother of Cecil Admits He and Wife "Expect to be Happier Apart"

William De Mille, motion-picture producer and director and brother of Cecil B. De Mille, yesterday admitted he and his wife have separated. The separation had been rumored for some time but the report was not confirmed until yesterday.

MRS. WILLIAM de MILLE

"Yes, it is true we have separated," said De Mille, who has just returned from New York to direct a picture at his brother's studio.

"The separation will be permanent. It is perfectly amicable. It is just one of those things that happen when husband and wife decide they will be happier apart."

WILLIAM de MILLE

The separation is said to have occurred some months ago. Mrs. De Mille is in New York with the two De Mille girls. De Mille intimated yesterday he does not anticipate any difficulty over the matter of custody of the children, in the event the separation continues to be "amicable."

De Mille said he does not know of any contemplated plans for divorce action.

Girl in Guilty Plea to Issuing of False Check

Penitent and pretty, Sonoma Harris, disappointed aspirant to film honors, whose efforts in that direction were handicapped by lack of clothes and other finery, yesterday was arraigned before Superior Judge Hardy and entered a plea of guilty to a charge of issuing a fraudulent check for $475.

S. S. Hahn, attorney for the girl, immediately after entering the plea of guilty asked hearing on application for probation. Judge Hardy set date for hearing on the application for the 21st inst.

Miss Harris, a recent arrival from the East, who found that screen fame does not fall to the lot of all who seek it, explained her action in issuing the bad check by stating that she expected a considerable amount of money from her parents but that it had not arrived.

The check, according to Mr. Hahn, was made to the order of the May Company, and was given for clothing and other furnishings.

Remove the spice bag, press through a puree sieve into a clean saucepan, reheat and serve with croutons.

MEAT IN MIDDLE AND OLD AGE

"Is beef harmful during middle and old age? If so, would not one be better without it in the 30's, and would you advise its elimination altogether? I eat beef, lamb or chicken, as a rule only once or twice a week. My diet consists of dark bread, cereals, bran, raisins, fruit and vegetables, with much uncooked salad and about a pint of milk a day. My weight is 120 pounds and for my height of five feet two and one-half inches is about right, I think. My blood pressure, 120, is below normal but is preferable to one too high, isn't it? I wish to keep fit, therefore I should be grateful as to your advice about meat and diet in general.—M."

If you are getting enough of the meat element of food—the proteins—you needn't eat meat itself if you don't want to, M. Fish, eggs, cheese and nuts can be taken instead. Some are apparently benefited by the elimination of all flesh foods, but others go on to ripe old age and continue to use it.

If you are getting enough of these protein foods, it seems to me you are eating according to our newer knowledge of nutrition now, so far as the natural foods are concerned, M. One of the chief things to remember for middle an dold age is that the food requirements are not so great as in youth and that not so much protein is needed, for growth has stopped, and not so much energy food for the physical activities are lessened.

As far as your blood pressure is concerned, it is not too low. It is a youthful pressure, but many keep it. I remember Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, a most lovely boy around 70, told us facetiously one day that he was worried: His blood pressure had been 118 for years, and now it was 120!

You are thinking of blood pressure as 100 plus your age, aren't you? While in reality the better rule is 100 plus half your age. Blood pressure, however, is a variable characteristic and may necessarily be higher in one than in another. Of course, when it gets higher than normal, it should be investigated to see if it is normal for you. Low pressure is not uncommon in those who have wasting diseases, but low blood pressure in itself is not considered a debar to insurance.

(We have an article on blood pressure. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope with request.)

LATE MARRIAGES

Miss M., aged 40, is engaged to be married and wants to know if it would be dangerous for her to bear children. It worries her and she sometimes thinks she will break her engagement. She is normal weight and asks for the article on special exercises for the abdominal muscles.

Stop worrying, Miss M! There should be no more danger for you now than there would if you were younger, if you take proper care of yourself and are under the care of a competent obstetrician.

The exercises will be beneficial, and if you do became pregnant, be careful not to gain more than twenty pounds, as the excess gain in fat on your own body will not be good for you or the babe.

ULCER ON THE STOMACH

E—Your symptoms—bleeding from your stomach and the awful pain in the pit of the stomach which is not relieved until you vomit—indicates the probability of a ulcer. You most certainly should be under the personal supervision of a skillful physician and should not be trying to cure yourself, E.

Meanwhile, until you can go to a physician, I suggest you take no food but milk, possibly one-half glassful every half hour.

Ulcer of the stomach is usually preceded by a prolonged period of acid stomach which is most often indicative of prolonged incorrect diet. We have articles on Hyperacidity and balanced diet which those of you who desire them may have by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope with request.

My Dear Followers: When sending for material which we offer you, please remember to inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must inclose 10 cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, not over 200 words, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible. If they are of general interest. Don't forget the stamped, self-addressed envelope if you expect me to send you the information I have offered.

Following the idea of various weeks that are nationally observed, we sometimes observe different Saturdays. The children do their own suggesting, and it pleases me to note their zest for ideas above mere play. ENGINEERS PLAN REPORT ON DAM

Experimental Arch Structure Discussed at Meeting

Tests Made at Site Near Fresno Explained

Complete Treatise on Subject Due in Few Months

A complete report on the scientific experiments made on the Stevenson Creek experimental arch dam, built near Fresno with the primary idea of studying methods of reducing the cost of arch dams without jeopardizing safety, will be made within the next few months, it was decided yesterday at a meeting of the Engineers' Foundation Committee that has been in charge of the work.

The meeting, which was held in the clubrooms of the Southern California Edison Company, was attended by outstanding civil engineers of the West, and a general discussion of the experiments conducted on the dam was held throughout the day.

The arch dam was constructed during the spring of 1926 at a cost of $110,000 supplied by private subscriptions made by power companies, investment bankers, consulting engineers and other technical organizations who realized the great benefits that would accrue from relatively cheap dam construction, making possible better flood control and more extensive irrigation.

SIXTY FEET HIGH

The dam, when finished, spanned an area of 140 feet at the top and was sixty feet in height. At the base it was seven and one-half feet in thickness, but at the thirty-foot height level it was thinned to two feet, and that thickness was maintained for the remaining thirty feet to the top.

As a part of the experiment, the dam was constructed entirely of concrete without the use of reinforcing steel. Ultimately, as water was allowed to gather to a higher level behind the structure, it was expected that it would break, and the breaking point was regarded as one of the outstanding points of the experiment. However, during the recent storms the water rose to the sixty-foot level and finally poured over the top of the dam in a three-foot sheet but the dam did not break; in fact, no damage from the flood was noted, it was declared at the meeting.

OBSERVATIONS TOLD

Before the flood waters reached the top of the dam, however, experts were daily making technical observations of the effects on the span as the water rose to various levels, starting with the ten-foot level. These observations, according to experts who talked at yesterday's meeting, will furnish valuable information for future construction of arch dams.

While nearly all of the funds originally subscribed for the experiment will be exhausted within the next few months with the issuance of the lengthy report to be made by the committee, plans for continuing the work were discussed at yesterday's meeting. It was stated that with the experiments so far advanced it would be money well expended to continue the construction of the dam to a height of 100 feet, or to gradually approach that elevation until a breaking point is reached. A complete theory of arch-dam construction, it was thought, might then be ascertained.

Prof. Charles D. Marks of Stanford University, chairman of the committee, conducted the meeting yesterday. H. W. Dennis, chief construction engineer of the Southern California Edison Company, introduced the resolution calling for a detailed report on the progress of the committee to date.

TRIO TO BE TAKEN EAST FOR TRIALS

Men Declared Members of Yegg Gang Held for Arrival of Officers

Three men, Harry L. Davis, 32 years of age, John R. Anderson, 24, and James Kelly, 20, arrested in Los Angeles by deputy sheriffs on December 24 when a quart of nitro-glycerin and numerous burglar tools were said to have been found in their possession, are wanted in eastern cities on accusations of being members of a nation-wide ring of safe crackers and highway robbers, Capt. James F. Townsend of the county burglary detail announced yesterday.

Davis, according to Capt. Townsend, is wanted in Detroit for highway robbery and also in Chicago by Federal authorities for questioning regarding numerous safe robberies.

Anderson is wanted, Townsend said, in Charlotte, N. C., for asserted theft of government bonds and forgery.

The other man, Kelly, is a fugitive from the Missouri State penitentiary from which he escaped while serving a sentence for highway robbery, according to deputy sheriffs.

All the men will be returned to the eastern cities where they are wanted as soon as officers arrive to take them in custody.

Deputy Sheriffs Jack Ousby and M. R. Barner arrested the trio. Information found in their belongings also led to the arrest of Frank Walsh and his wife, Mable Walsh, in St. Louis as asserted members of the ring. Walsh, also known as Burns, was taken to Chicago for questioning in connection with a shot-gun murder.

George Creel Gives Address in Crown City

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Jan. 7.—George Creel, who conducted the American Bureau of Public Information during the World War, spoke at the Shakespeare Club under the auspices of the Women's Business and Professional Association of Pasadena tonight.

Creel intimated the United States Supreme Court is slow, that bathing suits are shorter than they used to be, and that elections in Pennsylvania are not as white as snow.

In England, he said, if a boy isn't bright they put him in the army or the church. Here they send him to Congress.

MAN ACCUSED AS CATTLE RUSTLER

Bernardo Bustamante

CHARGE LAID OF RUSTLING MAVERICKS

Statute of Early Days to be Invoked in Hearing of Cattle-Lifting Case

A modern version of the old and romantic crime of cattle rustling was related yesterday by Brand Inspector Mace of the State Cattle Protection Service, following the arrest of Bernardo Bunstamante, 39 years of age, of Burbank, on suspicion of grand larceny.

Mace declares that Bustamante, equipped with a modern truck under the cover of night, visited several dairy ranches in the vicinity of Bellflower and departed with seven veal calves. The calves, Mace asserted, were sold to a slaughterhouse in San Fernando Valley.

When R. V. Cocke of Bellflower reported the loss, Mace and Deputy-Sheriff Strong, veteran horse wrangler and nemesis of cattle thieves in the days before all the cowboys donned fancy clothes and moved to Hollywood, traced the calves to the packinghouse Thursday.

They promised to return again yesterday with Cocke to identify the cattle and asked the proprietor to hold Bustamante should be return before they did.

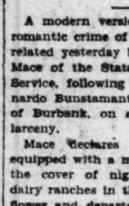
With his truck filled with more calves for sale, Bustamante visited the slaughterhouse again early yesterday, it was asserted, and tried to escape when an attempt was made to take him into custody, but was captured by two butchers who chased him across an alfalfa field waving their long knives while their white aprons trailed in the breeze according to Mace.

Detective-Lieutenants Newstetter, Berger and Brunte later took charge of the defendant and placed him in the County Jail. The case was then turned over to Mace for further action.

Bustamante will be tried under a statute of 1859 making it a felony to steal cattle. The calves were small and not worth more than a total of $50, according to Mace, who pointed out that were it not for the cattle rustling law, Bustamante could be prosecuted only on a misdemeanor charge. The penalty for cattle rustling is from one to ten years in the State prison. The maximum penalty for a minor crime is $500 fine or six months imprisonment, or both.

Mae Murray's Contract With Metro Broken

The contract binding Mae Murray, film actress, and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios is broken, studio officials related yesterday. It was intimated the actress had been temperamental a little once too often.



MAE MURRAY

Miss Murray had signed a contract for four pictures and had made one. Things had ran none too smoothly during production, it is said. Miss Murray, given the story for her second picture, refused it and took a train for New York, Europe-bound.

Upon her return to this country there were conferences with studio officials. They ended in severance of the contract. Miss Murray recently stated she has several offers from European producers.

Funeral Today at Long Beach for ex-Iowan

LONG BEACH, Jan. 7.—Funeral services for Jurgen B. Kohnke, for thirty years a prominent farmer and stockman of Hull, Iowa, and for the past ten years a retired capitalist of Long Beach, will be at the Patterson and McQuilkin Chapel here tomorrow at 10 a.m., with interment at the Forest Lawn Mountain Rim Cemetery of Glendale.

Mr. Kohnke leaves his widow, Lizzie Kohnke, and one son, Otto, two brothers, Henry Kohnke of Gault, and Claus Kohnke of Lodi, Cal. He had a wide circle of friends in and around Los Angeles.

He died on the 4th inst., after a lingering illness at his home, 1425 Eighth street, Long Beach. He was a native of Hanover, Germany, served in the German army from 1874 to 1877 and came to the United States in 1879. He was 74 years of age.

PASTOR'S CASE THOUGHT DEAD

Ormiston, and the other codefendants, activities in connection with the case remained at a standstill yesterday at the District Attorney's office.

Dep. Dist.-Attys. Dennison and Murray, in charge of the State's case against the evangelist and others, yesterday scoffed at the story of a Muskogee (Okla.) convict that he was one of the kidnaping conspirators against Mrs. McPherson and other prominent Angelenos, in spite of reports that investigators were awaiting documentary proof of the man's asserted statements.

Persons who have followed closely the McPherson case patiently await Monday's court action when Mr. Keyes is expected to announce the fate of the prosecution against the evangelist. On the 10th inst., Ormiston is to appear before Superior Judge Stephens for arraignment on an indictment accusing him of a felony as the outgrowth of the evangelist's disappearance from Venice.

When Ormiston appears in court Mr. Keyes or one of his deputies is to appear also, either to ask a dismissal of the charges against the radio man the evangelist, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman, self-confessed perpetrator of the Carmel "Miss X" hoax, or to insist upon the arraignment of Ormiston and the filing of informations against Mrs. McPherson and the others.

It is expected, however, that Mr. Keyes will ask a dismissal of all of the charges, bringing an end to the case of the Angelus Temple leader.

No matter what Mr. Keyes's ultimate decision will be, Mrs. McPherson plans to leave Tuesday on the first leg of her speaking tour of the country.

NEW RULING ENTERED ON LIQUOR ACT

Appellate Court Decides Complaints Must Assert Illegal Use Intended

An outstanding interpretation of certain phases of the Wright Act was handed down by Justice Houser of the Second District Court of Appeal here yesterday when he reversed the conviction of Andy Marzola on charges of maintaining a place where intoxicating liquor was manufactured and kept.

The Appellate Court ruled that because it was not asserted that intoxicating liquor was manufactured or kept for beverage purposes or for barter, sale or other commercial uses the information filed against the defendant failed to state an offense or support a charge of Wright Act violation.

The ruling applies only to instances where the maintenance of a nuisance is charged under the Wright Act because of the manufacture or possession of liquor. It establishes the rule of the Appellate Court to be that such uses the unlawful purpose for which the liquor is to be used must not only be charged in the indictment or information but additional evidence reasonably raising the inference of illegal disposition must be presented to make a conviction valid.

Ratification of Turkish Treaty Protested Here

Nearly 200 persons gathered last night at Patriotic Hall to hear addresses delivered by Judge Thomas P. White, Marshall Stimson and Rev. W. B. Stevens, against the ratification of the Lausanne Treaty by the United States Senate. The occasion was a mass meeting sponsored by the American Committee for the Consideration of the Lausanne Treaty. Following the addresses the meeting voted to present a resolution to the President and the Senate denouncing the treaty as "humiliating and offensive to the honor of the United States, and as negative to the humanitarian work of the people of the United States done in behalf of the unfortunate peoples under the Turkish yoke."

It was brought out by the speakers that ratification of the Lausanne Treaty would nullify the solemn pledges of our government that Armenia should never again be placed under Turkish control. The speakers also pointed out that the attitude of Turkey in the past gives no reason for confidence in the Turkish program and the carrying out of that program.

J. T. George was general chairman of the meeting; Judge Thomas P. White, presided.

Chauffeur Will Face Charge of Young Heiress

Clyde Clark, chauffeur, will face a charge on February 7 of a statutory offense aginst Natalie Williams, reputed to be heiress to an estate worth $1,000,000.

Following his arraignment yesterday on the charge before Judge Hardy, at which time the girl told her story, Clark's bond was increased from $2500 to $7500 by the court. He had been informed, the court said, that the accused man was planning to forfeit his bond and leave the city. R. C. Hunting, attorney for the chauffeur, protested the increase and said last night that he will ask for a change of venue.

Bandit Robs Pair of Cash and Diamonds

Harry Lang, 622 Alvarado street, and his companion, Mrs. Mabel Feybert, 2820 Leeward avenue, were the victims of a lone bandit who held them up at Seventh and Catalina streets late last night.

BRUNETTES HAVE THEIR INNING

Nearly All of Wampas Stars Are Dark

Both Sides of the Question

Mary McAllister, blonde, and Helene Costello, brunette.

GENTLEMEN who prefer blondes are going to be slightly out of luck at the sixth Wampas frolic and ball in the Ambassador Auditorium on February 17, it appeared yesterday.

A close inspection of the tresses that adorn the shapely heads of the thirteen embryo stars who are to have their film coming-out parties at the ball revealed that the blondes among them are outnumbered by better than two to one.

There are just four blondes in the group, either decided or otherwise. The other nine rank without dispute in the brunette class.

California's two native daughters in the group of thirteen are brunettes. So are New York's two entries. Kentucky, however, contributes two blondes, while Canada mothered the third and Utah the fourth. Massachusetts, Alberta, Cal., Iowa, Oklahoma and France furnish the other brunettes.

FINANCIER ON WAY TO PASADENA

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

PASADENA, Jan. 7. (Exclusive)—Paul M. Warburg of New York, president of the advisory council of the Federal Reserve Board and one of this country's prominent bankers, will arrive in Pasadena tomorrow in his private car, accompanied by his family to spend the winter here at the Hotel Vista del Arroyo.

Mr. Warburg, with his brother, Felix Warburg, was formerly a member of the New York banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., of which Otto Kahn is the head, but resigned from this connection when President Wilson appointed him a member of the Federal Reserve Board. In 1918, he retired from this post and was made president of its advisory council.

EIGHT HUNDRED AT REUNION

Films Represented Among Hollywood High Alumni; Memorial Unveiling Postponed

Among the 800 alumni of Hollywood High School who went back to look the old place over at the annual reunion yesterday were many who have won distinction in various walks of life, ranging from the business world to cinema stardom.

The school is particularly well represented on the screen, three of its former graduates having been chosen as Wampas baby stars for 1927. They and Gladys McConnell, Mary McAllister and Barbara Kent, while Fay Wray, another recent graduate, is also soon to attain stardom.

Plans for the unveiling of a beautiful World War Memorial, designed by Mrs. Julia Bracken Wendt, one of America's foremost women sculptors, were postponed as the casting of the piece could not be completed in time for the ceremony. In its stead, however, was exhibited a huge photographic reproduction of the memorial, taken from the miniature model. It is to be a bas-relief, of heroic size, and will be placed in the foyer of the new Memorial Auditorium. The unveiling rites likely will not take place until June, when annual commencement exercises are conducted. Principal William H. Snyder announced.

The memorial will be dedicated to fourteen former students of the school who are known to have perished in the World War. Eleven were killed in action and three died later as the result of having been gassed. No names will appear on the memorial, the committee explained, lest the list might be incomplete. However, it is planned to hang a life-size painting of each man in the foyer at a later date.

In his annual message, Principal Snyder announced that 62 per cent of the 1926 graduating class had entered college, an unusually good record, he said. The usual custom of a vaudeville show presented by former students of the school was changed this year and a special performance of "The Boomerang" was given by high school players. The play was first presented during the Thanksgiving holidays and it was greatly enjoyed by yesterday's audience.
